GRAND JURY, WITH 12 INDICTED FOR FRAUD IN PRIMARY, TO RESUME INQUIRY

Charges of Judge Grimm, That His Vote Was "Cut Down" in Count, and of Ernest Patillo, Negro, That He Was "Counted Out," Remain to Be Heard.

BOND FURNISHED BY THOSE INDICTED

Seven Group of Six Served in Fifteenth Precinct of 26th Ward, Where Place on G. O. P. Committee Is Being Contested.

The Grand Jury investigating violations of the election laws will reconvene at 2 p. m. tomorrow to resume its inquiry into frauds in the primary, Aug. 3, having examined and recounted the ballots in two precincts last week and having indicted all of the election officials in each precinct, 12 altogether, on a charge of making a false count and return, a felony.

The Grand Jury still has before it the complaint of Circuit Judge Hugo Grimm, made in writing to Circuit Attorney McDaniel, that in precincts which he specified his vote in the primary had been "cut down" in favor of some of his opponents. Judge Grimm indicated precincts in the Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventeenth, Eighteenth and Nineteenth wards.

The investigation also may deal with the charge of Ernest Patillo, negro, that he had been "counted out" in favor of Frank Slater in the race for member of the Republican City Committee from the Seventeenth Ward.

The Grand Jury which Tuesday indicted the three Republicans and three Democrats who served as election officials in the Fifth precinct of the Sixth Ward, at 19 South Tenth street, Friday took the same action against the three Republicans and three Democrats who conducted the primary election in the Fifteenth precinct of the Twenty-sixth Ward, at 4847 Easton avenue.

Indicted Men Furnish Bond.

These men voluntarily appeared yesterday morning before Circuit Judge Hall and each furnished a bond for $800, all of which were signed by Michael J. Whalen, Democratic City Committeeman from the Twenty-sixth.

The men indicted in the Twenty-sixth Ward are as follows:

Samuel F. Jones, 5123 Wells avenue; Republican judge.

Dr. Raymond C. Shaffer, 1728A North Union boulevard; Republican judge.

Otto E. Giesler, 5203 Paulian place; Republican clerk.

Peter G. Kenny, 5033 Wells avenue; Democratic judge.

Roland O. Wehrheim, 5210 Paulian place; Democratic judge.

F. L. Shelton, 5214 Paulian place; Democratic clerk.

These men are charged with having made a false count and return in their precinct of the votes cast for I. Joel Wilson, an assistant in the office of Prosecuting Attorney Sidener, and Robert D. Claxton, opponents for member of the Republican City Committee from the Twenty-sixth, Wilson winning by 19 votes on the face of the returns.

Charges of fraud in the Twenty-sixth Ward case were taken to the Grand Jury for Claxton by former State Senator Alroy S. Phillips, his attorney, who submitted all of the evidence gathered to support quo warranto proceedings instituted in the Circuit Court to oust Wilson from the City Committee, of which he has been a member since 1914, being now in his fourth two-year term.

False Return Charged.

Claxton charged that in the Fifteenth precinct, although 158 votes were credited to Wilson and 10 to Claxton, in fact only 139 votes were cast, 71 for Claxton and 68 for Wilson, and that 18 ballots of men who did not vote, that of a man who voted the Democratic and eight of persons who had removed from the precinct, were counted for Wilson.

When Wilson learned Friday afternoon that the Grand Jury had asked Judge Hartmann for instructions as to their powers to indict election officials and committeemen, he arranged with Chief Deputy Sheriff Charles Weinbrenner to have the Fifteenth precinct men at Wilson's office yesterday morning in the event they were indicted.

He also arranged with Whalen

BOYCOTT AGAINST PRODUCE OF FARMERS WHO BAR HUNTING

Collinsville Workers Put on "Unfair List" Merchants Who Buy From Them.

Collinsville workingmen are putting on the "unfair list" merchants who buy produce from farmers who do not permit hunting on their lands. A resolution has been put through the miners' union locals with this in view and will be brought up before the Central Trades and Labor Council.

The workmen claim they want to cut down their cost of living by getting rabbits and quail. The farmers claim that so much damage has been done by indiscriminate shooting over their farms that they will permit no more trespassing. The merchants claim they are caught between two millstones on the proposition, as they are threatened with loss of custom if placed on the "unfair list," and bound to lose custom if they refuse to buy farm produce. They add that there is another angle, the public's, and that they are anxious to get all the food they can from the farms.

Other business and property owners view with alarm the possibility of farmers being barred from Collinsville.

PASSENGERS MAY PUT FEET ON SEATS ON PENNSYLVANIA LINE

This Rule Applies, However, in Case of Vacancies After all Passengers Are Seated.

Passengers on the Pennsylvania Railroad may turn seats over and place their feet upon the cushions, provided there are enough seats. This question was decided at a meeting of the operating staff of the railroad recently. The decision was as follows:

"While of course there is not a whole seat for every passenger, trainmen should see that seats are not turned over and an undue amount of space monopolized by any one passenger. To go further than this, however, and forbid the turning over of seats, even when there is plenty of room, is unnecessary.

"After all passengers have been provided with seats, conductors will exercise their judgment in permitting the turning over of seats. Passengers should be required to exercise proper care to prevent the soiling of seats in placing their feet thereon."

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MOBILE, Ala., Nov. 13.—Mrs. Ellen Carey of Decatur, Ala., was awarded $500 damages today by the Supreme Court against the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Co. because a clock in the Union Station at Decatur was slow. The body of a son of Mrs. Carey was on a train going to Hartselle, Ala. The clock in the station showed 6:23, and the train left at 6:30 o'clock, but when the woman went to the depot by the railroad time the train was gone, with the body of her son. She sued for $3000.

DISSENSION OVER ARMY PROMOTION RECOMMENDATIONS

Older Officers, Dissatisfied With List as Sent to Senate, Accuse Pershing of Favoritism.

TRADING WITH GEN. MARCH CHARGED

Superseded Men Say "Merit System" Has Been Utilized to Perpetuate Certain Men in High Posts.

By the Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—As the time draws near for the assembling of Congress in December, echoes of a bitter controversy raging in the inner circles of the War Department are beginning to come to the public ear.

The dissension is over the list of general officers which President Wilson sent to the Senate for confirmation last July, and which will be one of the first matters to come to the attention of that body at the coming session. These appointments, which fill practically one-half the entire roster of general officers, are the first to be made under the so-called merit system of promotion, created by the army reorganization act of 1920. Under that system, general officers are supposed to be chosen for their special fitness, instead of by seniority as heretofore, and a board of generals, headed by Gen. John J. Pershing, was named to make the selections.

The list which the board prepared, and which the President sent to the Senate, contains the names of officers to be raised to the rank of Major-General, and 23 to the rank of Brigadier-General. The chief cause of controversy is the fact that the board, in selection of Brigadier-Generals, jumped over some 25 men who held the rank of Major-General during the war, and many of whom commanded divisions in actual conflict in France, and selected in their stead a group of younger men, no one of whom attained higher than the rank of Brigadier-General during the war. Bitterness is accentuated by the fact that 11 of the 23 proposed new Brigadiers were either in the headquarters of Gen. Pershing at Chaumont, France, or otherwise were closely in touch with the Commander in Chief in the Expeditionary Force.

Trading System Is Charged.

The charge is now made by the older officers, who have been superceded, that Gen. Pershing, by a system of trading with Chief of Staff Peyton C. March, who also has several of his principal subordinates in the list, has used the new "merit" system to perpetuate his particular "pets" in high positions in the army.

In defense of the board's selections, it is claimed that the young men selected as Brigadiers are the most brilliant officers in the army. They were the men picked out as chiefs of administrative divisions, or for important field commands of the expeditionary army at the outbreak of the war, and who, without exception, served through to the finish, and established remarkable records of efficiency.

They include William Lassiter, chief of artillery of the expeditionary army; Ernest Hinds, in command at the port of embarkation at Hoboken; Hanson E. Ely, who won special distinction as commander of the Twenty-eighth Infantry at the battle of Cantigny and who later commanded a brigade; Johnson Hagood, chief of staff of the Service of Supply in France; Dennis E. Nolan, chief intelligence officer in France and commander of a brigade in the field; Fox Conner, chief of operations at general headquarters, and Malin Craig, chief of staff of an army corps.

The controversy, which is certain to arise in the Senate over confirmation of these appointments, is rendered particularly interesting by the fact that there is involved in it the personal conflict between three of the best known men in the army, Gen. Pershing, Major-General Leonard Wood and Brigadier-General Clarence R. Edwards. The control of the reorganization of the army, which is sure to take place under the new administration, is one of the issues at stake.

Pershing Satisfied With Post.

According to his friends here, Gen. Pershing has no desire to be Secretary of War.

Pershing now holds the rank of General of the Army, carrying with it a salary of $13,500, which is $1500 more than a member of the Cabinet receives.

More than that, he holds the appointment for life, with a salary of $10,000 even after retirement from active duty. In order to take the position of Secretary of War Pershing would have to resign his commission.

What Pershing does want, he has

STEAMER WITH 250 IMMIGRANTS AT RAIL HITS ANOTHER SHIP

Skipper Jumps From Bridge Into Midst of Panic-Stricken Throng.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—As her passengers, 250 of whom were immigrants, lined the rails for a glimpse of New York's skyline, the Snapish royal mail steamship Montserrat collided today with the Mallory line freighter San Marcos. The vessels, moving in from quarantine, were under the lee of the Statue of Liberty.

The Montserrat was beached on the Brooklyn shore before she sank. The San Marcos, her bow smashed in, made her pier in safety.

Seized with fear of disaster, the immigrants dashed for life rafts and boats. Capt. Muserla, a skipper in the Spanish service for more than a quarter of a century, called for full speed, turned the vessel toward the Brooklyn shore, jumped from the bridge into the excited crowd and restored order.

Others of the ship's officers, with Ramon Manuel, Villova Nova, Spanish consul at Vera Cruz, gave assistance to Capt. Muserla by taking charge of lifeboat and raft stations and prevented immigrants from jumping overboard, except one man.

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 13.—Radio calls for assistance were received today from the American steamer Cranford, which reported that she was 70 miles east of Cape Henry with three of her boilers out of commission and that she was being blown south rapidly by a heavy gale. BILLINGS' PROSECUTOR WOULD NOT NOW VOTE TO CONVICT HIM

San Francisco Attorney Makes Statement Based on "My Present Knowledge of Case."

By the Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 13.—J. F. Brennan, San Francisco attorney, who, as assistant district attorney, prosecuted Warren K. Billings, serving a life sentence with Thomas J. Mooney for murder in connection with a Preparedness day bomb explosion here, said today he would not now vote for Billing's conviction.

Brennan's statement was made following announcement yesterday that Police Officer Draper Hand, who gathered witnesses for the prosecution, told Mayor James Rolph the prosecution was a "frame-up."

"If Hand admits the witnesses were framed, it probably is a fact," Brennan said. "I took witnesses the police department furnished me and tried to make a case against Billings. Their stories, told to me after interviews with the police, seemed inconsistent in many points and incredible in others. Hand had full charge of these witnesses.

"Were I on the Billings jury, with my present knowledge of the case I would not vote for his conviction."

HAZING AT ANNAPOLIS MUST BE STOPPED, DANIELS SAYS

Any Number of Midshipmen Necessary Will Be Dismissed to End Practice.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Declaring that the Navy Department would "go the limit" to uphold the authorities of the Naval Academy at Annapolis in their efforts to stamp out hazing at the institution, Secretary Daniels announced today that instructions had been issued that no hazing would be tolerated and that any number of midshipmen necessary would be dismissed to end the practice.

"I would rather have 800 men at Annapolis who can obey orders than 2200 who cannot," said Daniels. "The presence of insubordinate midshipmen is not desired. Men who are being trained to give orders must first of all learn to obey."

One midshipman already has been expelled, the Secretary announced.

BOLSHEVIKS BREAK ALL WRANGEL DEFENSE LINES IN THE CRIMEA

General's Army Is Attacked From Rear and His Forces Are Reported to Be in a Desperate Situation.

80,000 REFUGEES TRY TO QUIT SEBASTOPOL

American Destroyer to Stay Until Last Moment After Taking on the American Colony.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 14.—General Wrangel, with the members of his Government, according to the Echo de Paris, has boarded the French warship Waldeck-Rosseau at Sebastopol.

By the Associated Press.

SEBASTOPOL, Nov. 13.—The forces of Gen. Wrangel, in the Crimea are in a most desperate situation, the Bolsheviki having broken through all the lines of defense and are now attacking the Wrangel army in the rear.

The evacuation of Sebastopol probably will be effected by Sunday, according to officers close to Gen. Wrangel, quoting him to that effect.

Thousands of refugees, panic-stricken, fill the streets and wharves of Sebastopol. Ships of many nations are hurriedly taking refugees aboard and the American Red Cross is loading its supplies. Rear Admiral Newton McCully, commander of the Adriatic naval forces in Russian waters, will stay at Sebastopol until the last moment with a small guard on the American destroyer Overton. The American colony has been taken aboard the Overton.

It is reported the Bolsheviki have sent an ultimatum to Gen. Wrangel demanding the unconditional surrender of the "white" army.

The cruiser U. S. S. St. Louis sailed from Constantinople for Sebastopol this morning to take a full load of the refugees. Gravest fears are now felt for Gen. Wrangel's army. With the entrance to the Crimea in the hands of the Bolsheviki, military observers say Wrangel's position in the Crimea is untenable.

Sebastopol Refugees Turned Away at Constantinople.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—Sebastopol is being evacuated and British authorities are requisitioning ships in Constantinople to take refugees from that city, says a dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. from the Turkish capital.

Eighty thousand persons in Sebastopol seek transportation from the city, says a Constantinople dispatch to Reuters, Ltd. The dispatch, which was filed yesterday, says the number of ships available is limited, and that it is probable it will be impossible for more than 20,000 to embark. The first boatloads of refugees have arrived at Constantinople, it is said, but were not permitted to land, as housing facilities are limited and food is scarce. Their plight is declared to be very grave.

The allied fleets, it is stated, are preparingto aid in the evacuation of certain districts in the Crimea.

Moscow Reports Wrangel Forces in Disorderly Retreat.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—Reviewing the Crimean military situation, a Moscow message says: "After fierce battles, in which much booty was captured, and after breaking through a number of fortified positions, the Red troops are penetrating Crimea. The second cavalry corps is already advancing in the peninsula on a wide front; the enemy is retreating in disorder, blowing up military stores, burning food and revenging itself on the population."

General Wranget has telegraphed Maj. Gen. Charles V. Townshend, who commanded the British forces at Kut-El-Amara in 1915, asking him to take command of Wrangel's forces in Crimea. General Townsend is considering the matter.

PROGRESS MADE IN NEGOTIATING NEW JAPANESE TREATY

Whether Exclusion of Laborers Shall Be Affected Said to Be Regarded as Question of Expediency.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Baron Shidehara, Japanese Ambassador, had another conference today with State Department officials regarding the treaty between the United States and Japan growing out of the adoption of the alien land law in California and it was understood that the end of the negotiations was near.

Whether the exclusion of Japanese laborers from the United States shall be affected by a provision of the new treaty or through a decree promulgated by the Japanese Government, is said here to be regarded not as a question of principle, but solely of expediency.

The American position is that the inclusion of such a provision in the treaty would facilitate ratification of the pact by the Senate, but the Japanese position is that the treaty would be more likely to receive popular support in Japan if it did not contain such a provision.

While there will be no naturalization provision in the treaty, it is understood that the Japanese now in America, will be guaranteed equality of treatment with other aliens in the same treaty relations, and complaint of discrimination will be met by a declaration that any restrictions imposed upon either Japanese in America, or Americans in Japan, shall be reciprocal. In other words Americans in Japan will be treated just as are the Japanese in America, and vice versa.

PANAMA CANAL MADE PROFIT OF $2,387,599 IN LAST YEAR

Operating Expenses Were $6,548,272 and Receipts $8,935,871 — Old Deficit of $2,231,091 Remains.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—The Panama Canal is now fully self-sustaining and, had there been no change in the rules of measurement, such as recently made, would show a comfortable surplus over cost of operation, according to the current canal record, the official publication of the zone. The statement does not show the exact proportion of tolls paid by American ships nor indicate the deficiency, if any, that would have to be met from the national treasury if American craft were exempted.

During the last fiscal year total operating expenses were $6,548,272 and receipts $8,935,871, leaving a profit of $2,387,599. This does not take into account interest on capital invested, amounting to $367,151,696, representing the entire cost of the canal.

The total cost of operation of the canal since it was opened has been $36,657,766 and total revenues to the end of the past fiscal year $34,657,766, less certain deductions on account of refunds of tolls which would make the deficit on that score $2,231,091, instead of a surplus of $2,878,812, had the original rules of measurement been adhered to.

Congestion at Havana, Cargo Went on to Buenos Aires, Back to New York, to Baltimore, to Savannah.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—The name of Representative James A. Gallivan of Massachusetts was brought into testimony offered here today in the Walsh Committee inquiry into the affairs of the United States Shipping Board.

Robert E. Kline, special representative of the board's supply and sales department, was testifying as to methods used in disposal of surplus material. In the course of his testimony he described an effort on the part of his department to procure what he said was an advantageous contract for disposal of scrap material. The bid for its sale on a "six-month call basis" at a rate of 15 cents a ton over the market price was accepted, rejected again and once more held up because an official in Washington discovered he acted without authority, he said.

In the interim another form of bid had been made. The second bidder alleged he had been discriminated against, and, according to the witness, the board got from Gallivan a telegram stating that the bidder, one of his constituents, had not been treated fairly.

The first telegram, the witness said, was followed by another, which he termed "sharp, demanding an investigation and threatening to take the matter to the floor of Congress."

Hastened Consideration.

The insistence of Gallivan, the witness said, no doubt caused the home office of the board to give the controversy over the scrap quicker consideration. At any rate, he said he forwarded to the board a complete file of the case. The delay in determining the successful bidder, however, cost the Government money, he declared, for at that time, last June and July, the market for scrap material was much higher than it now is.

From shipyard materials and contests over contracts, the hearing in its closing hours today drifted back to operations.

James McGregor of Baltimore, now general manager for the South Atlantic Maritime Corporation, but formerly district agent for the Shipping Board at Savannah and Wilmington, was called.

He related instances of delays to Shipping Board vessels, alleged interlocking operation organizations, delays in repairs to ships and congested harbors, which he said cost the Shipping Board money. He admitted, however, that incidents similar to those he described had occurred with private companies, but not to such an extent as they did with the Government operations.

Shipment of Resin.

He told of a shipment of resin from Savannah to Havana, which could not be unloaded at the latter port because of congestion. Its consignee raised a vigorous complaint, and he was paid for the resin by the steamship company which carried it, with a check on Shipping Board funds.

The resin went with the ship from Havana to Buenos Aires, thence back to New York, thence to Baltimore and back to Savannah, where it was sold at a loss. The Shipping Board was reimbursed, but the point of the witness was that its funds were used without proper authority.

Methods of Shipping Board operators operating cargoes for their own vessels when board vessels operated by another line were available was criticised by the witness. He alleged that this system caused a tie-up of cotton at Savannah last fall.

New Fruits Introduced at Round Table Club Banquet

Dr. David Fairchild, Plant Explorer for U. S., Contributes to Menu With Products of China, Japan, West Indies and Africa.

The Round Table Club which gives bi-monthly banquets, usually in the St. Louis Club, to which it invites a distinguished guest as speaker, entertained a guest last night at the club who not only brought a major share of his own dinner with him, but large enough portions to give each of his 75 hosts a dish also.

He was Dr. David Fairchild of Washington, plant explorer for the United States Department of Agriculture. The portions of the menu which he furnished were Chinese jujubes, African pistaches, West Indian yams, dasheens, chayote and Japanese persimmons — names strange to the American housewife's market list, yet each American-grown and Dr. Fairchild hopes soon to be so common here that children will cry for them.

As his designation indicates, it is Dr. Fairchild's work to go into far parts of the world seeking vegetables and fruits which may be imported to America and grown here commercially for use on American tables. It is the only way, he believes, in which the nation will be able to intensify production to provide for the 400,000,000 people who may inhabit the United States 50 years hence.

"Mashed Potatoes" Were Yams.

He made some headway with this thought among the diners, for what many supposed to be mashed potatoes, he later revealed as West Indian yams, tubers, which, he said, grow to be as large as 16 pounds in weight, rather a better return for the Florida farmer now growing them who sometimes has found his potatoes more like peas in size than tubers.

Or if the southern farmer has not the high sandy soil necessary for yams, he may take to raising dasheens, Island of Trinidad tubers, which Dr. Fairchild served last night in the form of chips or crisps, and, which, he said, had a higher food value than potatoes. It was found to have a nutty flavor. New York, Dr. Fairchild said, has had its taste tuned to dasheens so that now it is placing its orders by the carload.

Dr. Fairchild served his chayote, which came originally from Guatemala, in the form of a salad. They resemble cucumbers and are worthy of consideration for the American table, he said, because of their texture, if not for their flavor. "You can create flavor for a vegetable, but you cannot give it texture," he added in praise of this part of his wares. He added that its use was not confined to salad, but that it was excellent creamed, fried, in fritters, stuffed, au gratin, baked with meats, in stews, as pickles, preserves, sauce or in other forms which an ingenious American housewife might concoct.

Persimmons Resemble Tomatoes.

The Japanese persimmons, grown in California, resembled tomatoes in size, color and contour. Their tops had been sliced off and the diners were instructed to dig at them much as they are accustomed to dig into their breakfast orange. Their taste is not unlike the persimmons with which most palates have at some time had contact.

The pistaches were the familiar nut of the fruitstand, natives to Tunis and other Mediterranean countries, but which recently have been transferred to California hillsides where single trees have yielded crops marketed for $40.

Chinese jujubes are dates, only more so. It is thriving in the Imperial Valley of California, Dr. Fairchild said, and is destined to carry through history, he predicted, the name of a St. Louisan—Frank N. Meyer.

"'Crazy' Meyer, they called him when he came to us in 1906 from the Missouri Botanical Gardens, his 'craziness' being merely the asiduity and intensity with which he pursued his studies," Dr. Fairchild said. "Meyer went to China and poked for nine years around back yards and out-of-the-way places. When he returned he brought 2300 different vegetables, fruits, shade trees and ornamentals, with many of which Americans since have become more or less familiar. He died on the Yang-Tse River three years ago, and in his will left $1000 for his associates to spend in a 'spree' to his memory. The money was used to strike the Meyer medal given each year to the most notable introduction in plant life during the year.

"Meyer brought not only the jujube, but fine varieties of the soya bean, the fei peach which sometimes grows to weigh a pound, the dry land elm, the wild peach stock for cultivating peach trees on arid land, Chinese ginger and other notable additions to nature's life in America.

"I believe his jujube will become one of the most familiar fruits on American markets, because it never fails of a crop, its blossoms are frost-proof and because when candied it is a real delicacy."

SLAVS SURE U. S. WILL BE PLEASED

Agreement With Italy Over Adriatic Region Bases of Lasting Peace, Says Premier.

By the Associated Press.

RAPALLO, Italy, Nov. 13.—Belief that the United States would be gratified at the agreement reached between Italy and Jugo-Slavia regarding the Adriatic problem, was expressed by Anton Trumbitch, the Jugo-Slav Foreign Minister, immediately after the signing of the treaty between the two countries by their representatives here last night. M. Trumbitch said:

"The Adriatic is the pivot upon which European peace rests. The American Government understood this and attributed great importance to the Adriatic question. America, which so truly and disinterestedly desires European peace, will be, more than any other country, satisfied with the present solution, which, having been reached through direct negotiations, shows the sincerity of Italy and Jugo-Slavia."

'WONDER MAN' OF SHIPPING BOARD A CONFIDENCE MAN

Alleged Past of E. S. Kiger, Who Gave Himself Title of "Chief Traffic Engineer," Revealed.

SAID TO HAVE HAD 21 DIFFERENT NAMES

One of These of Woman, Some of Corporations; Could Change Appearance of Forehead and Teeth.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—During the war Edward S. Kiger was "wonder man" in the Shipping Board's emergency fleet corporation. "Chief traffic engineer" of that organization was the title he conferred upon himself, and nobody disputed him. "Tiger" they called him, and when they wanted a hard, tough job accomplished, they used to say, "Sic 'em Tiger!" He got $3600 a year and more than earned it.

Before the war—it is revealed by the current congressional investigation of the Shipping Board—the "wonder man" was a confidence man, with a record extending back many years generally for using the mails to defraud.

He was Edward S. Kiger, all right, but he was at times 20 different other persons and corporations, using throughout a multitude of swindles any title that seemed most appropriate, once even using a woman's name.

How did Kiger get his job? Nobody seems to know exactly. Where is the "Tiger" now? Nobody seems to know. He has been missing since last April, when, under $1000 bail, he was released from Bellevue Hospital, where he had been sent from the Tombs because of illness, while awaiting trial on an old swindling indictment.

Some think he is dead, for he was in a serious way from a spinal complaint. Others doubt this—among them the postoffice inspectors—and believe he will turn up, under some one or another of his 21 names.

List of Kiger's Titles.

From government records the following list of Kiger's titles were obtained today: R. E. Jordan, Clinton H. Crane, Todd and Evans, Samuel E. King, H. G. Willard, Edward S. Kyle, L. Johnson, Edward W. Connors, Mrs. Elizabeth E. Walker, R. L. Thompson, Edwin S. Karlan, Edwin S. Kane, Edwin S. Kale, E. S. Kennett, Continental Motor Cycle and Motor Boat Company, Automobile Sales Agency, Nelson Crane Machinery Company, W. H. Dalmer, Tucker Churn Company, Vanadium Steel Company.

His game, as explained by Inspector Oliver Schaeffer, was this. He would offer some standard article—a churn, a motorcycle or boat, a lathe or other bit of machinery—at a price far below its value. In response to his advertisements hundreds of persons would send money to him to clinch the bargain. Then he would vanish.

The "Tiger" has made and spent fortunes. When last heard of he was entirely penniless. Curiously, in many instances where he was arrested, he would "beat the case." This was generally because the witnesses against him were uncertain as to their identification.

There was a reason, according to the post-office authorities, and according to John T. Meehan, the investigator who first revealed Kiger's past.

Could Change His Appearance.

In the first place, the man has a deeply furrowed forehead, which impressed itself upon those who observed him, but it is said, by some peculiar muscular ability, he is able to smooth out his skin instantaneously and wipe the wrinkles out of view. And he can hold this pose indefinitely.

Again, his upper teeth are artificial. It is said he has several sets of these, of different appearance and proportions, so that he can at will change the shape and look of his mouth, easily sufficient to confuse the ordinary witness. He is or was about 57 years old, 6 feet 2 in height, 180 pounds in weight, and—when in funds—a fashion plate as to his garments.

In 1908 he was arrested in Pittsburg charged with getting money on false pretenses. This case was settled by his refunding his gains. He then used the name of Edward S. Kane.

In 1910, at Memphis, Tenn., he was arrested for forgery, being known by the names of E. S. Kale and E. S. Kennett. While arranging for a bond he escaped custody and is still wanted by his bondsman and on the original charge.

In 1911 he was indicted in Minneapolis charged with defrauding through the mails, this time as Edwin S. Karlan. He described himself as sales agent for the "Vanadium Steel Company" with a plant at Strasburg, Germany, and had salesmen all over the country, it was charged, getting $300 cash from each as a bond. This indictment was dismissed in 1915, for "lack of witnesses."

In 1912 he was indicted in St. Louis as Clinton H. Crane, of the Nelson Crane Machinery Company. He had advertised lathes for sale when he did not have any. But he "beat the case" through a technicality.

"Automobile Sales Agency."

Later that same year one of the most important cases against him arose. He was then known as Edward W. Connors and E. S. Kennett. With others he established at 1531 Broadway the "automobile sales agency." This purported to deal in rebuilt cars. Branches were established in Chicago, Detroit, Pittsburg and other cities. The purchasers put down the money on their cars, but never received the machines. Kier was indicted for this, but he vanished before his case could come to trial. In 1913 the post-office records have him as "wanted" in Trenton, Mich., for defrauding a bank, and also at Kansas City, Mo., and Williamsport, Pa., for obtaining money under false pretences.

In January, 1914, Kiger, then calling himself R. E. Jordan, was arrested and tried in Detroit on the charge of having operated his automobile swindle in that city. He pleaded guilty to Judge Tuttle, who said that, because of the plea and the indictments which stood against him in Pittsburg and New York, he would give him a light sentence. The sentence was five years in the Detroit house of correction.

He was released in January, 1918, and within three weeks was an employee of the Shipping Board at a salary of $150 a month. One of his friends at this time, marveling at the man's nerve, asked: Ed, how did you get the job?" The reply was: "Oh, I just applied for it. They needed men, and I made good, and it wasn't long before I was getting $300 a month." It was true enough that he made good and had his salary doubled.

Exploits During War.

Kiger's exploits as "Chief Traffic Engineer of the Shipping Board" are both astonishing and laughable. One of his bits of work which stands out in the memory of those who worked with him was this: A certain shipyard needed a locomotive, an engineer and fireman and several cars. It seemed impossible to get them. Every sort of routine effort was made to obtain them. Finally someone said: "Tiger, sic 'em!" Kiger went to one of the general managers of the Pennsylvania Railroad and literally conned him into granting use of the equipment desired for "a few days." Kiger kept the outfit three months.

Some pipe lines of the Standard Oil Co. were in the way of construction work which "Tiger" Kiger wanted done. He is said to have peremptorily ordered John D. Rockefeller to "get those lines under ground inside of 24 hours or take the consequences." The lines were promptly sunk.

Then again he had the Congressional Limited, the fastest New York-Washington train, stopped at a way station near Philadelphia so that one of his associates might alight. The officers of the company raised a row over this, but that did not matter.

"Tiger" Kiger got away with about anything he started. He "conned them to death," but all in the service of the country.

"Job" Done in New York.

In August, 1919, after Kiger had left the Shipping Board employ a "job" was done in New York, which looked like his work, it was said. An advertising letter was sent throughout the entire country to physicians, declaring that a certain firm in Broadway had obtained a large number of Ford automobiles from the Government and was willing to sell them, for advertising purposes, for $100 each. The physicians were required to send a "deposit," and they did so in great numbers.

Inspector Schaeffer of the postoffice raided the address given in the advertising letters and seized the first day's return. It amounted to more than $3,000. Within a few days more than $30,000 had poured in—all of which was returned to the senders. Believing the man behind the scheme to be Kiger, Inspector Schaeffer arrested that individual at the Hotel Martinique, where he was living under his right name. Kiger denied the charge and some of the employes at the fraudulent address failed to identify him. They said there was a resemblance, but they would not swear it was he who hired them.

This charge failing to "stand up," Kiger was held on the 1912 indictment, which still stood against him. He was placed in the Tombs last fall and after remaining there several months was transferred to Bellevue Hospital because of illness.

From that place he was released on bail in the middle of April and since then has been missing.

HAITI WANTS CONGRESSIONAL INVESTIGATION OF AFFAIRS

President of Island Republic Says Oppression Has Caused Violation of Treaty.

By the Associated Press.

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti, Nov. 13.—President Dartiguenave, in a statement at the palace here today to correspondents, declared that, if America desired the Haitians to consider the Haitian-American treaty on a basis of independence, it would be necessary to hold a congressional investigation of the civil functionaries.

"The treaty," says the President, "has been violated and not carried out, because Haiti has been under the oppression of the American Minister and financial adviser. There is need of a Minister, wise and enlightened, and I believe an investigation would clarify the situation.

"The Minister and adviser have sent to Secretary Colby declarations alleged to have come from me, intending to infer that Haiti is not keeping her obligations.

"The main civil trouble is lack of co-operation. The Americans are a great people; we beg them to be kind to a little people."

He expressed firm belief that a congressional inquiry was necessary to amplify testimony taken before the Naval Board of Inquiry.

NORTHER KEEPS HARDING FROM FISHING OR GOLF

Downpour Adds to Discomfort of His Party From Sudden Cold and All Have to Stay Indoors.

WANTS ANOTHER TRY AT THE TARPON

President-Elect Preparing for Speech at New Orleans Thursday and Voyage to Canal Zone.

By the Associated Press.

POINT ISABEL, Tex., Nov. 13.—Cut off by an unseasonable storm from recreation on land or sea, President-elect Harding spent today in Point Isabel reading and making preliminary preparation for the speech he will deliver next Thursday at New Orleans.

The President-elect and his party virtually were marooned for the day, the cold norther which blew up yesterday still holding sway on the fishing grounds off Laguna Madre and a downpour of rain making the winding dirt road into Brownsville practically impassable. He had hoped at least to go in for a golf game at the Brownsville Country Club, but automobile drivers pronounced the trip impracticable.

Unless the weather moderates by tomorrow the Harding party may be moved to a Brownsville hotel. Local weather sharps thought tonight, however, that the storm would be over in a few hours, and that warmer weather would follow.

Harding wants to remain here and get one more try at tarpon fishing off Point Isabel if possible. It is about 20 miles to Brownsville along a road that is little more than a trail through cactus and mesquite, and for 15 miles of the way there are no houses visible from the roadway.

Narrow-Gauge Line.

An old style narrow-gauge railroad train of two cars, hauled by gasoline, makes the trip each way once a day and today it was used in preference to motor cars by two or three members of Harding's party who took permanent leave of Point Isabel and started for home.

Harry M. Daugherty, close adviser of the President-elect, was one of those who departed, having been called to Columbus, O., by the death of a sister-in-law. Senator Elkins of West Virginia, who has been Harding's companion on his two fishing trips here, also left for his home. It is expected that Edward B. McLean, the Washington publisher, will leave the party Thursday at New Orleans before the departure for Panama. Harding has invited Will H. Hays, the Republican National Chairman, to make the Panama voyage as his guest, but no definite acceptance has been received.

Unable either to fish or play golf today, Harding visited for the first time the office set up in the Point Isabel Hotel by his secretary, George B. Christian Jr. He also called on a number of other members of his party in the unheated rooms of the hotel, which was erected for summer accommodation and not to shelter guests against a norther such as that which has swept the coast the last two days. He found most of his fellow adventurers clustered close about the small stove that had been erected hastily in the large room that serves as a hotel lobby.

Letters Have to Wait.

During his call at Christian's room the President-elect gave instructions for disposition of the most urgent letters and telegrams that have come to him here. He decided that most of the communications could be filed away, however, until his vacation trip is over.

One of the messages that has reached Harding here is an invitation to visit the city and republic of Panama during his week's stay in the Canal Zone. Despite his hesitancy in his present position to enter the territory of any foreign nation, he is understood to have replied that he would be glad to receive a delegation to present the invitation formally and to have promised that he would make the visit if he found it possible.

Washington Orchestra to Accompany Harding to Panama.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—A picked orchestra from this city will accompany President-elect Harding on his forthcoming trip to Panama, it was announced here today. The orchestra played for the Prince of Wales during his recent visit to Washington.

GOV. COX DONATES $75,000 TO WITTENBERG COLLEGE

Money to Be Used for Erection of a Chapel as a Memorial to His Mother.

SPRINGFIELD, O.—Nov. 13.—James M. Cox today donated $75,000 to Wittenberg College here for erection of a chapel, it was announced tonight. The structure is to be a memorial to his mother.

The Governor holds an honorary degree of Doctor of Laws conferred on him by the institution.

TWO MEN GET $83 IN THREE HOLDUPS IN THE WEST END

Sisters, Milliners, and Fruit Dealer on Taylor Avenue Yield Bulk of Booty to Bandits.

Misses Nellie and Mary Davis, sisters, were alone in their millinery shop at 722 North Taylor avenue, at 6:30 o'clock last night when two men, armed with revolvers, entered and commanded them to raise their hands. The sisters screamed, but complied.

"Cut out that noise and show us the cash box," commanded one, and the women gave them the cash drawer, which the robbers emptied, taking $15, and departed.

Half an hour later two men answering the same description entered the fruit store of Peter Passafiume at 521 North Taylor avenue, two blocks distant, and made Passafiume stand with his face to the wall while they took $65 from the cash register.

At 8 o'clock George McGrail, 3713 Cook avenue, was held up by two men at Cook and Spring avenues, and robbed of $3.

REPORT COX WAS OFFERED FUND TO DECLARE HIMSELF BONE DRY

$1,500,000 Said to Have Been Sum Mentioned—New Yorker Named in Story Says It Is Lie.

From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—An echo of the late presidential campaign, presented in an article by Mark Sullivan in the Evening Post today as an unconfirmed story, stated that, shortly before Gov. Cox started on his western trip, an offer was made by certain men that an organization fund of $1,500,000 would be raised on condition that, in one of his speeches in the west, Gov. Cox would declare himself bone-dry and would pledge himself to veto any congressional act tending to make the present prohibition law less drastic.

In the group which made this offer, according to the story as reported by Sullivan, were Thomas L. Chadbourne and Allan A. Ryan of this city and ex-Senator Clarence Watson of West Virginia.

Chadbourne declared the story "an absolute lie."

Efforts to reach Ryan for comment on the report were unsuccessful.

As the story was heard by Sullivan, Gov. Cox was notified by telegraph of the offer. At the same time President Wilson was informed, and was reported to have wired Gov. Cox in strong language urging him to turn the offer down.

U. S.-Japanese War Is "Simply Unthinkable," Ambassador Says.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 13.—War between Japan and the United States is "simply unthinkable," declared Roland S. Morris, American Ambassador to Japan, in addressing the American Academy of Political and Social Science here tonight. Morris expressed regret for the "ill-considered statements, which from time to time, find expression in both countries as to the suggestion of war."

"It is as Premier Hara has recently said, 'simply unthinkable,'" Morris continued. "That there are pending questions for the consideration of both our Governments is no valid evidence of unfriendly feeling between them. On the contrary, it is the best possibl evidence of the many interests we have in common—many of them difficult and complex, but not one of them insoluble."

ST. LOUIS VOTE FOR 3 SOCIALISTS FOR CONGRESS, 9549

Official Count for Congressmen and Judgeships in City Makes No Change in Result.

"3 K'S" ABOUT 30,000 BEHIND TICKET

Hawes' Plurality in Eleventh, 2136; Newton's in Tenth, 56,322; Dyer's in Twelfth, 11,498.

The official count of the vote cast Nov. 2 for members of Congress in the three St. Louis districts, for three Circuit judgeships and one judgeship of the Court of Criminal Correction, was announced yesterday. It showed the same results which were indicated by the unofficial count, namely, the re-election of Congressmen Newton and Dyer, Republicans, in the Tenth and Twelfth districts, the election of Harry B. Hawes, Democrat, over B. P. Bogy, Republican, in the Eleventh; the election of Judge J. Hugo Grimm, Republican; Franklin Miller, Democrat, and William H. Killoren, Republican, as Circuit Judges; and the election of Anthony Hochdoerfer, Democrat, over Judge Chauncey J. Krueger, Republican, for the Court of Criminal Correction.

Killoren, Judge Karl Kimmel and Judge Krueger were the "three K's" against whom the League of Women Voters conducted a campaign, because of the activity of the "Courthouse Ring" in supporting them. The returns show that the "three K's" ran about 30,000 votes behind the rest of the Republican ticket, but that Killoren had sufficient strength to come in as the third of the Circuit Judges elected. Judge Kimmel was beaten for the Circuit Court, as was Krueger for the Court of Criminal Correction.

Heavy Scratching in Twenty-Eighth.

The scratching was heaviest in the Twenty-eighth Ward, where the "K's" ran approximately 5000 votes behind Hyde, and in the Fifteenth, where they ran 4000 behind Hyde.

Judge Grimm's plurality over Richard A. Jones, Democrat, the highest of the defeated candidates, was 42,263. Killoren's plurality over Jones was only 1712, and Judge Kimmel ran 322 behind Jones. Hochdoerfer's plurality over Judge Krueger was 3284.

In the Twenty-eighth Krueger ran ahead of Killoren and Kimmel. In the Nineteenth Ward, of which Nat Goldstein, head of the "courthouse ring," is Republican committeeman the K's ran well up with the remainder of the ticket, Kimmel and Krueger being only about 100 behind Hyde, while Killoren ran 370 ahead of Hyde.

In the Twenty-eighth Ward the Republican presidential electors received an average vote of 10,708, and the Democrats, 7764, an average plurality for Harding in the ward of 2944. The vote for presidential electors there was 18,472, while on the office of Judge of the Court of Criminal Correction it was only 17,449, showing that approximately 1000 voters of the ward did not vote on the Krueger-Hochdoerfer race.

In the Seventeenth, represented on the committee by Frank Slater, Killoren also ran ahead of the others, who were only about 150 behind Hyde.

In the Fifth Ward, of which Gabe Roth, one of Goldstein's clerks in the Circuit Clerk's office, is committeeman, the K's ran less than 40 votes behind Hyde. In other wards, they varied from 10 to 25 behind in the Sixth to 1500 behind in the Eleventh.

Hawes' Plurality 2136.

The congressional count showed that Hawes' plurality in the Eleventh District was 2136, Newton's plurality in the city was 43,919, and in the entire Tenth District, including St. Louis County, was 56,322; Dyer's plurality in the Twelfth was 11,498. The vote of R. N. Owens, negro candidate on the Farmer-Workers' ticket in the Twelfth, was 772, and in the city portion of the Tenth District Samuel T. Larkin, independent dry candidate, got 948 votes. Larkin's name was not printed on any ballot, and had to be written in by those who voted for him.

The total city vote for the three Socialist candidates for Congress was 9549.

The tables on the congressional vote are:

H. R. Spencer Scratched.

An interesting feature of the count on presidential electors showed that H. R. Spencer of Princeton, Republican elector from the Third District, was scratched in nearly every ward in St. Louis. The theory of the counters was that many voters saw the name Spencer and desiring to vote against Senator Spencer, scratched the first Spencer they saw on the ballot.

GRAND JURY WILL RESUME INQUIRY INTO ELECTION CHARGES

to furnish bond for all of them, and conferred with the three Republicans.

Under this arrangement the six assembled in Wilson's office yesterday morning, arriving one or two at a time, and then went into Judge Hall's office after Weinbrenner served bench warrants on them. Whalen signed the bonds which were approved, and the men went their way.

Statement by Wilson.

Wilson, with consent of the indicted men, made a statement for them to the Post-Dispatch, in which he said:

"If there is a discrepancy on the face of the returns, it was due to a clerical error and not to any intention on the part of the judges or clerks to falsify returns.

"In discussions among themselves the judges and clerks have come to the conclusion that a discrepancy was found in the vote for Shields for Circuit Judge, who was the candidate of the 'house cleaners.' Our precinct organization supported the housecleaners' ticket. The judges and clerks voted for the housecleaners' ticket. In fact the entire Republican organization of the Twenty-sixth Ward supported the housecleaners.

"In tabulating the returns all the returns were called off just as they were taken from the ballot box, but in checking up the counted return with the tally sheets for the purpose of filling out the sheet handed to policemen for early returns, it is possible that an oversight occurred and that 25 votes which had been tallied for Judge Shields were not written on the policeman's sheet.

"If that is the case it was purely an oversight. If there was any intention of fraud, there would have been more votes for Judge Shields than were cast, for he was our candidate."

Claxton Opposed Housecleaners.

Judge Hartmann formerly lived in the Twenty-sixth Ward and was president of the Twenty-sixth Ward Republican Club until he was elected to the circuit bench two years ago, when he moved into the Twenty-eighth Ward, Wilson said, adding that while in the Twenty-sixth Ward Hartmann had been a supporter of Claxton, who opposed the "housecleaners'" ticket at the primary.

No fraudulent votes were cast and there was no fictitious ballots in the Fifteenth precinct, Wilson said in reply to Claxton's charges. There had been a number of removals, he said, and possibly some might have voted who had no right, but if so it was without the knowledge of the officials and nobody voted who was not registered.

"The indictment is the result of a fight waged by the courthouse ring because our organization supported the 'housecleaners'' ticket," Wilson asserted. "Anyone identified with the housecleaners will verify that we did support their ticket. The statement of Alroy Phillips that there were more votes counted for committeeman than cast is incorrect, as the returns submitted to the grand jury showed."

None of the men indicted in the Twenty-sixth Ward case served as election officials in the recent presidential election. Their names were put up to the Board of Election Commissioners for re-appointment after the primary by Wilson, but Claxton filed written charges against them, whereupon Wilson withdrew their names, saying that they didn't want to serve, and had practically been drafted by him, and that he didn't want to cause them any more bother, such as a hearing over the matter would entail. Others then were appointed.

Fine and Sentence Possible.

Assistant Circuit Attorney Baer yesterday outlined methods to be used in placing before trial juries, the evidence upon which the false count indictments have been based as follows:

"We very likely will ask the trial Judge for a subpena duces tecum," he said, "by which we can obtain the attendance in court of one of the Election Commissioners or a clerk of the Election Board, who will bring the ballot box for the precinct involved.

"The box then will be opened and the ballots counted and tallied in the presence of the jury. The law provides, however, that ballot boxes may not be opened in such a manner as to disclose how any person voted, so in counting the ballots that part bearing the number must be kept folded, so that the identity of the voter whose ballot is being tallied is not divulged.

"A witness cannot be compelled to tell how he voted, but where fraud is suspected, and voters are willing to testify, as in the Twenty-sixth Ward case, where a number of voters have made affidavits as to how they voted, it also is possible to call men in and let them tell the jury how they voted."

Conviction of the charge in the primary fraud indictments is punishable by imprisonment of not less than three months in the county jail nor more than five years in the penitentiary, or by fine of not less than $100, or by both fine and imprisonment, and automatically disfranchises the defendant.

DISSENSION OVER ARMY PROMOTION RECOMMENDATION

said very frankly, is to be given the authority as well as the name of Commander in Chief of the Army. This would involve turning over to him the duties now reposed in the Chief of Staff, a change which would seem to leave no post of importance for Gen. Wood unless Wood should be made Secretary of War. And to make Wood the Secretary and give Pershing full authority as Commander in Chief would be certain to precipitate a conflict.

Gen. Edwards stands foremost among the men who have been superseded in the new list of appointments. Gen. Edwards heads the list of Brigadier-Generals. At the outbreak of the war, Gen. Edwards was placed in command of the Twenty-sixth (New England) Division. He trained the outfit and took it to France, one of the first to go overseas. He led the division in all the hard fighting of 1918, but was displaced shortly before the armistice. Edwards was very bitter over this removal. Recently he was dropped back to his regular rank and placed in command of a brigade at Camp Dixon.

Edwards has powerful political backing, but so also has Pershing, whose father-in-law, Senator Francis E. Warren, is chairman of the Senate Committee on Appropriations and was for many years the head of the Committee on Military Affairs.

Men who are out to clip the wings of Pershing say that it is a case of now or never. If he has his way, they assert, he will not only be the dictator of American Army affairs for the next four years, until he retires at the age of 64, but will perpetuate in control his group of chosen subordinates for many years to come.

Edwards Resents His Rank.

Gen. Edwards, has served notice on the present ruling powers of the army that he will never accept retirement in the rank of Brigadier-General until he has exhausted every resource at his command. Edwards attains the age of 62 years next January, at which time he must be retired. His friends, however, declare that, if Edwards is forced out, they already have the votes to ensure that the new list of Pershing's Brigadier-Generals will never be confirmed.

MRS. H. A. CLOVER KILLS HERSELF IN HOME OF AN AUNT

Fires Bullet Into Her Chest While Husband Awaits Her Return for Walk in Forest Park.

RECENTLY RETURNED FROM THE ORIENT

Trip Brought Little Improvement to Health, and Spells of Melancholia Ensued, Husband Says.

Mrs. Frances Papin Clover, 50 years old, wife of Henry A. Clover, an attorney, shot and killed herself with a revolver at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Louise Hunt, 4915 Pershing avenue, about 11:30 a. m. yesterday, while her husband waited for her in Forest Park.

The Clovers have a home at 4430 Lindell boulevard, but since their recent return from a voyage to Japan and Honolulu they have been living at the home of Mrs. F. C. Booth, another aunt of Mrs. Clover, at 4925 Pershing avenue.

Mrs. Clover has been ill for some time and the voyage to the Orient was for the benefit of her health. Her husband yesterday said there had been little improvement in her condition since their return, and she has been subject to spells of melancholia.

Clover said that he and his wife went for a walk in Forest Park yesterday, and that after reaching the park Mrs. Clover said she would return home for some books, as she had often done when they were in the park together. It was agreed that he would wait until she returned with the books.

After a long wait Clover returned home and learned that his wife had not been there. He then went to the Hunt home, a few doors away, and learned from a maid that his wife had shot herself. She was unconscious in a bedroom when found, and died before a physician arrived. The wound was in her chest and the revolver lay beside her.

Clover about 20 years ago was Prosecuting Attorney of St. Louis. His brother, Ashley C. Clover, was at one time Circuit Attorney. They were sons of the late Henry A. Clover, who was a Judge of the St. Louis Circuit Court.

CHARLES SUTTER ONE OF 7 NAMED FOR SHIPS BOARD

St. Louisan Appointed to Represent the Interior of the Country, His Term to Be One Year.

4 DEMOCRATS AND 3 REPUBLICANS CHOSEN

Some Doubt Expressed in Capital That Republican Senate Will Approve Wilson Appointments.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Reappointment of Rear Admiral W. S. Benson as chairman of the Shipping Board was announced today at the White House. At the same time announcement was made of the appointment of six other members of the new board authorized by the Merchant Marine act.

Admiral Benson is appointed from Georgia and as a Democrat and his term is for six years. The appointments are recess ones and the nominations under the law are subject to approval by the Senate.

The other six members are:

Frederick I. Thompson, Alabama, Democrat, term of five years.

Joseph N. Teal, Oregon, Democrat, term of four years.

John A. Donald, New York, Democrat, term of three years.

Chester H. Powell, California, Republican, term of two years.

Guy D. Goff, Wisconsin, Republican, term of one year

The chairman and Donald are reappointed from the present board, while the selection of Thompson and Teal was made some time ago, but was not announced because some of the members appointed then declined to serve. They included Theodore Marburg of Baltimore, Gavin McNab of San Francisco and Martin Gillen of Wisconsin.

Admiral Benson and Donald are the Atlantic coast representatives; Rowell and Teal are the Pacific coast representatives; Thompson is the member from the Gulf coast; Goff the member for the Great Lakes region, and Sutter the member from the interior. This geographical grouping of the members is required under the merchant marine act.

Sutter Interior Appointee.

Charles Sutter, Missouri, Republican, term of one year.

Under the law not more than four members of the board can be of any one political party. Four Democrats and three Republicans have been appointed, but in some quarters today doubt was expressed whether the Republican Senate would approve this political alignment in view of the fact that a Republican administration will come into power on next March 4. It was regarded as possible that action on the nominations would be held up until after March 4.

Two Members Reappointed.

Admirals Benson and Donald are the only members of the present board and immediate organization of the new board is looked for, as a number of policies with respect to the Government-owned merchant marine laid down in the merchant marine act cannot be carried into effect until the full board has begun to function. Much of the preliminary work, however, has been done by the present board, and the plans laid out will be submitted to the new board for its action.

Since Congress failed to make a specific appropriation for the salaries of the members of the new board, they are not expected to draw pay until Congress at its next session has made funds available. The salaries fixed by law are $12,000 for each commissioner. Members of the board must devote all their time to the duties of their office, and they must divest themselves from any interest which they may have in the shipping industry.

Who the Men Are.

Admiral Benson has been chairman of the board for nearly a year, having been appointed to succeed John Barton Payne when Payne was appointed Secretary of the Interior. He was wartime chief of naval operations.

Donald has been a member of the board several years.

Thompson is a newspaper publisher of Mobile, Ala.

Rowell is editor of the Fresno, Cal., Republican.

Teal is a lawyer and banker of Portland, Ore., and is the author of various pamphlets on transportation, conservation and civic problems.

Col. Goff is now general counsel of the board. He is a son of the late Senator Goff of West Virginia; formerly was District Attorney of Milwaukee and United States District Attorney for Wisconsin and served eight months on Gen. Pershing's staff at Chaumont.

Benson Discusses Plans.

Discussing plans for the new board, Chairman Benson said tonight that immediate consideration would be given to section 28 of the Jones Act, which permits railroads to give preferential rates on cargoes for shipment in American bottoms.

The provision of the act was suspended until January 1, by the Interstate Commerce Commission, on the recommendation of the Shipping Board, but it may be necessary to put it into effect at some ports, the chairman declared. The full board probably will not be seated before Dec. 1, he added, although the members may take the oath as they arrive here or wait until the board can qualify as a body. Goff will have direct supervision over all legal matters, the chairman said.

Sutter resides at 4 North King's highway and is chairman of the executive committee of the Foreign Trade Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce. The salary is $12,000 a year.

RELATIVES OF BOY LOST AT BELLEVILLE SOUGHT BY POLICE

Parents of John Simson Said to Have Moved From St. Louis About a Week Ago.

The St. Louis police were asked last night to aid in a search for relatives of a nine-year-old boy who was found wandering about the streets of Belleville, Ill., Wednesday. The Belleville police stated that the boy gave the name of John Simson.

According to the boy's story his parents moved to St. Louis from Bay City, Mich., about a month ago, and lived here near Eighth and Barton streets until about a week ago. They then moved to a point "within three miles of Belleville," the child declares, and he became lost from his parents on the way to their new home. A search of the district around Belleville has failed to find the child's parents.

CHILD PATIENTS IN CITY HOSPITAL ENTERTAINED

Vaudeville Performers Bring a Little Sunshine Into Lives of Sick and Disabled.

The lives of sick and disabled children at the city hospital were brightened by an entertainment given yesterday in their ward by vaudeville performers from the Empress Theater. The orchestra seats were the wheel chairs of cripples, the boxes were beds arranged about a space cleared for the performers, and the gallery was made up of patients who were able to stand up in the rear.

First came Miss Beth Challiss, who made them forget their ills and the possibility, for some of them, of going through life on crutches, with a song about the little girl who was whipped one day for telling a lie, and the next because she told the truth about her sister's age and another song was about the untrammeled joy of being a janitor's daughter. She was accompanied by Eddie Lambert, who played a piano brought to the ward from the nurses' parlor.

Following this came Griff, the "Bubble Man," who accomplished fantastic feats of blowing and juggling bubbles. Then there was a bubble-blowing contest for the children themselves.

The children who were able were brought to the show from all the wards of the hospital. It was the first time all of them had been together, and many a controversy arose as to which ward was the best and most comfortable, each claiming that his was "the best room in the hotel."

The entertainment was arranged by the hospital's social service department, with the help of Mrs. W. F. Ackerman of the Sorority Circle, a mother's club engaged in social work.

WIFE MAY PREFER MANN ACT CHARGES AGAINST HUSBAND

Police Holding Pair Arrested at Hotel Until She Makes Up Her Mind.

The police are holding James A. Keys, 38 years old, a furniture salesman, and Miss Pansy Vanderpool, 24, of Council Bluffs, Ia., whom they arrested Friday at the Majestic Hotel where they were registered as man and wife, while Keys' wife, Mrs. Stella Keys, 35, who came to St. Louis yesterday from her father's home in Kansas City, is endeavoring to make up her mind whether to prefer Mann act charges against them.

Mrs. Keys is inclined to give her husband "one more chance," because of their children, Frances, 15, and Robert, 11.

Mrs. Keys said that Miss Vanderpool was a stenographer in a furniture house by which her husband was employed at Omaha, Neb. She said that he sent her to Kansas City in September, 1919, promising to join her, but did not.

350 BARRELS OF RAISIN MASH SEIZED IN RAIDS

Liquor Taken Friday Night From Six Houses—Only Two Arrests Made.

Warrants charging violation of the prohibition law will be applied for tomorrow against eight Italians in whose possession 350 barrels of raisin mash were found Friday night when prohibition enforcement agents raided six houses. Frank T. Digges, Chief Prohibition Enforcement Agent, said that it was one of the largest hauls ever made by his assistants in a single trip.

The mash was found in houses at 2001, 2003, 2005, 2007 and 2019 Edwards street and at 5251 Daggett avenue. No arrests were made on Edwards streets, Diggs said, because the men found there were recognized as being at liberty on bond, having been arrested several weeks ago in a similar raid. They will be charged with committing a second offense, which is punishable by imprisonment in a penitentiary.

At the Daggett avenue address, where, the agents reported, a still was found in operation, two men were arrested and taken to the Mounted Police Station. They registered as Alpei Parisi, 55 years old, of 5251 Daggett avenue, and Alfro Miano, 28, of 1908 Cooper street.

The mash and still were taken to the Federal building to be used as evidence.

HOTEL WAITER SAYS HE WAS BEATEN BY MEN IN AUTO

Theodore Morris, 28 years old, captain of waiters at Hotel Statler, informed policemen yesterday that he was beaten and robbed of $35 by three men in an automobile Friday night. His eyes were discolored and his left jaw swollen. He said he had jumped from the automobile at Taylor avenue and Delmar boulevard. The policemen pursued an automobile speeding west on Delmar which Morris pointed out, but were unable to overtake it.

Morris said he was walking along St. Charles street, near Eleventh street, at 10 p. m., when the three men pushed him into the automobile in which were two women and the chauffeur. He was taken out to St. Louis County, he said, and slugged while the automobile was being driven about. He said the women urged the men to beat him severely.

The men and women apparently were in sympathy with the striking waiters and waitresses, Morris said, as the men accused him of having come from Chicago to help break the strike. He said he jumped from the automobile when he saw the policemen and that in doing so sprained his ankle.

"The Store of Better Service"

REDISTRICTING OF STATE TO TEST PLEDGES BY HYDE

Governor-Elect in Campaign Denounced Present Gerrymander as Destructive of Public Service.

REPUBLICAN PARTY IN FULL CONTROL

Can Establish Districts Fairly Representing Both Parties or Lay Them Out in Interest of Own Organization.

Through the redistricting of Missouri into congressional, State senatorial and Representative districts will come one of the first real tests of Gov.-elect Hyde's pre-election pledge of a "Republican administration dedicated to the service of the people of Missouri, and not a Republican administration dedicated to peanut politics." The Legislature, which convenes Jan. 5 for a 70-day session, is charged by the Constitution with the duty of redistricting.

Hyde, throughout the campaign, denounced the present districting as a Democratic gerrymander, which, he said, destroyed all incentive of the Senators to public service, and made the only incentive one of political party service along strictly partisan lines. Republican campaign speakers for 20 years have charged that the Democrats in establishing district lines had so fixed them that the Republican vote was concentrated largely in a few districts, while the Democratic vote controlled in a large number of district, and that even if Missouri went 75,000 Republican, the Republicans could not elect a majority of Senators. It went more than 100,000 Republican this year, and obtained the majority.

Power With Republicans.

It will be within the power of the Republican Legislature to create districts as unfairly in the interests of the Republican party, as the present districts were created in the interest of the Democratic party, or it will be in its power to create districts fairly representing the interests of both parties.

Nothing can be done toward Congressional districting until Congress decides the number of Congressmen to which Missouri will be entitled. The State now has 16, but there has been some discussion of a plan to avoid the increase in the total membership of Congress, which would follow the old apportionment. If the membership is held the same as at the present, the number of Missouri Congressmen probably will be reduced from 16 to 14.

If the total of Congress should be increased in proportion to the increase in population Missouri will retain its present number. This probably would result in a change in at least one St. Louis district, the Tenth, which includes St. Louis County. It is an unusually large district and unquestionably in a redistricting it would be cut down, at least to strike off St. Louis County and thus give St. Louis three Congressmen entirely within the city.

Thirty-Four State Senators.

The Constitution fixes the number of State Senators at 34, to be elected from 34 districts, "as nearly equal in population as may be," of contiguous territory and "as compact as may be."

The meaning of this provision is that the total population of the State shall be divided by 34, and that 34 Senatorial districts shall be created. They must be as nearly as possible equal in population, the counties forming them being contiguous, and the shape of the district as compact as possible.

Heretofore the only one of these provisions adhered to has been that providing that the districts shall be of contiguous territory. Little attention has been given to equality of size, of population and none to compactness. The sole idea apparently of the old districting was to create as many Democratic and as few Republican districts as possible. The next Legislature can follow the spirit of the Constitution, or it can follow the partisan spirit which controlled in the last districting.

Can't Divide a County.

Under the 1920 census, which must be taken as a basis, Missouri's population was shown to be 3,403,547. Divided by 34 this would fix the approximate population of each senatorial district at 100,104. The Constitution provides that in establishing district lines no county may be divided. If the Legislature adheres strictly to the Constitution St. Louis under the new districting will be allotted seven Senators, an increase of one, and St. Louis County will be made a senatorial district within itself, instead of being joined with two other counties, as under the present districting. Kansas City will be given three instead of two Senators.

Under the old districting St. Louis and Kansas City together had eight Senators, and the remainder of the State 26. Under the new districting they are entitled to 10, which would leave 24 for the remainder of the State.

The new districting will afford an opportunity for the larger cities of the State to exercise a greater control in matters of legislation than in the past. It frequently occurs that nearly all the Senators from the rural sections will be found banded together in opposition to almost anything St. Louis or Kansas City wants in the matter of legislation. Because of the large majority of the rural members the Senators from the city have been powerless. There recently has been talk that seven Senators from St. Louis, three from Kansas City and one from St. Louis County, if they could obtain the co-operation of Senators representing Joplin, St. Joseph, Springfield and Sedalia, would lack only two votes of having enough to control the Senate, and that they could at least form a very strong minority which would have almost, if not quite, a controlling influence.

Lower House Unit.

As a basis for State Representative districts, the Constitution provides that the population of the State shall be divided by 200 to establish a unit. Every county having in population one unit or less is entitled to one representative. Each county having 2½ times the unit is entitled to two, four times the unit three, six times the unit four, and one additional representative for each additional two and one-half units.

Under this provision the 1923 House will contain 148 members, an increase of six. St. Louis will have two of the additional members, Jackson County (Kansas City) will have two, Greene County (Springfield) will have one; St. Louis County will have one and Pettis County (Sedalia) will have one. Buchanan County (St. Joseph) will lose one. All other counties, except Jasper, which has three, and which will be unchanged, will have one representative each. St. Louis will have 18 instead of 16, Jackson County eight instead of 16, Jackson County three instead of two, Buchanan County three instead of four, Pettis County two instead of one and St. Louis County three instead of two.

Opponent of State Payroll Graft Is Out for Speakership of House

Representative O. B. Whitaker of Weaubleau Also Against Politicians' Dictatorship in Organization.

Declares Records of Auditor's Office Will Show Legislature Looted Treasury—Five Others Seek Post.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WEAUBLEAU, Mo., Nov. 13.—The legislative payroll graft scandal which has developed at every session of the Missouri Legislature for many years, has been brought to the front in advance of the 1921 Legislature by O. B. Whitaker of Weaubleau, who is seeking election as speaker of the next House on a campaign of opposition to the payroll graft and opposition to participation by the Republican politicians of St. Louis and the State in the organization of the House.

Whitaker points to the records of the State Auditor's office in support of a charge that the State Treasury was looted by members of the Legislature through the employment of unnecessary clerks, and through the habit of placing on the payroll by some members the names of their wives, daughters and sons. In most instances these relatives performed no service.

Last House Criticised.

"The last House was no different from previous Houses, and little different from the Democratic Senate," Whitaker said. "The graft was a little more extensive in the Senate, but that does not excuse the House. The last House had an average of 215 clerks and employes on the payroll. They drew $99,071. The Senate had an average of 350 employes and they drew $155,639.

"The system has been for each majority member to have the naming of one clerk. In addition to these every committee chairman named a clerk. The speaker named several. Then after these were authorized by resolution, the committee on clerical force added as many more as it desired, absolutely without authority.

"I opposed the system in the last Legislature and came near having a personal encounter with one member because of my opposition. These illegal clerks are being paid without any audit of the payroll by the Committee on Accounts. This committee was not even called into session by its chairman.

"I sought to correct conditions by a resolution in the House, but political influences were brought to bear and a substitute for my resolution was adopted. It was prepared to look like it meant the same thing as mine, but it actually meant nothing. I then caused the adoption of a resolution by the Accounts Committee for the meeting of the committee two days before each pay day, but the resolution was ignored.

Poor Pay No Excuse.

"A member of the Legislature receives a salary of $5 a day. That, of course, is not enough, but it does not justify a member in placing on the payroll the name of his wife at $3.50 a day when he knows she will do no work and that the $3.50 a day is just that much illegal addition to his salary.

"This is a very simple problem. It is merely a problem in common everyday honesty.

"At the conclusion of the last Legislature Gov. Gardner felt compelled to veto an appropriation of $50,000 for the deserving blind because the funds in the State Treasury were low. And the members of the Legislature had just completed a process of extracting from the State Treasury at least that amount by payroll graft.

"I see little difference between payroll padding and this system which has long been in vogue. They even adopted all sorts of subterfuges. In some instances fictitious names were used.

"The Republican party now is in power in Missouri. I can see no reason why it should not remain in power a great number of years if those of its members who are in official position give the people of the State an honest, businesslike administration, but it cannot hope to long remain in power if it continues the grafts o long perpetrated by the Democrats.

To Keep on Fighting Graft.

"I believe a majority of the members are opposed to the graft system which has prevailed, but whether they are or not, I am going to keep on fighting it. It probably makes little difference to the State whether I am speaker or some other man is speaker. I am less interested in being speaker than you might think, and will say right now that I am ready to support any other man who can convince me that he will not permit this graft."

Whitaker said that he was satisfied from investigation that 50 efficient clerks could do all of the clerical work of the House. He said, however, that the class of clerks which could be obtained on the salary permitted by law was not efficient. He estimated that 75 clerks of the class obtainable could do the work. Any number above that, he said, represented the extent of the graft practiced.

Whitaker also said he was opposed to a plan tried two years ago when all Republican members of the Legislature were summoned to St. Louis a few days before the opening of the session by Republican party leaders, who sought to control the election of the speaker. Whitaker said they wanted to be in control because of certain legislation they had to advocate later in the session.

"I have heard a similar conference is in prospect this year," he said. "I don't believe it will work. The holdover members will remember the efforts of John Schmoll, National Committeeman Babler and others to control the House in 1919 and any similar scheme this time will be blocked early."

Governor Likely to Take Hand.

It is probable that Gov.-elect Hyde will name the Speaker, and so far Hyde has given no intimation as to whom he prefers. Usually a Governor announces that he will take no hand in the organization of the Legislature, but in the past he invariably has taken a hand. He comes to the conclusion that his legislative program depends largely upon having friendly committee chairmen and to obtain them he tries to get a friendly Speaker.

In addition to Whitaker those who are seeking the speakership are Walter E. Bailey of Carthage, Speaker pro tem in 1919; John C. Dyott of Willow Springs; Sam F. O'Fallon of Oregon, Holt County, Speaker in 1919; William R. Lay of Steelville, and E. G. Davidson of St. Louis.

Davidson's candidacy is not looked upon very seriously. In the first place the selection of a St. Louisan is almost beyond the realm of possibility, because of the opposition of rural members to the city members, and Davidson's record would not be apt to attract support to him for Speaker.

Bailey, O'Fallon and Lay supported Hyde in the primary, and Hyde's support might go to any one of the three. O'Fallon as Speaker was in a position to make many friends among the holdover members, but, on the other hand, he undoubtedly will find opposition from some who did not receive the committee assignments they desired at the last session. There also may be a disposition on the part of members to feel that O'Fallon and Bailey were sufficiently honored two years ago and that the honors should be passed around.

Lay Aggressive Member.

Lay was one of the few members of the last House who developed a standing considerably above the average. He was known as a conscientious, hardworking member, possibly a little too much of a fighter to attract the personal following necessary to win the speakership, but a man who generally was to be counted on the right side of questions.

Dyott is expected to develop considerable strength as a candidate for Speaker. He was Republican floor leader two years ago.

The candidates are sending out letters to the Republican members in an effort to obtain pledges of support in the caucus which will be held the night of Jan. 5. Members are being asked either for pledges or for promises that they will not pledge their votes to other candidates.

For President Pro-Tem of the Senate, Senator Howard Gray of Carthage is the most frequently discussed. W. C. Irwin of Jefferson City also is said to be a candidate. Irwin is a new Senator, while Gray is a hold-over.

William G. Kitchin of St. Louis, chief clerk of the last house, is a candidate for Secretary of the Senate, and A. S. Zellweger of Springfield, formerly a member of the House, is a candidate for chief clerk.

CAR FARE DECISION FOR APPRAISAL AT PRESENT-DAY COST

U. S. District Court at Kansas City Upholds St. Joseph Company's Plea Against Original Cost Plan

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 13.—Judge Arba S. Van Valkenburgh of the United States District Court in Kansas City handed down a decision yesterday which if upheld by the Supreme Court will revolutionize the policy of the Missouri Public Service Commission in rate making for public utilities.

The decision was rendered in the case of the St. Joseph Light and Power Co. which sought to enjoin the Public Service Commission from enforcing a 7-cent street car fare on the ground that the commission's valuation of its property on an original cost basis was unlawful.

The commission valued the property at $5,784,883.07. The valuation was based upon an original cost plan using the average cost of labor and materials during the five-year period immediately preceding the war.

Contentions of Company.

The company contended that the valuation should have been $11,521,639, based upon the present cost of labor and materials. The items in the valuation of the company and of the commission were identical and the only issue involved was the proper formula for fixing a rate-making valuation. The 7-cent fare order of the commission was based upon their valuation. The company asked for an injunction on the ground that the commission's order would not yield a return on the true valuation and therefore was confiscatory.

Judge Van Valkenburgh permanently enjoined the commission from enforcing its order. In doing so, he says that the question of the formula for a valuation is the only issue in the case. He attacks the formula of the commission and points out that at the present price of money and expense of doing business it is more expensive to operate a public utility and the inherent hazards of the business are much greater.

In his opinion, Judge Van Valkenburgh takes a position which officials of the commission interpret as a defense of the company's contention that present day prices must be used in valuation of utility properties.

Recent Decision Cited.

In discussing that the opinion says: "In the very recent case of the United States ex rel K. C. Southern Ry. Company vs Interstate Commerce Commission, decided by the Supreme Court March 8, 1920, it appears that Congress has given legislative recognition to this same principle and the court ordered the commission to make its valuation in compliance with the act of Congress.

"While the decision in that case was predicated upon the express provisions of the act, nevertheless we find in it a recognition both by Congress and by that court of the necessity of adapting the standard of rate making bodies to conditions existing at the time the power is to be exercised."

The commission has appealed from the decision of Judge Van Valkenburgh to the United States Supreme Court.

MISS EVANS TELLS OF REPLY MADE TO CHICAGO'S MAYOR

Replies to C. of C. Commendation by Description of Incident in Theater.

W. Frank Carter, president of the Chamber of Commerce, yesterday received a reply to the letter of commendation sent to Miss Maude Evans of 1919 Union avenue, who recently interrupted a speech of Mayor Thompson of Chicago in the Co Theater of that city challenging his statement that "St. Louis was asleep."

Miss Evans replied, in part: "I appreciate the Chamber of Commerce interest and expression of gratitude. When Mayor Thompson called my home city 'sleepy' I just got up before I thought what I was doing and told him that St. Louis was not sleepy. I was born, reared and educated in St. Louis, and I am proud of my city. St. Louis is not asleep, and I did not hesitate an instant in correcting Mayor Thompson's statement. I remember that he smiled after I finished and asked 'Then it has awakened?'

"'St. Louis never was asleep,' I replied, 'therefore it had no waking up to do.'

"There really was no opportunity, but I would have liked to have told these Chicagoans about our fine parks, our fine schools, our fine water system, and last but most important, our fine spirit."

TRIAL OF ELLIS ON MURDER CHARGE IS SET FOR JAN. 3

Judge Hartmann Postpones Case of Youth for Killing of Former Fiancee Until After Christmas.

The trial of Albert Ellis, 21 years old, for the killing of Miss Edna Ellis, 18, his former fiancee, of 1833 North Garrison avenue, was assigned to Judge Hartmann's court yesterday and set for Jan. 3. Ellis has confessed he killed the young woman with a razor on a vacant lot near her home the night of Nov. 4. The charge is first degree murder.

Judge Hartmann announced that but for a sentiment against holding murder trials in Christmas week he would have started the trial Dec. 27. He said no jurors in the Ellis case would be excused from service for business or other reasons except sickness.

Theodore Young, 17 years old, of 133A East Grand avenue, took detectives yesterday to the spot where he found the razor blade believed to have been used by the murderer of Miss Ellis. In his confession Ellis said he threw the blade away about two blocks south of the place where the murder was committed. Young today said he found the blade on the lot where the girl was killed and pointed out the exact spot where he picked it up.

The blade and the white handle from which it was broken was taken to the Ellis home yesterday. Mrs. Marie Ellis, mother of the dead girl, could not identify it as one owned by Ellis when he boarded there.

Treasure Hunt for Boys.

All boys between the ages of 12 and 18 years, who are members of any North St. Louis Sunday school, are eligible to enter a treasure hunt to be held by several hundred boys of the North Side Y. M. C. A., on Thanksgiving day. The registration list will close on Nov. 23.

The hunt will follow three different trails, and the first two boys to cover each trail will find a treasure, which will represent money value. Details may be obtained from Secretary Ben C. Oberbeck at the North Side "Y," Grand and Sullivan avenues.

Advice of 7 St. Louisans in New Book on Success

Late Edward C. Simmons and Bishop Quayle Among 160 Contributors Who Offer Business Hints for Young Men.

Seven St. Louis names are among the 160 contributors to "Touchstones of Success," which has been issued by the Vir Publishing Co. of Philadelphia. The book embodies the opinions of its contributors, men of standing in business and professional life, on the question of the essentials of success in life.

The St. Louis contributors are the late Edward C. Simmons, founder of the Simmons Hardware Co., whose artice is the first in the volume; Murray Carleton, president of the Carleton Dry Goods Co.; William H. Danforth, president of the Ralston Purina Co.; F. V. Hammar, president of Hammar Bros. White Lead Co.; John G. Lonsdale, president of the National Bank of Commerce; Bishop William A. Quayle of the Methodist Church and Alfred L. Shapleigh, chairman of the board of directors of the Shapleigh Hardware Co.

Simmons' Rules for Success.

Simmons, in his article, declares that the selection of a line of business should be made carefully, and relates his reason for choosing the hardware business. The reason was that the hardware store deals in durable articles, which have a chance to establish their merit, as compared with groceries and articles of clothing, which have soon served their purpose. His rules for success, for himself and others, are: Not to watch the clock; to command increased pay by results, rather than to ask for it; to do more than expected; not to think one's self overworked, or think one's own job the hardest; to understand and recognize one's own weaknesses; to follow the early-to-bed and early-to-rise rule, and to eschew bad habits. Cigarette smoking is specified as a bad habit, and an instance is cited in which this habit kept a young man from getting a place in the Simmons establishment.

Hammar's contribution is one of the most condensed in the book. It is:

"A man's success in life depends solely on his capacity for intensive and initial thought, coupled with the amount of work he is physically able and willing to do for 12 to 14 hours a day, every day."

"One Step at a Time."

"Know where you are going; strive for a set mark," Lonsdale writes. "What job, better than yours, do you think that you are qualified to fill? Fix that better job in mind as your objective to be striven for daily by work and study. When you do reach it, select another objective without delay. The mountain climber plans his course a rod at a time. From moment to moment he is striving for the point just above him. The huntsman aims not at the whole covey of rising birds. but at one bird after another. Be satisfied with one step at a time, and one opportunity at a shot."

Carleton declares that he attributes whatever success he has had—not measuring success by mere acquisition of wealth—to the teaching and advice of his mother, who admonished him to live by the Golden Rule, and to put conscience into his work, whether or not it seemed attractive at the moment.

Church Affiliation as Factor.

Bishop Quayle declares that integrity, an obliging manner and Christian character are important factors in success. "I have found in many years," he writes, "that guarantee companies set great store on what a minister would say about the man to be assured. If he was a church member and attended his church with regularity, spent his sociable hours with the sociabilities of the church, was known as a Christian man, it had weight, and great weight, in commending him. To be sure, church members go wrong, but not many.

"In order to fill a big position," Danforth writes, "you must be physically fit, mentally fit, morally fit and socially fit, and you must pay the price in study, preparation and hard work. Business success is not a sprint, but a Marathon. Men usually get what they go after if they are willing to pay the price."

Shapleigh prescribes a willingness to do more than one is paid to do. "In any department of business activity, hard work and a spirit of willingness will do more for one than anything else I know. Try this out in your own life."

WOULD RAISE CITY'S LAW-ABIDING RATING

Chamber of Commerce Directors Authorize Naming of Committee to Undertake Task.

The appointment of a committee to undertake to make St. Louis more nearly "100 per cent law-abiding" has been authorized by the Board of Directors of the Chamber of Commerce.

This fact was disclosed yesterday when the Circuit Judges of the city, sitting in general term, issued an order to all court officials to give access to their records and otherwise aid such a committee in its work. The order was in response to a letter from Paul V. Bunn, secretary of the chamber, in which he asked the Judges' aid.

Bunn said to the Post-Dispatch, in response to an inquiry as to how the committee would go about its work, that it had not yet been named and that its aims could be stated only in general terms.

"The committee will seek to learn what peculiar causes for crime exist here," he said, "and will recommend remedies if that is possible. Just where its investigations will lead cannot, of course, be stated. Nor has it been decided whether the names of the committee will be made public or whether it will be permitted to go to work without its identity being disclosed."

WOMEN AS CANDIDATES HINDER DOCTOR'S LEAVE

Director of Hygiene in Schools Confronted by Difficulty in Making Race for Senate.

Impending entrance of St. Louis women into the political arena as candidates for office is said to be complicating the affairs of Dr. James Stewart, director of hygiene for the Board of Education, and a candidate for the Republican nomination for State Senator in the Thirty-second district to succeed Conway Elder, who is expected to resign soon.

Dr. Stewart sounded out members of the Board as to whether he may have a leave of absence in the event he is nominated by the Republican City Committeemen whose wards compose the Thirty-second District. He said that a majority of the board members are friendly toward his ambition in the matter. Richard Murphy, former president of the board, and Stephen Wagner, another member, said, however, that informal discussions of the matter had convinced them the majority of the members were inclined to oppose the idea of a leave for Stewart.

Their objection is that in the spring, when women are likely to be candidates for the Board of Education and the Board of Aldermen, there may be a number of women school teachers who will want to run for a place on one board or the other, and that if Stewart is granted a leave at this time, it will set a precedent that may cause no end of trouble later, and possibly wind up by dragging the schools back into politics, from which they had been extricated with considerable trouble.

MAN'S FALL AGAINST RIPSAW CAUSES LOSS OF RIGHT ARM

Elmer Litzsinger of Clayton Loses Footing When Operating Machine in Lumber Mill.

Elmer Litzsinger, 29 years old, of 402 Coleman avenue, Clayton, yesterday afternoon suffered the amputation of his right arm below the elbow as a result of being cut at 1:15 p. m., by a ripsaw at the plant of the Clayton Mill and Lumber Co.

Litzsinger was operating the saw, cutting two-inch lumber, when he lost his footing and fell against the blade.

He was taken to St. John's Hospital, where the arm was amputated.

INDIAN SOCIETY TO MEET HERE TOMORROW

Several Hundred Delegates Expected to Attend Convention of Tribal Rights Organization.

The 1920 convention of the Society of American Indians will open at the Planters Hotel tomorrow, to continue in session until Saturday. Several hundred delegates, a number from each of the 100 tribes represented in the membership of 1700, will attend.

Organization of Amrican Indians into a society designed to "give the Indian equal opportunity with the white man to develop according to the laws of evolution" was begun in 1911 at Ohio University under the direction of Dr. F. H. McKenzie, a sociologist. Representatives of seven tribes formed the present society in October, 1911, at the university.

Thomas L. Sloan of Washington, D. C., president of the society, arrived in St. Louis yesterday. He is an attorney with a practice consisting principally of hearings before Congressional committees on Indian affairs. The Indian has been misruled, Sloan said yesterday.

He quoted H. P. Snyder of New York, chairman of the House Committee on Indian Affairs, to show that the Indian Bureau of the Department of the Interior has always usurped "every function of Government in handling the business of Indians." Indians, some of whom are citizens, are subjected to arbitrary regulation of their personal and property rights, Sloan said, and have no court to which they may appeal.

How an Appropriation Went.

Quoting a speech in Congress of Senator Edwin S. Johnson of South Dakota, Sloan showed that of a $25,000 appropriation in 1917 for the Kiowa and Comanche tribes, the sum of $8.36 reached the tribes for subsistence. The rest went into salaries for white employes and their expenses.

Representatives of the society appear frequently before Congress to plead for recognition of the Indian's claims against the Government. Self-government, full citizenship and the use of Indian appropriations for the benefit of Indians are the principal objects of the society.

Sloan is a member of the Omaha tribe, which at one time was united with the Osages, who were the original inhabitants of the St. Louis section of the Mississippi Valley. Being required by increasing population to move westward made the Osages tremendously wealthy, Sloan said.

The tribe first went to Kansas, where railroads soon began to bid for the Government lands appropriated for the tribe. The land was sold at $1.25 an acre and the Osages moved to Osage County, Oklahoma, buying the lands of the Cherokee tribe there. Then came the discovery of oil, Osage County proving one of the richest of the fields, and the tribe gained wealth amounting to millions of dollars.

Opening Reception at Planters.

The convention will open at 8 p. m. tomorrow with a reception at the Planters given by the Missouri Historical Society, the Academy of Science, the Naturalists' Club, the Anthropological Society, the Archaeological Society and the St. Louis Convention, Publicity and Tourist Bureau. Mayor Kiel will welcome the delegates, and representatives of the organizations giving the reception, will speak. Business sessions will take up Tuesday morning and in the afternoon the Rev. Red Fox of North Dakota and Miss Emma J. Goulette will speak on Indian citizenship and Government obligations.

A number of old chiefs will speak Wednesday morning. The afternoon session will be at Jefferson Memorial, where D. R. Francis, president of the Missouri Historical Society, will speak. Thursday there will be addresses by prominent Indians and Thursday evening representatives of reservation tribes will give an Indian show at Soldan High School. Friday the delegates will visit the Cahokia mound.

BRITISH CONSUL HERE GIVES THREATENING LETTER TO POLICE

Furnishes Copy of Note Saying Reprisals Will Be Carried Out Against English.

W. B. Mackness, British Consul in St. Louis, furnished Chief of Police O'Brien yesterday with the text of a letter recently sent from New York to the British Chief Secretary for Ireland in which reprisals are threatened against Englishmen in the United States if there are any reprisals against the Irish people on or after today.

Copies of the threat also were sent by Mackness to 120 chiefs of police in this consular district, comprising Missouri, Tennessee, Kentucky, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Kansas and Colorado.

The State Department recently was apprised of the threat by the British Ambassador and started an investigation.

French Mine Strike Postponed

PARIS, Nov. 13.—It is officially announced that the coal miners' strike, which was to have been called for Monday unless the companies agreed before midnight tonight to enter into discussion concerning an increase of the miners' salaries, has been postponed. The miners decided to await the outcome of a meeting between the owners and representatives of the men on Thursday.

WOOD ESTATE SHOWS BALANCE OF $492,137

Seventh Settlement of Former Banker's Property Filed by Executor.

A seventh settlement in the estate of Henry Wood, dairyman and banker, who died in 1917, was filed in the Probate Court yesterday by Attorney Frank B. Coleman, representing the executor, George M. Block. It shows a balance of $492,137.55 still in charge of the executor and which eventually will be distributed to beneficiaries.

Wood's estate was valued in excess of $3,000,000. By his will, certain hospitals were made principal beneficiaries. His widow, Mrs. Minnie Wood, was bequeathed only an annuity of $2400 pursuant to an alleged separation agreement made 18 years ago. However, she renounced widow's dower provided by law, which, in this instance, was one-half of the estate.

Probate Judge Holtcamp decided in her favor and by his order the executor, as partial distribution, turned over to her securities with a face value of $1,000,000. The rest of the estate, minus what the executor still has, was turned over to the St. Louis Union Trust Co. as trustee for other beneficiaries.

An appeal in the dower matter was taken from the Probate Judge's ruling, and, according to Attorney Coleman, final decision is expected soon, as the appeal was argued and submitted in the Supreme Count Jan. 21 last. The principal beneficiaries mentioned in the will were the Bethesda Hospital, St. Luke's Hospital, Jewish Hospital and the St. Louis Children's Hospital. All but the first mentioned opposed Mrs. Wood's claim of dower.

A specific bequest of $20,000 was made to Alma Cummings, 9 years old, 4909 Parkview place, to whom Wood took a fancy.

Thomas Young, 63 years old, 1905 Ohio avenue, East St. Louis, was crossing Eads Bridge at 6 o'clock last night when he was struck by a motor cycle ridden by Frank Miller, 2104 North Thirteenth street, East St. Louis. Young suffered a compound fracture of the left leg, and Miller, who was thrown from his motor cycle, suffered a deep scalp wound. Both were taken to the city hospital.

Miller was held for careless driving.

CHAUFFEUR BADLY INJURED IN COLLISION OF TRUCKS

Suffers Fractured Ribs and Internal Hurts When His Machine Is Overturned by Impact.

Henry Abrams, 22 years old, chauffeur for a cleaning establishment, suffered several fractured ribs and internal injuries when a truck he was driving collided with another truck, driven by R. E. Williams, 1224 Benton street, at Belt and Bartmer avenues at 4 p. m. yesterday.

Abrams' truck was thrown against a post and was overturned. He was taken to his home, 5518A Wells avenue, where it was said his condition was believed to be serious. Williams was uninjured. No arrests were made.

POSTOFFICE STATUS DEPENDS ON HARDING

Clamor Goes Up to Have Him Revoke Wilson Ruling Putting Jobs Under Civil Service.

By the Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—A salary list of about $225,000 for first and second class postmasterships in Missouri, in addition to the total of the small sums paid to the heads of third-class offices, is involved in the decision that President-elect Harding will have to make on the executive order of President Wilson, protecting the postoffices from the political pie-hunters.

Clamor has already gone up from "the boys" to have the order set aside and the jobs thrown open as they were in the old days of unrestricted application of the doctrine "to the victors belong the spoils." No one can now say whether or not Harding will yield.

Order Issued in 1917.

Fourth-class postmasterships are protected under the civil service by law. In September, 1917, President Wilson issued an executive order putting the remaining offices under civil service. But there is no law safeguarding them. What Wilson did, Harding can undo if he sees fit. A stroke of the pen and the Wilson order could be set aside and the jobs put back on the old basis. Hence it is that the present flock of Democratic postmasters, except those commissioned and confirmed for a definite period of service, will hold on only so long as Harding chooses to let the Wilson order stand.

Republican Congressmen, who want some patronage to hand out to their workers, assert that the Wilson order of 1917 was merely a crafty Burlesonian scheme to perpetuate a lot of Democratic postmasters in office. They point out that just before Taft went out and Wilson came in eight years ago, some 1400 Republican postmasters were refused confirmation by the Senate, merely in order to save the jobs for "deserving Democrats." Burleson, they say, waited until he had all the offices filled and then got the President to put them under civil service so that the incumbents could not be removed except for cause. The Republican politicians are asking why Harding should not revoke the order, fill the postoffices with Republicans and then restore the order.

Republicans in Office.

Democrats naturally dissent from the Republican interpretation of the motive behind the Wilson order. In fact, they say Burleson tore the party organization to pieces by taking away the postoffice patronage. They assert that offices have been filled, under the examination system, by Democrats and Republicans in about equal numbers.

With the postoffices eliminated, the Federal patronage in Missouri amounts to comparatively little. There are the two judicial districts, each with a District Attorney and three deputies and a Marshal and deputies. There are also collectors of revenue, with deputies, at St. Louis and Kansas City. The District Attorney gets $4500 a year and the Marshal $4000. Though the scramble has begun for jobs, the places are not as attractive as they were before the cost of living soared.

G. O. P. STATE COMMITTEE TO MEET HERE WEDNESDAY

Governor-Elect Hyde and Others Successful in Recent Election to Attend, Chairman Says.

The Republican State Committee has been called to meet in St. Louis at 10 a. m. Wednesday, Chairman J. G. Hughes yesterday announced at his home in Macon. Its sessions will be held at the Planters Hotel.

Hughes said that Governor-elect Hyde would attend the meeting and that he expected a number of other Republicans elected to State offices also to be present.

Organization plans for the next two years will form the burden of business to be transacted, he said, indicating that the Executive Committee intends to keep open the Republican State headquarters now being maintained in the International Life Building.

A second Republican meeting here this week will be the conference of Republican State Senators and Senators-elect at the Planters Saturday, called by Hiram Lloyd, Lieutenant-Governor-elect.

THE NASH FOUR

$1395 with Cord Tires
F. O. B. MILWAUKEE

The new Nash Four, a product of expert engineering and expert manufacture, is now shown for your inspection.

It is a quality motor car, light in weight but strongly and finely built to endure the hardest service.

Like the Nash Six, it has two conspicuous and outstanding features—unusual power, due to its Nash Perfected Valve-in-Head Motor and really exceptional beauty of design and finish.

Notable, too, is the low operating cost of this car.

Tests covering many thousands of miles have demonstrated that the Nash Four is unusually saving of gasoline, oil and tires.

The character of the Nash Four may be judged not only by sturdy excellence of construction but in the fineness of the many important details which make for superior comfort and convenience.

It will be produced in a new Nash factory at Milwaukee, a plant specially constructed and equipped to produce this car.

When operating at full capacity, this new plant will equal in volume of output the present big Nash factory at Kenosha, where 50,000 Nash Sixes are being built this year.

We will welcome the opportunity to show you the Nash Four at your earliest convenience.

JENNY LIND
Chickering
Established 1823

ALL the world has just celebrated the hundredth anniversary of the birth of the "Swedish Nightingale," the picturesque and poetic sobriquet affectionately given to the great singer.

One cannot think of JENNY LIND without thinking also of the great piano to whose accompaniment she sang. The piano she loved so well that she signed it with her unforgettable name, and upon which at many of her concerts she played her own accompaniments—the CHICKERING.

Fragrant and beautiful memories cluster about the name "CHICKERING"—for nearly a hundred years it has been a household word in this great country of ours.

Its tone is as peerless in the pianoforte field as was JENNY LIND's voice in the vocal field.

JENNY LIND's choice was a natural one. The association of her voice with the music of the CHICKERING an ideal one.

Great singers, violinists and pianists of today are proudly associating themselves with the CHICKERING—the oldest and most celebrated of all pianos made in America.

The Original Chickering Piano Used by Jenny Lind Is on Exhibition for a Limited Time, in Our Music Salon—Sixth Floor.

REASONS ADVANCED FOR FALL IN VALUE OF FRANC

Harding's Declarations About "Decease" of League of Nations Given as a Factor.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 13.—Reasons advanced for the fall in the value of the franc, and the rise in that of the dollar, and the pound sterling have been assembled by the Paris edition of the London Daily Mail. Five reasons are argued by Lloyd's National and Provincial Bank. These are:

1. The optimistic declarations by M. Francoie-Marsal (the Minister of Finance), whose promise that a better rate of exchange in the near future led people who desired pounds for covering purposes to wait. The reverse of what was expected happened, however, and the panic ensued.
2. President-elect Harding's declaration about the "decease" of the League of Nations.
3. Great Britain and France are entirely in the hands of America. and elements in America hostile to the allies are doing their utmost to depreciate the pound and the franc.
4. The dearness of money in America and England is prompting the people of these countries to recall the francs they have in France.
5. The heavy debt of France and Great Britain to America.

Challis' Opinion.

M. Challis of the London County and Westminster Bank gave this opinion:

"France is buying dollars through London. This is one cause of the fall in the franc. Speculators in the inner circle find out what contracts are coming off and they sell or buy to their advantage. This is proven by the rise and fall of the franc within a few days. Overproduction in America causes American business men to close out their holdings in francs and realize in dollars."

The manager of the exchange department of Cox & Co., Ltd., is quoted thus:

"The exchange rate is not made in Paris. We are absolutely dependent here on New York."

French Editorial View.

M. Betrel, financial editor of La Liberte, said:

"State debts and private debts have to be paid, and Americans are certainly at present on the whole withdrawing their money from France and turning it into dollars. Besides, we have now to pay ready money for large shipments of American coal."

The exchange manager of the Banque Anglo Sud Americaine, said:

"The situation is very serious. Speculation, I am sure, plays quite a small part in the depreciation of the franc. One reason is heavy recent purchases of American coal. Another cause is lack of faith abroad in French credit. Our remedy is to produce more coal. That is the chief bill we have to pay abroad. We must also cut down expenses."

IOWA BOY, ROBBED, ASKS POLICE TO HELP HIM GET HOME

Lad, 14, Who Left Home to Travel With Show, Had Been Sought Since Oct. 8.

Ernest Morford, 14 years old, of Cedar Rapids, Ia., walked into the Newstead Avenue Police Station yesterday and said he had been robbed of all his possessions and was stranded and asked for help in getting back to his parents.

His father, Charles F. Morford, he said, was station agent for the C. & N. W. Railroad at Cedar Rapids, Ia. Last August, he said, with his mother's permission, he left home to travel with a doll concession attached to a traveling show. He left the show at Cape Girardeau and came to St. Louis intending to go home. At the Tower Grove station, he said, he fell asleep and someone stole his grip, leaving him only $1.

The police records here show that Chief of Police Morrison of Cedar Rapids on Oct. 8 sent out the boy's photograph and description asking police to be on the lookout for him, saying his parents were "almost distracted" over his absence and believed some harm had come to him.

The boy was sent to the House of Detention pending word from his father.

DR. JESSE M. THREADGILL IS ACQUITTED ON MURDER CHARGE

Jury Reaches Verdict 15 Minutes After Close of Testimony—Trial of Son May Not Be Held.

Dr. Jesse M. Threadgill of 5769 Westminster place was acquitted by a jury in Circuit Court at Belleville Friday of a charge of murder based upon an alleged operation performed upon Mrs. Veda Connelly of East St. Louis, which resulted in her death on Nov. 15, 1919.

Testimony consumed two days and the jury's verdict was arrived at in 15 minutes. Dr. Threadgill testified that when he was called upon to attend the woman, a criminal operation already had been performed and that he performed a secondary operation in an effort to save her life.

Dr. Threadgill's son, Jesse M. Threadgill Jr., is under indictment also in connection with Mrs. Connelly's death. His trial had been set for tomorrow. It is not certain that it now will take place.

Sergeant's Body Sent From France.

Gallagher, 3508 North Twenty-fifth street. The Joseph Fournier Post of the American Legion will be in charge of the funeral.

MARRIAGE ON HARDING'S SHIP

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13. — The United Fruit steamer Pastores, selected to bring President-elect Harding back to the United States after he inspects the Panama Canal zone, started south today, after a wedding ceremony had been performed aboard her while she lay at her pier. This was regarded by the crew as "about the luckiest thing that can happen aboard ship." The bride was Miss Dorothy Shale of New York, and the bridegroom Charles J. Roy of Brownsville, Tex. They had planned to be married tomorrow on Roy's birthday, but he was suddenly called to South America on business and the couple decided to make a honeymoon out of the trip.

President-elect Harding's party will board the Pastores at Colon and will occupy 32 rooms on the ship. Senator Hale of Maine is among those for whom reservations have been made on the return trip.

The first annual festival of the American Legion will be held at the Coliseum the week of Dec. 7 to 12. The show will last from 6 until 12 o'clock each night and will be called "The Battle of Paris." The arrangements call for 30 feature booths, one nationally known speaker or singer each night, pageant drills, air raids, cafes, dances, athletics and the Symphony Orchestra. A daily newspaper will be published during the period of the festival under the auspices of the American Legion reflecting the activities of the organization.

Members of the Women's Auxiliary, American Legion, and associated auxiliaries are urged to offer their services at Rooms 18 to 28, Arcade Building, starting tomorrow morning, to assist in making decorations to be used in the Coliseum during the festival. One hundred women are required to do this work.

The Executive Committee of the American Legion opened an office at Room 403, Security Building, about three months ago to assist in coordinating the Legion posts. William, N. Phillips, formerly a lieutenant band leader for the 128th Field Artillery, is secretary in charge. Many requests for aid are made by ex-service men. The purpose of the festival is to provide funds for this work.

The Citizens' Milk Committee, which proposes to work for purer milk in St. Louis and to establish itself as a permanent sentinel over milk here, will hold its organization meeting in the Scruggs-Vandervoort Auditorium Tuesday at 10:30 a. m.

Organizations desiring to align themselves with the 20 already enlisted, as well as individuals willing to work, are invited to the meeting.

Mrs. M. G. Seeling, who organized the movement for the Council of Jewish Women and the League of Women Voters, yesterday discussed tentative plans which are designed to correct conditions of production of milk in Southern Illinois, transit to St. Louis, handling by distributors here and care in the homes after delivery.

"If we can succeed with our plans," Mrs. Seelig said, "St. Louis will find its milk better than the product which lately has caused physicians to declare that it is unfit food for infants.

"First, we propose to work in the Board of Estimate and Apportionment for sufficient funds for the Health Department to employ inspectors to go to Illinois farmers and tell them how to produce milk cleanly, which they are not now doing. Second, the inspectors will inform them that if they do not follow the instruction their milk will not be permitted to enter St. Louis. Of course, St. Louis inspectors will have no legal status in Illinois, but we feel sure that they will correct their methods when they learn that St. Louis distributors have been told that if they sell the milk of one whose product is not clean that their license will be revoked.

Several Inspectors Required.

"This plan is the suggestion made by Dr. Carl L. Alsberg of the United States Department of Agriculture, and recently was approved by Director of Public Welfare Schmoll. However, Mr. Schmoll thought that four inspectors would be enough. We desire more in order that the 7000 producers in Southern Illinois may be thoroughly covered.

"Our second consideration will be milk in transit. Milk now comes to St. Louis in baggage cars which are hot alike in summer and winter and whose heat multiplies the bacteria that constitute a threat to public health. We will learn, first, from railroads if refrigerated cars can be provided; if not, then milk trains, and if not milk trains, then we will seek some other solution. We expect to call on whatever recognized authorities we can find to help us.

"Our third consideration will be the St. Louis distributors and those dairies within the city which produce as well as distribute milk. We expect to ask the Board of Estimate and Apportionment also to increase the number of dairy inspectors in the city to whatever number it appears are necessary to control a situation we know to be bad. There are only four inspectors now engaged in going among the more than 100 dairies here.

"We expect to demand that the ordinance requirements regarding bacteria count in milk be enforced. They are not now. [illegible] expect to demand that proper pasteurization shall take place. It is not now. We expect to demand that the physical surroundings of dairies be sanitary and clean. The surroundings, except in occasional dairies, is not now clean.

Changes in Law Essential.

"In this connection, we expect to appoint a legislative committee to draft changes in the present ordinance. We, of course, cannot yet say what changes are necessary. However, we shall call upon a milk expert of the U. S. Department of Agriculture to aid us in this regard and shall consult our local authorities as to practical changes.

"Lastly, we expect to teach housewives how to care for milk so that if milk ever does arrive at their doorstep in an irreproachable product, they will now how to maintain its purity. We hope to accomplish this by meetings in schools conducted by the ward chairmen of the League of Women Voters.

"It is a pretentious program, I know, but the job must be thoroughly done or not touched. We expect to make our organization a permanent one, working with a sufficient budget to do whatever is necessary to accomplish our purpose."

The chief speaker at Tuesday's meeting will be Mrs. George Hoxie, wife of a Kansas City physician, who has led a fight for pure milk in Kansas City for eight years. She will recite lessons in campaigning learned by Kansas City women and otherwise advise the new organization.

J. Charless Cabanne, president of the St. Louis Dairy Co., will read a paper on the progress of the milk business in St. Louis.

The Health Department has complained, in discussing the St. Louis milk supply, that often courts and other punitive agencies have hampered the effort of the department to correct faults in dairies. Police Judge Mix will discuss this phase of the situation. There will be other speakers also.

Officers of the organization will be elected and an executive committee to direct the campaign named.

Navy to Economize on Oil.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Nov. 13.—Because of the fuel oil shortage, naval vessels equipped with oil burning engines were ordered today to reduce their speed. Economy in consumption was enjoined in the order by Secretary Daniels, which said: "In view of present fuel oil shortage, strict economy in consumption of fuel oil must be observed. Fuel oil burning vessels will steam at economical speed, except when carrying out urgent military duties or exercises. The use of tugs, launches and harbor craft shall be limited to strictly naval duty and fuel oil thereby conserved."

MINER EN ROUTE TO SERBIA FOR WIFE AND CHILD ROBBED HERE

Tells Police He Lost $850 in Negro Resort, but Search for Money Is Fruitless.

Essa Petrovich, 43 years old, a miner of Hiawatha, Utah, rooming here at 2005 South Third street while en route to Serbia to get his wife and child he left there in 1912, reported to policemen last night that he had been robbed of $850, part of his savings, in a negro resort at 210 Poplar street.

Petrovich said he had $1500 when he arrived in St. Louis 10 days ago. He spent some of the money, he said, and had the $850 in his hip pocket. After leaving the resort, he said, he went uptown to buy an overcoat and there discovered his loss. Policemen who returned to the house with him arrested a negress he pointed out, but she did not have any of the money when searched. He told the police he would have to return to the mines and work a few more years unless he recovered his money.

MRS. CHAPLIN TO GO BACK TO MUSIC STUDY

Lately Divorced Wife of Comedian to Play Under Own Name in Future.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 13. — Mildred Harris Chaplin, just divorced from "Charlie" Chaplin, and with a reported $200,000 of his money as assurance against any Broadway wolves peeking into her pantry, said today that she would depart for New York Monday, where she will resume her musical studies, preliminary to appearance upon the spoken stage.

"The use of Charlie Chaplin's name has hurt me," she said. "I was a bigger star before I became known to the public as his wife than I am now. I was fast becoming known to the world as Charlie Chaplin's wife, instead of a star in my own right. Professionally, therefore, I am glad to be definitely separated forever from the name Chaplin."

Mrs. Chaplin wore a Parisian frock of black satin heavily beaded in parrot green with bizarre dulled peacock blue embroideries.

She took occasion emphatically to deny that it was part of the agreement between Chaplin and herself, incident to the divorce, that she should stop using his name.

"Neither Mr. Chaplin nor myself ever discussed such a thing," she exclaimed. "However, hereafter I will be known to the public as Mildred Harris, but legally I shall remain Mrs. Charles Spencer Chaplin."

The nature of the property settlement between the Chaplins continues to be kept secret, although it is known that $107,500 is due Mrs. Chaplin now, as this appears from a statement presented to Judge York, who granted the divorce, by the attorneys in the case. Of this amount $50,000 is to be paid at once, it was stipulated and the remainder on or before Dec. 31, 1920.

Since arriving here from New York quite recently Mrs. Chaplin has purchased property as a home site in Beverly Hills, a suburb popular with motion picture stars. She says that upon it she intends to build a home for her mother, Mrs. Anna Foote Harris, and herself.

MADRID, Nov. 13.—Civil service employes have sent a unanimous petition to the Government, requesting the establishment of co-operative stores for their use as a means of reducing the cost of living. The petition is a result of the recent refusal of the Government to increase salaries, and it is indicated the request will be granted.

SUIT TO ENJOIN COMPETITION

Chicago Portrait Co. Files Action Against Former Employes.

The Chicago Portrait Co. yesterday filed suit in the Circuit Court for an injunction to restrain W. E. Penturf and Edgar de Lyle from engaging in a competitive business with that firm in Missouri, Kansas and Arkansas. The suit is based on an alleged agreement by which the defendants were to refrain from becoming business rivals of the Chicago concern in this territory within a year from the time they left his employ. Penturf, as general agent, quit June 15 last and De Lyle as collector quit Aug. 12. Notwithstanding their agreement they since have been endeavoring to get plaintiff's trade and employes, it is alleged.

Judge Falkenhainer issued an order for the defendants to show cause why an injunction should not be granted.

It Appears That His Chops Are Not the Only Thing the Princeton Tiger Can Lick

PRINCETON RUNS OVER YALE TEAM FOR 20-0 VICTORY

Capt. Callahan, Murrey, Lourie and Keck Score Points That Defeat Eli.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 13.

PRINCETON is ablaze tonight, and hilarity knows no restraint. The Tigers piled up points this afternoon in a way to beat Yale by a score of 20 to 0, and the joy of it has gone to every Princeton man's head.

Far back in 1896 Garry Cochran's team defeated Yale by a score of 24 to 6. That was 24 years ago and in the long stretch of time since that November day the men of Princeton have enjoyed the big thrill only five times but never by such a score as was rolled up in the Palmer Stadium this afternoon before a seething, cheering, singing, color-bedecked crowd of 50,000 men and women.

No pen can accurately paint the picture of Princeton's mad enthusiasm which took form and substance when Frank Murrey drop-kicked a goal from the field from the 35-yard line on the very first play of the second period and then grew by leaps and bounds as the game progressed until it burst in wild revel on and over the gridiron in the first snake dance Princeton men have enjoyed on their own field at the expense of Yale since 1903, 17 long years ago.

Lourie Makes Long Run.

Following Murrey's drop-kick which started the Tigers on their way the fires of the aforementioned enthusiasm were fed by a dashing sensational 41-yard run to a touchdown by Don Lourie from a fake placement kick formation on the last play of the second quarter by another touchdown on the fourth play in their third period when Thorne Murphy of Yale fumbled a punt and Capt. Mike Callahan snapped up the loose ball and danced over the goal line and by a goal from placement late in the third period when Stan Keck added to his name and fame and three points to the score by shooting the ball true to the mark after Lourie had made a fair catch on Yale's 37-yard line.

So the scores were made and so new names have been mentioned. Joe Scherer, by his remarkable punting; Ralph Gilroy, by his wonderful defensive play; Shad Davis and Legendre by their speed in recovering punts and by their deadly tackling; Mel Dickinson, Jim McManmon, Bob Hooper and last, but not least, Hank Gharrity, did their part in a way to make Bill Roper's football eleven of 1920 stand out as one of the greatest and best ever developed in this jungle town.

Lineup and Summary

Princeton.	Position.	Yale.
Legendre	L. E.	Cutler
Keck	L. T.	Into
McManmon	L. C.	Acosta
H. Callahan (C)	C.	Cross
Dickinson	R. G.	J. Callahan Captain.
Hooper	R. T.	Walker
Stinson	R. E.	Dilworth
Lourie	Q. B	Murphy
Gilroy	L. H. B.	Campbell
Garrity	R. H. B.	Kelley
Murrey	F. B.	Jordan

Scores by periods:

Princeton	0	13	7	0	—20
Yale	0	0	0	0	— 0

Touchdowns: Lourie, Callahan. Goals from touchdowns: Keck 2; Field goals: Murrey, Keck.

Referee: W. Crowell, Swarthmore. Umpire: T. J. Thorpe, Columbia. Field judge: V. A. Schwartz, Brown. Headlinesman: G. N. Bankard, Dartmouth. Time of periods: 15 minutes.

Yale made a good fight as Yale teams always do. but the eleven lacked real football instinct and was swept ruthlessly aside more easily even than the score indicates.

The defense was really strong from tackle to tackle against close formation plays, but it was easily split in the open and made to look worse by loose, if not poor, tackling. The offense was so narrow and confined that it was practically impotent against Princeton's strong defense, so that opportunities for scoring, few as they were, could not be grasped.

New Haven Eleven Had Only One Chance to Score During Entire Game

Yale did have one fair chance to escape a shut-out when Thorne Murphy tried to drop-kick a goal from the field when standing on the 32-yard line about the middle of the second period. The ball, however, went wide of the posts and thereafter the Tigers were never in real danger.

Just before the game began a quick thinker remarked: "Princeton has got faith, high hope and Hank Garrity."

As a matter of fact, Princeton had far more than faith, hope and Garrity. The Orange and Black had Don Lourie, Jose Scherer, Mike Callahan and all the rest. But Garrity was the same thorn in the flesh of Yale as he was in the flesh of Harvard a week ago.

Hank Garrity Real Star.

This Boston boy was ever a dangerous threat. He made two dashing runs, one for 27 yards and another for 26, by aiming at one spot in the line and quickly sliding off another; he was at the business end of two or three forward passes and he was a bulwark on defense with Ralph Gilroy.

It is not easy to pick out one particular Princeton man and mark him as the hero of the game. Stan Keck was always conspicuous, a really brilliant tackle, Don Lourie was spectacular in his 41-yard run for a touchdown, Mike Callahan was alert in joining with Sam White and Joe Scherer, and John De Witt and Arthur Poe and Herman Suter in performing Princeton's well-known and justly celebrated loose ball trick. But Hank Garrity's name will go down in football history.

For the first time since the Palmer Stadium was erected it was necessary to build a temporary wooden stand at the open south end. And even then hundreds, perhaps thousands, who clamored to get in were turned away disappointed.

As a matter of fact Princeton entertained the biggest crowd in all Princeton history. And while this host of 50,000 men and women was more or less drab looking in moments of repose, it was flaming in color in moments of excitment, and the exciting moments far outnumbered the quiet ones. And the day was made to order, too. The air in its exhilarating freshness was almost intoxicating, and under these conditions a game full of thrills and exciting situations, particularly for Princeton men, was played.

Princeton Opens Spectacularly, Gaining 45 Yards on First Two Plays of Game

When Callahan met Callahan, when brother met brother, and when Captain met Captain in formal handshake, as they met in the center of the gridiron with the officials to toss the coin for choice of goal, the thousands who looked on enjoyed their first sensation and wondered what Mrs. Mary Callahan, the mother of those two boys, could be thinking as she sat there in the stand rooting for both and yet rooting for neither. Or better, rooting for both, yet rooting for neither team. Mrs. Callahan was quickly forgotten, however, as Yale won the toss and elected to defend the north goal with a slight wind behind the ball.

A moment later the game was on and before the crowd could fairly settle back an exposition of Princeton's power was shown in a way that was as startling as it was bewildering to the Yale men.

Keck kicked off for Princeton and Murphy punted on the first down for Yale. Lourie fumbled the ball momentarily, but quickly recovered as he was buried under the mass of Yale tacklers on his own 40-yard line. Then, quick as a flash, came the first sensation. Frank Murrey, from kick formation, dashed 33 yards around Yale's right end and before the excitement had died down Lourie tore his way around the other end for 12 yards, landing the ball on Yale's 15-yard line.

Tigers Open Spectacularly.

Princeton men could hardly believe riot of noise and color. Dreams seemed to be coming true and the world was standing still. Nothing came of this spectacular opening. that is, nothing concrete in the way of an early score, as the Tigers were penalized 5 yards for offside on the next play and the forward pass was intercepted by a wide awake fellow from New Haven. But this same spectacular opening which netted 45 yards for Princeton in two rushes put Yale on the defensive and there the Bulldog stayed for the entire first period and the greater part of the second.

The Tigers kept forcing the play—opening the attack wide with forward passes, and runs and split plays off tackle ever pressing, ever threatening. The Yale men fell back and three times punted on the first down and once on the second in an effort to carry the game out of their own territory until just as the first period ended it was Princeton's ball on the 35-yard line for the fourth down.

In that one minute rest anxiety could be seen on the faces of the Yale men gathered in the towering stands and high hope on the faces of all Princeton men. There was reason for both, as the first play in the second period showed.

Murray Kicks Field Goal.

Murray dropped back and with coolness personified and unerring accuracy drop-kicked a goal from the field from a rather difficult angle. And how the Princeton men did rise with lungs wide open. It was like a barrage of Gatling guns, and from

HOW THEY LOOK IN STREET ATTIRE.

Tigers had tasted blood and as it turned out there was no stopping their wild career.

As play progressed in the second period, Yale made its one determined march. It was the first time the men from New Haven had opened up their offense and it looked sound. They carried the ball from their own 43-yard line rather deep in Princeton territory, Kelly slipping off tackle for 11 yards, the longest individual gain for a Yale man during the game, while Jordan quickly added nine more. A forward pass for five yards and two or three short plunges finally landed the ball on Princeton's 22-yard line, a clean gain of about 35 yards, but the Princeton defense stiffened and Murphy was forced to try a drop kick which went wide of the mark.

Thereafter Princeton's game was triumphant and Yale's despairing. It did not take long for the Tigers to again carry the ball into Yale territory and they scored a touchdown on the last play of the first half, which might have been saved to Yale by a little quick thinking. After losing three yards and then two on two rushes, Murphy punted from his own goal line on the third down when more time could have been kiled with one more running play. The punt carried 40 yards and then came some quick thinking on the part of Lourie. He signalled for a try at goal from placement and Stan Keck went back to make the kick.

Lourie knelt on one knee to place the ball and went through every motion like a finished actor, but suddenly jumped to his feet and whirled off to the right side of the Yale line.

Once under way there was no stopping him. He outfooted one Yale man who had a rare chance for a diving tackle, dodged another and the rest was easy as the interference provided by his teammates was well-nigh perfect. They simply took out every Yale man that loomed up as dangerous and Lourie romped over the goal line and Keck kicked the goal from touchdown as the half ended.

The relaxation between the two halves was crowded full of entertainment, mostly by Princeton men, and the second began in a way that might well have broken Yale's spirit.

Capt. Mike Grabs Loose Ball.

Yale kicked off to Princeton's 30-yard line. One rush by Garrity netted four yards and then Scherer sent a long punt booming down the field. Murphy was all set for the catch on his own 25-yard line, but as he juggled the ball Davis crashed in for a tackle and the elusive pigskin went bobbing towards Yale's goal in the most tantalizing way.

Capt. Mike Callahan was the Sam White of the moment. He snapped up the loose ball and had to run only eight or 10 yards to plant it behind the goal line. He added one point to the goal and the score read 17 to 0.

Five minutes later a 50-yard punt by Scherer rolled to Yale's 2-yard line and as Aldrich, who had been substituted for Campbell, punted out from behind his own goal line, Lourie made a fair catch on the 36-yard line. Then up stepped the ever present Stan Keck and sent the ball whirling between the posts and over the bar for another three points and another burst of cheers from the Princeton side of the field.

Thereafter the Tigers played largely on the defensive. The score was 20 to 0, the game was won. But Yale never gave up. With Fido Kempton directing the team in place of Murphy every effort was made to save the game from utter rout, but try as they would nothing availed and the game finally ended in a whirl of Orange and Black.

Princeton Shows Alertness.

The Princeton team having recovered from the unsteadiness against Harvard rose to great heights this afternoon and fairly found itself. The possibilities suggested more than once were amply expressed.

The offense was not particularly well sustained for any long marches, but it carried a punch which justified its conception. There was drive and shiftiness and alertness, so well combined that there was no telling where the blow would strike or when.

The defense, too, was solid and compact. Profiting from the mistakes of the Harvard game, the backs did the man in defending against the forward pass and this made Yale's overhead attack look worse than it really was.

The Princeton's forwards, outweighed from eight pounds to the man, clearly outcharged and outplayed their heavier opponents. They broke through so sharply that many a Yale play was spoiled in the making and their tackling was ever sure, sharp and deadly. As it played today, it was the best Princeton eleven seen in 15 years. The offense and scope and variety. The defense was sure and firm.

DAVIES' 43-YARD RUN GIVES PANTHERS VICTORY OVER W. & J. ELEVEN

PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 13.—Thirty-five thousand persons crowded into Fodbes Field here today to witness the annual Western Pennsylvania football classic, which resulted in a 7-to-0 victory for the University of Pittsburg over Washington and Jefferson College.

The only score of the game was registered by the Panthers late in the first period when, after Pitt had recovered a fumble, Davies, on a fake punt formation, took the ball, went through the line and ran 43 yards to a touchdown.

Davies was the outstanding star of the game. He was in practically every play and his ability to break up forward passes kept the visitors from scoring. Both teams threatened to score several times, but failed because the backs fumbled the ball when near the goal.

DONZA BOXES LIKE REAL STAR IN TRYOUT HERE

Ashton Donza, the former national amateur bantamweight champion, who meets Peewee Kaiser tomorrow night at the Armory, is a shifty fellow with real fighting merit, according to local gymnasium frequenters who watched him work out Friday and Saturday at Harry Cook's. Donza is not only a shifty boxer but he has many of the mannerisms of the professional bantam champion, Pete Herman, with whom he boxed as a partner many times.

Donza has fought six professional fights, having won five of them, two by knockouts. It is expected that he will give Kaiser, the local amateur graduate, a hard encounter. Kaiser has the punch as well as the skill, and is a hard boy to trim in eigh rounds.

Other bouts on Monday night's card as announced are as follows: George Butho vs. Johnny Collins; Robert Palmer vs. Almer Farrar, and Eddie

Harvard Second String Players Beat Brown 27--0

Crimson Coaches Use 26 Athletes in Downing Eleven From Providence.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 13.—Brown's bear was trapped before a crowd of 30,000 in the Harvard Stadium today. Instead of being of the raw-meat eating kind, he was as meek as a lamb, and the Harvard football squad, for all of the Crimson players left at home, figured in the trapping, tossed him into a cage for the winter, 27 to 0. It was a somewhat disappointing afternoon for the supporters of Brown, for the aggregation which actually outplayed Yale the week before at New Haven, was made to eat out of the hand of the Crimson.

Harvard used 26 players in the taming of the beast, and three touchdowns, after which the goals were kicked, and two drop kicks from the field by Hamilton, made Crimson's decisive count the impressive total that it appears. The men from Providence, after their remarkable display of power against Yale, were expected to make things decidedly interesting for the team Harvard had to present. That they had not fully recovered from the clash with the Bulldog was in evidence from the start. They did not show any of the "stuff" for which Brown elevens are noted, and never seriously threatened the Cambridge goal.

Hamilton Kicks Field Goal.

Harvard's scoring was started in the first period when Halfback Hamilton drop-kicked a goal from the 20-yard line. The first touchdown was made early in the second period, Quarterback Johnson scooting through a perforated Brown contingent from the 16-yard line. Gratwick kicked the goal, and later in the same quarter Hamilton again drop-kicked from the 21-yard line.

It was in the third quarter that Harvard scored its second touchdown after a march from the middle of the field. Eight plays were all that were needed to give Hamilton his chance to catapult his body into the Brown forces for the score. The last touchdown was made as a result of an intercepted forward pass by Wharton, who rushed from the 30-yard line to Brown's three-yard line before he was toppled. It necessitated three plays before Rouillard was directed into the left side of the Brown line for the score. Wales kicked the goal.

No player was watched as closely as was "Duke" Sedgwick, who, acting as captain, played a remarkable game. He was all over the field. Sedgwick made several remarkable tackles, but his ability to get into the Browkn back-field before the latter could get its attack into any kind of a successful affair was the best thing he did. But closely following Sedgwick as a bulwark in the line was Charley Tierney, the center.

Backfield Works Smoothly.

The playing of Finley on left end also stood out strongly, while in the backfield, Humphrey, Hamilton and Gratwick, with Johnson driving them, worked smoothly.

Capt. Armstrong, Mike Gulian and Barrett were the only Brunonians to last through the game.

There were many attempts at forward passing, but on the whole the play was not well executed. Brown tried it many more times than did the Crimson, but it only proved a ground gainer in a few instances. Brown only made three first downs in the contest as against 16 for Harvard.

CENTRE COLLEGE ROLLS UP 49-0 SCORE; THIRD DEFEAT FOR KENTUCKY

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 13.—Crushed by the Centre College eleven, overwhelmed and humiliated by one of the most decisive defeats in her history, the University of Kentucky was whitewashed here this afternoon by the final score of 49-0.

The Kentucky Wildcats never had a chance after the first ten minutes of play. Fifteen thousand persons, ten thousand of whom were pulling with might and main for Kentucky, saw the score pile up.

By defeating Kentucky, Centre wins for the third successive year, the undisputed championship of Kentucky, and with only two defeats against her, Harvard and Georgia Tech. being the victors.

"Bo" McMillin, Centre's famous captain, did not exert himself this afternoon, he let his teammates take toll of the helpless Wildcats. He made one fifteen yard gain. The heavy Centre backs plunged down the field at will, plowing holes through Kentucky's line which were filled immediately by Centre players.

Webster Defeats Kirkwood 7 to 0

Muffed Forward Pass Spoils Losers' Opportunity to Tie the Score.

Webster High School's aggressive football team moved a step closer to the county championship, winning from the lighter Kirkwood High eleven yesterday afternoon at Francis Field by a single touchdown, scored on a forward pass in the second quarter.

Although the Webster line was superior throughout, the chief difference between the two teams was in the headwork of the quarterbacks. Time and again, in the waning moments of the game, when a touchdown would have evened the score and a forward pass seemed the logical play, Kirkwood's quarter continued to call for line bucks.

Kirkwood lost a chance to score early in the first quarter when a recovered fumble and four successive first downs, due mainly to the plunging of Capt. Payne, brought the ball down the field to Webster's 35-yard line. On the next play a forward pass was called for; but Williamson, Kirkwood's left end, with a clear field ahead and only 15 yards from goal, let a perfect pass get away from him after having both hands on the ball. After that Kirkwood never threatened.

In the second quarter Webster's heavier line and consistent plunging, coupled with a short pass over the goal line, won the contest. After an exchange of kicks and several long gains through the line by Thornton and Dunn, Webster was held for downs on Kirkwood's one-yard line. Kirkwood elected to kick, on the first play, but the effort was weak and it was Webster's ball again on the 10-yard line. Capt. Senne called for a pass, and Dunn's perfect throw found Thorton waiting behind the goal line for the ball. Thornton also kicked goal.

Kirkwood Improves Too Late.

In the second half Webster's backs continued to find holes through the line, but the team was held for downs or lost the ball through a fumble when a score seemed imminent. In the final quarter Kirkwood's attack improved noticeably and many gains were made through a shift formation; but refusal to employ any open formations brought several promising rallies to an end.

Zuppke's Halfback Counts All of Teams' Points With Three Field Goals.

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 13.—Wisconsin today tumbled Illinois out of first place in the Western conference football race by a spurt of forward passing which lasted just long enough to give the Badgers 14 points to Illinois' 9.

The Badgers staged a double comeback in winning the game. Illinois in the early quarters chalked up a 6-to-0 lead.

In the third period, the Wisconsin team lived up to its reputation for versatility and power and, with the cry of "On Wisconsin," voiced by 20,000 students and alumni who journeyed to Camp Randall for the home-coming, became supreme for a brief 10-minute period and sent over the scores which brought victory.

Every Badger play went through perfectly during this brief spurt. With Barr as the pivot, a pass to Elliott brought the first touchdown and a moment later another pass to Tebell sent over the second. Barr kicked both goals.

Illinois rallied near the end, but Wisconsin refused to loose its grip on the game. Twice Sundt, the big Wisconsin fullback, leaped high in the air to break forward passes that would have given Illinois touchdowns.

Most of the game was a punting duel, with Illinois having a slight advantage, many of Sundt's kicks going out of bounds.

The defeat placed Illinois in second place in the conference standing with a mark of four and one, Ohio State, which was idle today, leading with four victories and no defeats. Victory for Illinois next Saturday over Ohio State, would give the Illini a record of 5 and 1, while Ohio State and Wisconsin could do no better than four victories and one defeat.

Iowa's Aerial Game Is Too Much for Gophers.

IOWA CITY, Ia., Nov. 13.—Homecoming day at the University of Iowa was a marked success in the opinion of 12,000 Iowa fans, who saw the Hawkeyes football eleven romp away from the Minnesota team with a 28-to-7 victory here this afternoon.

Minnesota counted its touchdown in the first period, holding Iowa scoreless. After the second period was well under way, the outcome seemed never in doubt.

Forward passes, principally from A. Devine to Belding, figured prominently in Iowa's attack, but Locke starred by puncturing the Gopher line, or skirting its ends for long gains. He counted all four touchdowns for his team.

After Holding Milwaukee Football Rivals to 21-14 Score in First Two Periods, St. Louis University Defense Goes to Pieces—Donovan and Langhoff Star.

By John E. Wray.

FOR the better part of the first half of its annual gridiron struggle with Marquette yesterday afternoon, at Sportsman's Park, the St. Louis University eleven made a noise like a high-powered machine; but ere dusk and a pall of bituminous smoke all but shut out the finish from the view of spectators, the Billikens resembled a 1908 model flivver. Marquette, for the previous two seasons held two scoreless ties by the local team, yeterday won by a score of 49 to 14.

In the first half St. Louis University men, playing snappily and charging fast and hard, took the lead, were tied up 7-7 a little later, fell behind, then tied the count at 14 all and finally dropped astern again, 14 to 21 at the intermission period.

Up to this point it appeared to be anybody's game, both elevens showing a powerful punch and defensive weaknesses.

But something happened to the Billikens in the second half. To start with the spark plug Donovan was replaced by Connor. Whether from Donovan's absence or some other cause, the Billiken defense frittered away to a shadow and for the rest of the game the Marquette backs romped through and around the enemy, making long marches for steady gains, which four times culminated in scores.

So consistent were the Marquette ground gainers in the second half that, as the chart shows, they maintained at times an average gain of five yards per plunge. Time after time Coleman and Cronin knifed through between tackle and guard, or even through center, while Langhoff made some beautiful gains around the ends. Kuchenberg, the quarterback, was there with a reliable quick plunge through the line, that seldom failed for the needed distance.

Intercepted Passes Hurt.

Even when St. Louis received the ball, in the second half, it could do nothing. Time after time, too, the forwards were off side and five-yard penalties were frequent throughout the event.

In belated desperation St. Louis U. tried to unleash some dynamite in form of an overhead game, as the game drew near a close; but the local formations were either faulty or the visiting men had too good a defense for the pass. Several were intercepted and none accomplished anything effectual. The Billikens' sole forward passing success came during the first period, when the Billikens were marching from midfield to their first touchdown. On the 20-yard line Donovan passed to McKinney successfully for a 10-yard gain and a touchdown followed two plays later.

The game itself was a bruising exhibition of old-fashioned football, for the most part, although St. Louis used a shift with good effect in the first half, when its line was holding up well against the Marquette forwards.

A study of the charts shows a surprising feature in that all the touchdowns were the result of long marches on the part of both teams. A forward pass figured for a small gain in two touchdowns, one by each eleven, while a 15-yard penalty broke the camel's back and enabled Marquette to score once against the Billikens. But for the most part the entire afternoon was a procession first by one, then by the other eleven down the field for sustained advances resulting in scores—a kind of football that, in these times of aerial development, is as a ham tree.

The playing of Donovan was the visible feature of the Billiken team, although there was some very good work by the St. Louis U. men at times, in the first half. Donovan was the life and sparkle of the local eleven and while he was in the game in the first periods the team was at its best. When he re-entered late in the day, the punch of the eleven was gone.

St. Louis Team First to Score, Falls Behind, Then Ties the Count at Start

For the visiting team Langhoff was easily the outstanding star and his runbacks and end skirting were gems in the duller setting of plunging resorted to by the other backs. Taugher, at this style of game, was a bearcat of the grizzly species. This big burly boy hit the line low and hard and spurted through like a jet of water. Coleman, Cronin and Kenning were all good at the same style, and their form was much better than that of the Billiken backs.

The Billikens went after Marquette savagely in the first period. After a kicking exchange, St. Louis took the ball on Marquette's 30-yard line and marched it down the field in 18 plays for a touchdown. Donovan, Drace, McKinney, with a heavy emphasis on Donovan, were the big factors in the advance, with Drace plunging over for the tally.

Then came the astonishing spectacle of Marquette almost exactly duplicating the effort. Getting the ball on the St. Louis kickoff, Kenning, Taugher and Langhoff tore off 5-yard advances, with only one gain of over 6 or 7 yards. St. Louis stiffened near the goal line and, as Taugher was catapulted at the massed defense on the scoring play, he lunged across the line and then was thrown back, being downed a yard inside the field of play. The referee declared that the ball had been across the line when the whistle blew and that the score was legal, although the Billikens tried to argue the matter with him.

Langhoff kicked the first of seven successive touchdowns after this tally which tied the count at 7—7.

St. Louis Comes Back.

Getting the ball on the St. Louis kickoff, Marquette again edged its way from the 30-yard mark, mainly by short thrusts at the line, until the quarter whistle found them on St. Louis 20-yard bar.

Beginning the second quarter Marquette hammered its way across like a 10-ton truck, in six grinding plays, Kuchenberg thrusting in through the center men for the final punch.

Many thought that the Billiken's flash was over and that the game had developed into a procession, with Marquette heading the parade; but that was not to happen. For St. Louis again found itself. McKinney, taking a Marquette punt, ran it back over 30 yards, on a splendid dodging effort. The local team tore into the visitors and treated them to a savage line attack. In six plays the Billikens carried the ball to the 10-yard line, partly due to a fine dodging run by Donovan for 25 yards. A 15-yard penalty took the ball closer and [illegible] heaves Donovan went across and the score was tied by his goal kick, a moment later.

St. Louis kicked off and a new parade of Marquette down the field began again. Kuchenberg caught the ball on the kickoff and ran it back to the 20-yard line, from which point the rugged Taugher and the speedy Langhoff spurted down the field in small dashes to the St. Louis U. 20-yard line. A forward pass put the ball up to the 10-yard mark and there was no stopping the Taugher man. It was 21—14 for the visitors when Langhoff booted his third try over the bar.

Donovan Makes Final Effort.

The rooters were once more elevated to a high plane of enthusiasm when Donovan, singlehanded, tried to score and all but succeeded. He dashed 8 yards on his first try. On the next play he advanced 35 yards on what was easily the great run of the game. Donovan started to circle the left end of the enemy line, but finding that path blocked he swung back across the field, dodging through enemy tackles on every hand, gaining 35 yards before he was downed. The ball was now on the Marquette 30-yard line and the Billikens seemed set for another tally. But their bolt had been shot, although few realized it at that time. On two plays a loss resulted and Donovan fell back for a try at a field goal. It rolled over the goal line but under the bar, instead of over it.

That about ended the half—and also the Billikens offensive for the day. When they reappeared in the second half their goat and their strength was gone. Their plays had been solved and their line was a second too late in charging.

It Looked Like a Rout.

The enemy scored four touchdowns, two in each quarter, gaining ground like a tractor, slowly but with deadly certainty. They marched the ball about an average of 150 yards in each of the last two periods, by consistent hammering, with no element of luck intervening, unless intercepted passes and penalties can be called luck.

The first touchdown in the third period came from a "march" of 50 yards. The second was started by an intercepted pass in midfield and resulted from an ensuing grind down field with a 15-yard penalty helping out.

In the final quarter the plugging game continued for 70 yards, and divided into two periods, before the first touchdown came. The march to the tally was inaugurated when another forward pass was intercepted by Marquette on the Billikens' 40-yard line. The juggernaut plowed across the goal line after 11 line plays and a brilliant Langhoff run had preceded the climax.

Michigan Humbles Chicago, 14 to 0

Usher and Banks Are Stars for Yost's Machine in Game With Maroons.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 13.—Michigan's football eleven humbled Chicago here today 14 to 0. The Maroons were unable to hold the Michigan backfield men at critical moments.

Usher and Banks were the individual stars for Michigan, the former carrying the ball over for both of the Wolvering touchdowns and Banks being the leading ground gainer for Yost.

Usher crossed the Chicago line for the first score in the second period, after Banks had clipped off 20 yards on two end runs. The Michigan halfback received a pretty forward pass from Banks on Chicago's 10-yard line and carried the ball over without interference.

Early in the fourth period, Michigan began its march toward Chicago's goal for the second touchdown. The ball was carried forward by end runs and line plunges to within a few inches of the line. Usher carried it across, plunging through center. Steketee kicked both goals for Michigan.

Michigan was deprived of a third touchdown in the final period by an offside play. Goetz blocked a Chicago kick and Dunne carried the ball across the line, but it was brought back.

WILLIE JACKSON SEEKS CHANCE AT LEONARD'S LIGHTWEIGHT CROWN

"I am now ready to meet Benny Leanard for the world's lightweight championship," declared Willie Jackson in Madison Square Garden after he had stopped Eddie Fitzsimmons. "Previous to this bout I didn't feel quite sure of myself, but am now convinced that I have a good chance of winning the title.

"Yes," said "Doc" Bagby, Jackson's manager, "I have $2500 posted with the Madison Square Garden Club which I put up for a weight forfeit in the Fitzsimmons match. I'll put up a similar sum, making $5000 in all, to bind a match for the championship at the commission's weight, 135 pounds at 2 o'clock. There need be no further weighing in, the 2 o'clock scaling being sufficient.

"Of course, Leonard will have a pull in the weights in his favor, but I am convinced after the way Willie disposed of the hard-hitting Fitzsimmons that he can whip anybody of his weight in the world.

"Billy Gibson, manager of Leonard, has gone on record as saying that Leonard will defend his crown at 135 pounds at 2 o'clock, so if he means business he can post $5000 with Tex and I will do likewise, the bout to take place any time within 60 days."

COLLEGIATE BILLIARD TOURNAMENT PLANNED

Percy N. Collins, the national class A billiard champion, has undertaken the task of acting as ambassador in the plan of establishing an intercollegiate championship competition to be held under the direction of the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players. Collins is making a beginning with the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, Mich. There the student body has established a room having 24 tables, with Al Taylor, the professional, as instructor and coach. The amateur champion is to play several special exhibition matches there with Taylor and the most proficient of the students.

Taugher Not Across St. Louis' Goal Line, Two Officials Agree

MARQUETTE is credited with a touchdown that might not have been counted up in its score Saturday, had two of the field officials been authorized to pass on the point. Referee Hutchens of Purdue ruled that on the first touchdown scored by Marquette the runner had carried the ball across the line when the whistle was blown and that the score counted even though subsequently Fullback Taugher was thrown back across the St. Louis goal line.

The umpire and the field judge, according to Coach Rademacher of St. Louis U., agreed that at no time had Taugher passed the line and that he was over a yard from it, at his nearest approach. The play occurred on the third down and there was a reasonable chance that St. Louis might have held for downs.

The referee was frequently hissed by spectators for calling penalties against St. Louis U. In the third period he penalized St. Louis U. six times for 40 yards, five being for offside play.

Statistics of the game show that Marquette clearly outplayed the locals on straight football, rushing the ball 476 yards to 188 for St. Louis.

Screw Co. Team Opposes Millers In Feature Game

Harry McCarthy's Youngsters Have Chance for First Place in Soccer Race.

Having jumped into the thick of the pennant fight in the St. Louis Soccer League race by winning its last two games, the St. Louis Screw Co. eleven is hopeful of assuming the leadership after today's doubleheader at Cardinal Field. To do this it will be necessary for the former St. Leos to defeat the champion Ben Millers. It will also be necessary for the Innisfails to win their first game from the Scullins in the opener.

The race is a tight one as the Millers and Scullins are tied for first place with six points each. The Screw Co. is next, with five. The Innisfails bring up the rear with three points.

It would not be surprising to soccer followers to see the Screw Co. players defeat the Millers today. While the Screw Co. eleven has been playing good football for the last two weeks, the Millers have been greatly off form, losing to the Scullins and tieing with the Innisfails in their last two efforts.

The Millers have played a fairly good defensive game, but their forwards have been unable to shoot goals as they did a year ago when they won the league championship and the United States Football Association Cup Competition. Only three goals have been scored by the Millers to date this season and all three markers have been the result of good kicking by "Hap" Marre.

Harry McCarthy, manager of the Screw Co. team, has injected much young blood in his lineup and combined with only a few veterans his team has made a good showing. They will be severely tested today.

Manager Willie Foley of the Innisfails is still on the lookout for goal-shooting forwards. He induced Kehrman to come out of retirement last Sunday and the big fellow should aid the Irishmen.

President Barker of the St. Louis Soccer League, has instructed Referee Paul McSweeney to start the first game today promptly at 2:15 o'clock.

Graney Veteran Indian.

Outfielder Jack Graney of the Cleveland club, is the oldest member of the team in point of service. He joined the Indians at the start of the 1910 season and has been with them since.

GEORGIA TECH HALFBACK PLAYS TWO STAR GAMES WITH A FRACTURED JAW

Irenus Barron of Clarksville, Ga., better known as "Red" Barron, the star back on the Georgia Tech eleven, is being lauded to the skies by Southerners as a logical candidate for a place on Walter Camp's all-American first team. He broke his jaw in the game with Vanderbilt three weeks ago, but has continued his practicing with the team and has since played in both the Pittsburg and Centre games, with his jaw tightly strapped in wire supports and bandages. Fully as remarkable is the fact that, since the fracture, he has eaten only liquid foods, yet has conserved his strength. Against Centre he played all of the first and fourth quarters and part of the second, and, in the second period, he ran around end for a 57-yard sprint that gave Georgia Tech its first touchdown. Glen Warner of the Panthers is quoted as saying to Barron, "You are one of the greatest halfbacks appearing on Forbes Field in 10 years."

PENFIELD IS STAR AS PURPLE BEATS PURDUE

EVANSTON, Ill., Nov. 13.—Capt. G. Penfield's scooping of the ball on a Purdue fumble in the last quarter and running 65 yards for the second touchdown of the game, featured the Northwestern 14-to-0 victory over the Boilermakers this afternoon in a Western conference football game. Lane, the Purple's left halfback, made repeated gains for downs through enemy territory. Macklin starred for the Purdue eleven.

Previous to the contest the Northwestern band headed a procession of floats in a parade which marked the home-coming celebration by the Purple students and alumni.

Dartmouth Runs Up Record Score Against Pennsy

New England Eleven Gains Verdict Over Heisman by 44 to 7 Score.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 13.—Powerless against the aggressive onslaughts of the strong Dartmouth machine the University of Pennsylvania football team suffered its fourth successive defeat today when the New England eleven walked off Franklin field with a 44 to 7 victory.

The first period gave promise of a close game, but after a brief stand the Pennsylvania team went to pieces and Bowey, with the first touchdown for Dartmouth, started the rush which smashed the highest score made against the Philadelphians this year. Sonnenberg kicked six goals after touchdowns. Shelburne, the Dartmouth halfback, accounted for two of the touchdowns and Jordan contributed another when he caught a punt and dashed 55 yards for a score. Burke also made two touchdowns.

Pennsylvania's only points came in the third period when a series of forward passes carried the ball to the five-yard line and Miller scored on a line plunge. Wray kicked the goal.

In the final minutes of play, Pennsylvania carried the ball to the Dartmouth one-yard line, only to lose it on a fumble. Chilled hands caused numerous fumbles during the game.

CHICAGO, Nov. 13.—Otto Knabe, manager of the Kansas City Club of the American Association, conferred with President Veeck of the Chicago Nationals here today relative to getting some of the club's surplus players. Knabe wants two infielders. He was promised some players, but they will not be available until time for spring training.

Cleveland's Spurt in Final Six Minutes Defeats Yeatman, 23-14

Drubbing Robs North Side Eleven of 1920 Interscholastic League Championship—Central Is Victor Over McKinley, 20-7, in Second Contest.

AFTER three and a half periods of great football, the Yeatman team aviated, lost its high school league game to Cleveland, 23 to 14, and with it the interscholastic champion. Cleveland is now the only undefeated team in the circuit.

Although Cleveland started things with a rush, getting first blood less than five minutes after the opening whistle, with an 85-yard run for a touchdown, Yeatman came back and battled bravely through three periods until the last quarter, when Cleveland's line looked and acted like paper. It was the climax, for with six minutes to play, Cleveland recovered its own punt on the 40-yard line, after a Yeatman fumble, and in a few minutes had scored a field goal and a touchdown. Siebert, Schlapprizzi and Scannell were the outstanding stars of the victors, while Cox, Bob Hannegan and Klausner carried the Yeatman punch.

Yeatman kicked off, and Cleveland, after failing to gain, punted. Cox made eight yards for Yeatman, but the Cleveland line held on the 49-yard line. Then Yeatman punted. Scannell caught the ball on his 15-yard line and with Gregg acting as interference, ran the entire 85 yards through the Yeatman team for a touchdown. He kicked goal. Yeatman began to fight then, and after the kickoff, on two line plunges by Cox and Hannegan, the ball was brought to Cleveland's 30-yard line. It looked bad for Cleveland, until Schlapprizzi intercepted a forward pass. On the next play, Siebert fumbled, giving the North Side team the ball on the 25-yard line.

Forward Pass Successful.

Cox made 10 yards through the line and another plunge brought the ball to the 15-yard line, where the quarter ended. At the opening of the next period, Cox passed to Bob Hannegan, who went over for Yeatman's first score, and Klausner kicked goal. On the first play after the kick-off, Schlapprizzi went around Yeatman's left end for 25 yards on a fake kick formation. This brought the ball to Yeatman's 30-yard line, where Yeatman held for downs. Yeatman could gain nothing, so kicked, and then a series of line plunges and short end runs took the ball again in Yeatman territory, and a pass, Siebert to Scannell, from the 15-yard line, gave Cleveland another touchdown. Scannell kicked goal. The half ended soon after.

The third period was hotly fought, but scoreless. Cleveland kicked off, and on the next play Cox carried the ball to the enemy's 30-yard line, where two attempted passes failed and Yeatman was held for downs. There was an exchange of punts in which Cleveland had the advantage and Yeatman suffered a 15-yard penalty for roughing. Both made ineffectual line bucks, until Yeatman intercepted a forward pass in midfield. Yeatman seemed to have acquired new life, and Cox made 11 yards around end and Klausner made two line plunges for gains before the quarter ended.

Klausner went through tackle for 9 yards to start the fourth and Nickels made 10. A 15-yard penalty for roughing, and Yeatman kicked. But Cleveland could not gain, so it, too, resorted to a kick. Cox caught the ball and took it to the 30-yard line. There line plunges took the ball to the 10-yard line. Klausner made 8 and Bob Hannegan carried it the remaining 2 yards. Klausner kicked goal, making the score 14 to 14.

Then Something Happened.

Yeatman still fought and held McKinley for downs. But then something happened. Cleveland punted, but a Yeatman man fumbled, Schlapprizi recovering for Cleveland. Scannell broke through the line and caught a forward from Seibert on the next play that was good for [illegible] yards, placing the ball on the [illegible]-yard line. Then Schlapprizzi made 15 yards around end. Two plunges failed, and Siebert dropped back to his 15-yard line, and made a perfect drop kick. Cox ran back the Cleveland punt 40 yards, but on the next play, Siebert intercepted a pass and ran for a touchdown. On the kick after touchdown, a Yeatman man tossed his headgear at the ball and goal was missed. There was a row and the field officials failed to keep the crowds off. The field was not cleared for several minutes, and then on being awarded another try at the goal, the kick was missed.

Mid-City Eleven Shows Improvement; Kinsey, McKinley, Makes 90-Yard Run

Central showed a greatly improved eleven in defeating McKinley, 20 to 7, in the second game. Central was at all times superior to the South Side team, and the one McKinley score resulted after an intercepted pass and a 90-yard run. By its victory Central is given an opportunity of tying for first place if it can beat Cleveland in the Thanksgiving day battle.

McKinley started well by getting the ball to Central's 10-yard line soon after the game began on a forward pass, but lacked the punch. The ball see-sawed about the field during most of the first period. At the close, Trumm made a 20-yard run.

Central was held for two downs at the start of the next period on its 20-yard line, but Trumm, on a fake kick formation, made 50 yards around end. Floun passed 15 yards to Quarterback Fisher, and a subsequent pass, Fisher to Anzalone, brought the ball to the 10-yard line. The McKinley line held for three downs, but on the fourth Floun went through for a touchdown. The chance for a kick was lost when the ball was touched to the ground.

Trumm Makes Long Run.

Van Sickle ran back the kickoff to the 45-yard line, but McKinley was held there for downs. After the punt, Trumm made 30 yards to the 45-yard line. First down resulted from line plunges, and a pass from Floun was caught on the 15-yard line by Fisher, who ran the remaining distance, eluding several tacklers, for the second score. Fisher kicked goal.

In the third quarter, Central was held for about six minutes. Then Trumm made 50 yards around end, bringing the ball to the 20-yard line. The McKinley line held for downs, but Central recovered a fumble and a pass, Fisher to Mathews, took the ball to the 2-yard line as the quarter ended. Fisher went over after two downs, and kicked the subsequent goal, making the score 20 to 0.

The McKinley team looked worn out and was not fighting. Floun intercepted an attempted pass in midfield and carried the ball to the 30-yard line. A pass, Floun to Fisher, placed the ball on the 2-yard line and it looked as though Central would again score. But on another pass, H. Kinsey, Cleveland end, intercepted and ran almost the entire length of the field with two Central men close on his heels before he was upset on Central's 5-yard line. Woods carried the ball over and Schaefering kicked goal. The remaining few minutes were scoreless.

ROBINSON THINKS SMALL WAGERS DO NO HARM

Manager Robinson of the Dodgers does not take kindly to the proposed plan to prevent major ball players from betting on their own team or on horse races or other events. "The guy who bets against his own club is the real dangerous bird, and one who should be trapped, but I can see no harm in a player placing a small wager on his own team," he said. Robinson says he bets on horse races or boxing contests at every opportunity and says he derives much pleasure from it.

CHINESE NINE WINS PENNANT IN HAWAII

The All-Chinese baseball team, all Chinese except for its Japanese second baseman, Moriyama, champions of the Honolulu Baseball League, won the Hawaiian Island championship recently by defeating the army, leaders of the service leagues, two runs to one. In the final service game of the season the army beat the navy six to nothing and then went against the Mandarins, who retained their title, won in several previous years, of being the best players in Hawaii.

GEORGIA TECH PLAYERS EXONERATED BY REFEREE

ATLANTA, Nov. 13.—Mike Thompson of Emmittsburg, Md., referee at the game here two weeks ago, between Georgia Tech and Centre College, issued a statement today exonerating the Tech players of intentional roughness and unsportsmanlike conduct, as charged by Centre players. The schools already have severed athletic relations.

"I have been refeering football games for 25 years and I think I ought to be a judge of what is within the laws in the game," said Mr. Thompson. "The game between Centre and Tech was a real football game and nothing else."

Tigers Beat Pikers, 14-10, By a Forward Pass, With Only Three Minutes to Go

Kershaw, of St. Louis, a Substitute Missouri Halfback, Successively Receives Two Tosses That Result in Score—Play Protested Without Avail.

From a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 13.—An unheralded Missouri University substitute halfback snatched victory from the Washington University eleven at Rollins Field, this afternoon, with only two minutes of a wonderful struggle remaining to be played.

He was Elmer Kershaw, of St. Louis, a former Central High School player, who received two forward passes, on successive plays, and contributed the 60 yards which was necessary to give the Tigers a touchdown for their 14 to 10 victory.

On some field there may have been better football exhibited yesterday, and on others there may have been greater honors at stake; but the 6000 persons who witnessed the twenty-second annual Missouri-Washington contest will never concede that a harder-fought battle was waged on any gridiron. Washington's varsity trudged from that field defeated but not outplayed, and this was realized by the rival student bodies as they uncovered beneath a setting sun and sang of their alma maters. There was no cheering; there was a mutual respect.

The climax was totally unexpected, by the Pikers, at least.

There were three minutes to be played and Pikeway adherents were hilariously heralding their 10 to 7 lead, which looked as big as the hackneyed house, at the time. Then Shanley punted from his 33-yard line to Fulbright, who returned 10 yards to his 40-yard line.

Now enters the sorrel-topped Mr. Kershaw, who had relieved "Fuzzy" Williams early in the final period. Fulbright tossed a short pass over the line to this "stranger" and Kershaw rambled on to Washington's 40-yard line. On the following play Kershaw ran down field while Fulbright, endangered by onrushing forwards, gave way about five yards and then came dashing toward the line of scrimmage. He heaved an arching pass to the waiting Kershaw, who made a difficult catch and fled down the north side of the field for 27 yards and the tale-telling score.

Pikers Voice a Protest.

Kershaw was enabled to make this run unmolested because the Washington secondary defense had come into the line to stop Fulbright. The entire team protested long, maintaining that Fulbright had made his pass when less than five yards behind the line of scrimmage.

To those in the stands Fullbright appeared to be about two yards back of the forwards, but the protest fell on deaf ears, and the officials refused to call back the play.

Piker General Picks Wrong Play.

This blow stunned the Pikers. It seemed as if the St. Louisans should have chosen to receive the kick-off following the play, as passes seemed to be their only salvation. However, the captain had seen Missouri fumble six times and believed that hard tackling in the enemy's territory might give him and his teammates another chance. Such was not the case. Missouri received, tried three line bucks and the game was history.

The figures will show that Missouri gained more ground than the visitors; but this should not distract the Pikers' case. Much of the local eleven's yardage can be accounted for by three long runs, which ultimately resulted in nothing of consequence. On consistency in smashing and general attack there was very little to choose between the two teams.

The fine defense can be indicated by the number of punts. On 18 occasions the St. Louisans resorted to Shanleys toe, while 14 times Ruth was called back to relieve Bengal emergencies.

One could not single out individual stars from that mass of 22 frenzied fighters. Of course Kershaw's work was in the spotlight; but the efforts of other players whose contributions were less spectacular were more deserving of mention.

For Washington, Kraehe played the game of his career; Hafner and Kramer were ever alert and capitalized Missouri misplays; Potthoff came out of his lethargy; Tommy Thompson kicked a field goal under the greatest tension.

Game a Real Battle.

It was just plain fight from the start to the finish. And, here it might be well to speak of the six Missouri fumbles which played an important part in the issue. The Tigers were not one bit butter-fingered; but they had the job of playing against men who tackled in deadly earnest, when they downed a foe. Men who had not fumbled before, fumbled yesterday.

State School undergraduates who are reveling over the last minute victory in downtown rendezvous tonight, say that Missouri would have won easily if "Chuck" Lewis had been in the game. Perhaps they would and perhaps not; but the facts remain that Coach Johnny Miller kept his captain on the side lines even when the game seemed a certain loss. Lewis was physically fit to start the game, it was announced at the gymnasium before the play.

Tigers Score Touchdown When Pikers Hear Whistle and Fail to Down Lincoln

The Tigers drew first blood in the second period. And a contributing party to this touchdown was a 25-cent tin whistle. It was the accessory before the fact; but some Pikeway stupidity was the real cause of the score.

Missouri had received on its 38-yard line, when Shanley booted from behind his own goal posts. Lincoln and Knight made some nice line plunges to the Washington 10-yard line, but here they were held.

Shanley's punt was a weak one and the Tigers again took the offensive on the Red and Green 25-yard line. On the first play the head linesman's whistle was sounded and Pikers, thinking that ended the play, merely looked toward the side line. Only one man made an effort to stop the fleet Lincoln, who pounded around right end and never stopped until the ball was planted in the promised land. Ruth then kicked goal. The officials were deaf to all protests and the scores stood.

The half was almost ended. Missouri then kicked off and the ball was returned to the St. Louisans 32-yard line. Here started an auspicious march which netted 20 yards of territory, but Miller's men held in midfield. Shanley then punted to Spuehler who returned five yards before he was struck a crashing tackle by Shanley. The ball bounded out of the midget back's hands and Dick Hafner cashed in, took it on the run and sprinted for a score. Tommy Thompson deliberated long and then tied the score.

Washington tossed off a golden opportunity early in the third session. The Tigers had received and then battered the St. Louis defenses for 30 yards on straight football. Knight fumbled on his 45-yard line and Berger took possesion. Washington couldn't gain and Shanley then sent a beautiful boot to the Tiger 3-yard line. Packwood bobbled the ball when tackled and Hafner again recovered it.

A line plunge was tried and failed. Then a ridiculous open formation was smashed for a loss, after which Washington was penalized 5 yards for offside. On the fourth play Thompson dropped back to his 20-yard line; but the ball was brushed by a Tiger forward and failed.

The rest of this period was defensive play at its height, neither eleven being able to gain consistently. Following Thompson's failure the punters of the contending teams were called upon 13 times to put the ball in enemy territory.

Thompson Kicks Field Goal.

The fourth period was only about three minutes spent when the Pikeway delegation went to the lead for the first time. Play started with Washington attacking on the enemy's 43-yard line. A forward pass. Thompson to Kremer, netted 10 yards and a first down. Three line bucks then gave another first down on the Bengal 20-yard line. The ball was near the south side of the field and the next two plays were called to put the attack in the middle of the gridiron. Three yards were lost on two bucks and then Thompson removed the mud from his right shoe. He dropped to the 30-yard line and sent a beautiful drop kick over the uprights. Tommy later explained that the ball bounced and brushed his trousers. How it made that eventful journey was a mystery to him.

From this time until the final touchdown the play was always between the two 40-yard lines. Fulbright and Kershaw completed one 14-yard pass, after which the Pikers were penalized 5 yards, but these gains were negatived when Washington forwards smashed in and threw Fulbright for 12-yard losses on attempted passes.

Then came Shanley's punt, followed the first pass, then the second, and finally the touchdown and blasted hopes.

SPORT SALAD by L. C. Davis

TENNESSEE.

WHEN Tennessee went G. O. P.
The dreadful tidings spread;
The Solid South, with gaping mouth,
Looked on and shook its head.
The Colonels stand in Dixie land
Like images of stone.
They're simply dazed and stand amazed
While every joy has flown.

The Majors, too, are feeling blue,
While every F. F. V.
Is in a trance and looks askance
At poor old Tennessee.
The mocking bird no more is heard
To trill its dulcet note,
Since Tennessee went G. O. P.,
And women got the vote.

THERE was a man in our town
Who was a common thief;
He plied his trade for many years
And never came to grief.
But when at last he killed a cop,
With all his might and main,
He rang up his committeeman
And got right out again.

How it would grieve me
And I'd be left alone; oh, baby.

TOO TRUE.

Coal wagon drivers are complaining about the Page avenue cars blocking the tracks, causing considerable delay and annoyance. There ought to be a law.

Still the street cars have the right of way, and the only thing the drivers of the coal wagons can do is make a detour.

Minor Leaguers Heartily Approve Landis' Selection

However, "Little Fellows" Will Appoint Committee to Handle Their Own Affairs.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 13.—Final touches were put on baseball peace today when a delegation of minor leaguers visited Judge K. M. Landis and expressed their hearty approval of the plans adopted by the majors yesterday. All that remains to be done is lay down the rules of the new national agreement which will be done within the next 30 days.

This will be accomplished at a meeting attended by representatives of the National, American and minor leagues. Each of the big fellows send three men to this session and the minors send six.

"We are heartily in favor of Judge Landis as supreme judge of baseball," declared George Maines, president of the Michigan-Ontario League, who acted as spokesman of the minor commission.

"Our committee has decided that we are willing to enter into the same agreement suggested by the majors. We will appoint, no doubt, a commission of our own to handle our own affairs, and when we cannot come to an understanding, we will submit the question to Judge Landis."

Completes Harmonious Sessions.

This completes the harmony sessions of organized baseball. The minors, as well as the majors, have buried the hatchet and are going to administer their affairs in a business-like manner. For a time it was feared the minors might balk at not having a member on the new commission to adjudicate baseball, but when the majors desired a one-man "commish" the minors agreed it was a good scheme.

Chicago tonight is perfectly clean of baseball folk, save for those who make this city their home. The outgoing delegates were all smiles and sunshine and nobody has been found who would say a word against the terms of peace. In fact, all hands appeared relieved at having escaped the possibility of an expensive "war."

The speed with which the minors visited Judge Landis leads to the conclusion that they wish to resume relations with the majors. They withdrew from the National agreement two years ago by mutual consent, but now, it is understood, they desire a restoration of the draft on better terms to themselves. Young ball players, with rapid chances of advancing to the majors being cut off by abrogation of the draft, refused to lend their budding talents to minor league clubs and there was a great scarcity of youths during the last two years.

Draft Quite Necessary.

The draft—everybody agrees, is quite necessary "so that the player may advance in his profession" to quote the rules of the old national agreement.

President John Heydler of the National League has returned to the East, leaving behind an expression of approval as to what occurred during the last two days and Ban Johnson declares his complete satisfaction at recent developments. This seems to set everybody down in cheerful mood and the club owners and managers will now turn their attention to trades and things of like nature.

Ban Johnson, president of the American League, left Chicago today for a 10-days' hunting trip in Louisiana.

The National League today appointed Garry Hermann of Cincinnati, Barney Dreyfuss of Pittsburg and Charles Ebbets of Brooklyn its committee to officially arrange with the minor leagues for them to come under Judge Landis' control. Clarke Griffith of Washington, Frank Navin of Detroit and Connie Mack of Philadelphia were appointed to represent the American League.

They will meet a minor league committee of six within a week or two in New Yor kor Chicago. If the minor leagues officially approve the reorganization plans a new national agreement and rules governing the game will be drawn up, at a joint major and minor meeting, either in New York or Chicago in December. Judge Landis would attend this meeting.

Soccerites Reinstated.

Four Municipal Soccer League players were reinstated at a meeting of the officials last week. They were V. Cromer Schumachers; Edgar Kohlman, Kohlmans; A. Meier and M. Walsh, Southerns. The suspension of F. Clark of the Trumbulls still runs for two weeks.

Kansas' Forward Passes Gain Tie With Cornhuskers

Jayhawkers, Using Aerial Attack, Score 20 Points in Last Half of Contest.

LAWRENCE, Kan., Nov. 13.—Apparently snowed under hopelessly, the University of Kansas football team forward passed its way out and battled the University of Nebraska eleven to a 20-to-20 tie here this afternoon.

But for a missed goal after touchdown the Kansas rally would have been successful and the home team would have been on the winning side of what observers declared was one of the most spectacular games in Missouri Valley football history.

Nebraska's chance to win also faded with failure to kick goal. It was on their third touchdown, made in the second period, and from that time on the advantage was entirely with Kansas.

The forward passing of Mandeville and Lonborg made possible the Kansas rally and was largely instrumental in netting the points. In the early periods they were unable to make their passes and time after time the play was blocked. However, after the first Kansas touchdown in the third quarter, they passed successfully, almost at will.

The tieing score came in the last five minutes of play, when, after a pass, Mandeville raced 30 yards and crossed the goal. Sandifer failed to kick goal.

Dale and Newman shone for the visitors, the plunging line smashes of the former being particularly brilliant. Dale took the ball over in the opening minute of play for the first Nebraska touchdown and repeated the performance in the second quarter.

Line up:

KANSAS (20)		NEBRASKA (20)
Reid	Left end	Ewanson
Hale	Center	Day (C.)
Woody	Right guard	M. Munn
Davison	Right tackle	Weller
McDonald	Right end	Scherer
Little	Quarterback	Newman
Lonborg	Left half	Hartley
Mandeville	Right halfback	Wright
Allison	Fullbach	Dale

SCORE BY PERIODS:

Kansas	0	0	7	13—20
Nebraska	7	13	0	0—20

Touchdowns: Mandeville, 3; Dale, 2; Ewanson, 1; goals from touchdown: Sandefur, 2; Dale, 2. Officials: E. C. Quigley, St. Mary's, referee; Isadore Anderson, Missouri, umpire; J. Wyatt, Missouri, head linesman.

IOWA STATE HUMBLES KANSAS AGGIES, 17 TO 0

MANHATTAN, Kan., Nov. 13.—After a tight first quarter in the game between Ames and the Kansas State Agricultural College here today, Ames obtained a lead which it held through the game. Ames won its way through the Aggie line in the last half, Curry scoring a touchdown. Vanderloo kicked goal and Boyd made a field goal from the 20-yard line. In the last half Hibbs made a touchdown from the 10-yard line, Vanderloo kicking goal. The game ended 17 to 0 in favor of Ames.

Rotten Apple in Baseball Barrel Removed in Time, Says Bill Evans

American League Umpire Points Out That There Are 400 Players in Majors and That Errors of Eight Should Not Be Taken as Evidence of Wholesale Guilt.

By Billy Evans.
American League Umpire.
(Copyright, 1920.)

WHAT effect will the gambling scandal have on baseball? I have been asked that question hundreds of times since the close of the baseball season.

In reality, the baseball public has answered the question. The big crowds that attended the final games of the season and taxed the capacity of the Cleveland and Brooklyn parks in the world's series, answered the query emphatically. Those crowds demonstrated that lovers of baseball are still loyal, that they have confidence in the integrity of the game, despite the action of a few.

The gambling scandal, despite some of the unpleasant features connected with it, will make for better baseball. The unwise actions of a few Chicago players must not be construed as affecting the whole. In every business there crop out situations which are detrimental. Every now and then some bank president or cashier goes wrong and wrecks his institution. However, the action of a few men does not destroy the confidence the American public has in the bank as an institution. We go on depositing our money just as if all men and all banks had never made mistakes.

400 Players in Majors.

There are, in round numbers, 200 players in the American and a like number in the National League. Numbered among those 400 are some of the finest characters in the world. Because eight players in the American League went wrong, and perhaps an equal number in the National, should all the other high-class, honest fellows suffer? Positively no. The American sport-loving public is fair, and that is the light in which the situation will be viewed. The baseball public, as I have said, has taken that stand on the matter.

During my 20 years' connection with baseball, 15 in the major league, I never for a minute believed it would be possible to corrupt baseball. I thought the men in the game were of too high a caliber, too well paid, to stoop to such tactics. Perhaps I held too high an opinion of all the players, as proven by the Chicago scandal. As a matter of fact, when I heard that Eddie Cicotte was in the frame-up, I could have felt no worse had it been my brother. Cicotte's fall was a blow to me. It was almost enough to destroy one's faith in humanity, for I always regarded Eddie Cicotte as a man worth while. Cicotte had a remarkable temperament. He never fussed with umpires or players. He was always congenial. Often some Chicago player would start to protest a decision, only to have Cicotte remark that the umpire was right. No matter how many errors his teammates made behind him, he always had a word of cheer for them. Cicotte has done so many good things in baseball that I hate to think of his one fatal error.

Good Word for Johnson.

Whatever the critics of Ban Johnson may say about him, facts will ultimately prove he had the gambling situation doped out correctly years in advance of all others connected with the game. I recall particularly a conversation that I had with Johnson some years ago. I was the umpire at a game in an American League city, in which some of the bettors on the game, disagreeing over the payment of a wager, drew their guns in true Western style. Of course, I had to report the affair as I saw it from my position as umpire. There was such a stampede in the bleachers at the time that the game was momentarily halted, because of the belief that someone had been injured or the bleachers were on fire.

The affair was so disgraceful Mr. Johnson took the matter up with the league as a whole. Just what was done about it I do not know. Mr. Johnson desired drastic action, but evidently it was never taken, as gambling continued to flourish the same as ever in that particular stand. A few weeks later, in discussing the affair with me, Mr. Johnson remarked:

"The gambling situation is deplorable. Sooner or later some big gamblers will make an effort to reach the players. No doubt there are players who would be susceptible to money, and, if some of the weaker players are ever reached, one of the biggest scandals in the history of the game is sure to result. I hope the club owners will appreciate the situation and remedy or wipe out the evil before it blots the game."

Ban Knew Whereof He Spoke.

That Mr. Johnson knew what he was talking about has been proven.

That a few players have been reached because of the lure of money has been a disappointment to me. One, however, must not judge the great majority by the actions of a few. It has been 50 years since scandal cropped out in baseball. I feel it will be much longer before any player again drags the game into dispute. The offenders must be summarily dealt with. A precedent must be established that will be convincing for all time. Incidentally, the men who have millions invested should always be on the alert to adopt any measures that will tend to safeguard the game.

The outcome of the 1920 world series was a pleasing event, coming as it did immediately after the gambling expose. I was pulling for Cleveland or Brooklyn to win in a decisive manner. I would have been delighted had either team been able to win five straight games. After the series had gone three games, with Brooklyn winning two and Cleveland one, the two teams appeared so evenly matched it seemed the series might go eight or nine games. Cleveland did the almost impossible when it won four straight and ended the series in seven games. A number of the ever suspicious were positive the teams would go back to Brooklyn for the eighth game, tickets for which had been sold in advance to the extent of close to $100,000. Cleveland's decisive victory forced the return of that money, and made the ever suspicious guess again.

Baseball is too great a national institution, has too big a following, has too many high-class men connected with it, to permit the failings of a few to permanently injure so great a sport.

Notre Dame Wins From Indiana in Last Period, 13-10

Gipp and Brandy Score Touchdowns That Defeat Big 10 Eleven.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 13. — Indiana sprang a surprise on Notre Dame and the conquerors of the Army had difficulty in defeating the crimson, 13 to 10, here today.

Notre Dame did not get started until near the end of the third period, when they carried the ball on end runs by Mohardt and Gipp to the Crimson 1-yard line, where the quarter ended. Gipp went over for Notre Dame's first touchdown on the first play in the fourth period. He then kicked goal.

Shortly after Notre Dame kicked off, Indiana fumbled and Notre Dame recovered the ball on Indiana's 35-yard line. Brandy made a touchdown, but Gipp failed to kick goal.

Indiana scored on a place kick by Capt. Risley in the second period. Indiana's touchdown was made by Haney, who received a 25-yard forward pass and fell across the goal line. Risley kicked goal.

Score by periods:

Notre Dame	0	0	0	13—13
Indiana	0	3	7	0—10

YALE SHOWED VALUE OF DEPARTING FROM FOOTBALL ORTHODOXY

Can a forward pass be successfully made over the goal line on the fourth down for a touchdown? Yes; Kempton of Yale did it in the game with Colgate. Every side line theorist on earth declares it a maneuver that hasn't as many legs to stand on as a fish. Yale made it so smoothly that it made folks sit up, and the team of Kempton and Dilworth proved such things can be. After all, there is nothing impossible in football.

Some quarterbacks have been flayed for trying a forward pass for a touchdown. It has been esteemed fashionable to hint at bone when so tried. There's always a chance to do anything in a game if within rule. Sometimes a golfer makes a hole in one.

200 HEAR MINOR TELL ABOUT RUSSIAN SOVIET

$166.10 Collected at Meeting for Families of Those Deported on "Soviet Ark."

Robert Minor, former cartoonist and present radical, delivered a speech on "What I Saw in Russia and Germany" at Sheldon Memorial, 3646 Washington boulevard, last night. Many in the audience of more than 200 conversed in foreign languages. Fourteenth and Wash streets was a typical corner at which handbills announcing the lecture were posted.

"The League of Nations was the greatest league of capitalists ever formed," said Minor, "and it was to crush the greatest strike the world ever knew, the Russian revolution. It was fixed so as to give Great Britain a monopoly of all the countries having oil, and that is why it is not operative. We have the Standard Oil over here and they object to that arrangement, so they chose Harding to be President and he will give us a league of nations, yet.

"There is a new league of nations being formed with its headquarters in Moscow—the 'third internationale,' or soviet government. It will be only a few months or weeks until there is a Soviet republic in Germany."

Minor's address was chiefly confined to sketching the history of the Russian Soviet. A collection of $166.10 was taken up by the "National Defense Committee," which conducted the meeting, for the benefit of the families of radicals who were deported on the "Soviet ark."

COMMITTEE TO MAKE REPORT TO FIREMEN ON CONVENTION FUNDS

The firemen's union meetings tomorrow, Wednesday and Thursday will be informed by the Investigating Committee of its progress in inquiring into the handling of collections for the firemen's convention fund.

The committee last week enlisted all the firemen in the city in a house-to-house canvass to ascertain the amount contributed, and for what purpose it was given. Each fireman not on duty was supplied with questionnaires to be filled out by the contributors, with the donor's name, address, amount given, solicitor's name and the representation made by the solicitor. Circular letters of instruction also have been sent to the various captains.

The fund was raised by donations and the sale of advertising in the program for the firemen's convention, held here in September. The solicitors, Dr. L. E. Lehmberg and "Count" Hoffmann, were to receive 90 per cent of money paid for advertising above $10,000, but only 20 per cent of donations.

Hoffmann said yesterday that he knew nothing beyond the fact that there was a controversy over alleged donations turned in as payments for advertising. Dr. Lehmberg is out of the city on a hunting trip.

LONG EVER AGO by RUPERT HUGHES...

"I was only a young slip of a girl, but we loved each other at the first glimpse like."

JUST once the impulsive Michael Morahan took his wife, the patient Delia, to the Zoological Gardens in the Bronx. It happened to be a day when the keepers were pulling a tooth for an old lion. They had manacled his claws and his jaws, but they had not manacled his voice, and Delia never forgot the beast's heart-curdling belches of rage and pain while the tooth was being evicted, nor the abrupt purr of bliss that afterward made silence audible and comfortable.

She never forgot it because her husband so often reminded her of it, especially when he was preparing for a celebration of some sort. He loved being dressed, but he hated getting dressed. He grew so wroth always that he could not see what was before him and was constantly hiding what he was hunting.

He was peculiarly ferocious tonight because he was putting on his "full-driss soot" and was to wear his high hat and a badge. He was to represent the men of his county—Clare, the banner county, no less—and at the Clare Lady Hurlers' annual ball!

Michael was the vice president of the "Clare County P. S. B. and A. Association—P. S. B. and A. meaning "Patriotic, Social, Benevolent and Athletic." The president was ill—"he having a sore throat on him"—and Michael was to lead the grand march with Miss Belinda O'Rahilly, the majestic captain of the lady hurlers

Delia would have been uneasier about this if herself had not been the representative of the Clare Ladies' Benevolent Association, and therefore slated to march directly behind Michael with the tall and handsome Martin Kelleher, the manager of the famous Clare hurlers. Other clubs of hurlers and lady hurlers and merely social associations of other counties were to be present, and there were to be two bands to play on two floors; one, American music, and one, Irish.

A grand night was sure and the daylight would doubtless surprise the dancers—or, rather, it would not surprise them, because the Irish are the tireless steppers, and every Saturday night and many another night they set buildings all over town to rocking with their thousands of jigging feet.

Michael had cause to be anxious about his important appearance, and he kept Delia and their old-maid daughter, Kate, jigging to find him and fetch him his equipment.

At length he was harnessed as far as his collar, and he was growing purple in his combat with that, trying in vain to make both ends meet. He had shoved his left fingers down inside the neck to his shirt to push the collar button out, and he had bruised the fingers of his right hand trying to engage the buttonhole and the button. The only result was to derange his Adam's apple and to lacerate a number of collars.

Delia, who was in the bathroom trying to wash her own hands after buttoning his big patent leather shoes on his bigger feet, came back to find him standing among the ruins of half a dozen collars and trying to terrify his last one into forming a union with its other end. The hand at his throat impeded his articulation, but not his roar.

Delia smiled at his mien of fiendish malignance as if it were a harmless mask on the face of a child, and said:

"Oh, it's on'y you. I thought they were exthractin' another toot'th from the ould African line in the Zoological Gairdens."

With the fearlessness of a lion tamer she reached up, pulled his paws down, and said:

"You poor little bouchaleen, for why are you trine to button your fihst into your neck? Have you no pockets to put it in or is it a new fashion you're startin'?"

Michael's eyes popped, but her cool, deft hands had the collar buttoned before he could bite her head off, so he patted her fat back and cooed like a ring dove nuzzling its mate:

"Och, Dalia asthore, it's a miracle worker you are. You can button a collar or a shoe as asly as sayin' a prayer. I'm wondherin' if I'm doin' wisely to l'ave you march with that Martin Kelleher. He's hardly betther than half my age and twicet my stren'th. But at that I'll have a go at him if you smile too sweetly on him."

"More betoken, it's you that had better be very careful how you make up to that O'Rahilly beauty. She's half my weight and twice my len'th and she's a wildcat in a quarrel, but I'll wallop her wit' her own caman if she don't wahk very correct."

The mutual flattery of mutual jealousy delighted both of their old gray hearts, and he hugged her till he threatened to break the ribs of her new corset. Then he noticed that it was the corset he was embracing, and he flared up again:

"You're not tellin' me you're not drissed yet? And me all readied up. And I've got to set round in this hot collar and miss l'adin' the march belike while you primp. And what you been up to this lahng while?"

She handed him a look that showed the strange power of the human eye. He remembered that he had kept her busy on his own errands and he laughed in time to save his scalp:

"Don't say it. I know it."

He brushed down his excited hair and announced that he would wait for her in the dining room. He carried his long-tailed coat over his arm, put it reverently on the shoulders of a chair, pulled the patient rocker up under the center light and sat down to reread the evening paper.

He had just got his forehead between the shafts of his spectacles when he felt a draft blowing on his white shirt sleeves.

He peered over the rims of his glasses and saw that the window was wide open and half filled with the ample form of his daughter, Kate. She was leaning out, as usual, gazing at an elevated train rumbling by with a glitter of lighted windows.

"Kathleen!" Michael roared, "come in out of that, out of the street, will you?"

She did not hear him for the noise of the train. He slammed down his paper, and, stalking over to her, reached through the window till he had her by the shoulders and dragged her in.

The bump she took on her head startled her hardly so much as her father's voice.

"Whativer is it's on you, Kate, to be ahlways in and out of that windy? Have you never seen an illivated train before? Begobs, you've seen a million. I've seen you see them! But you're ahlways hangin' there. I wondher your elbows ain't grew to the ledge. I doubt but you'll be havin' cairns on them. Have you a sweetheairt's a train gaird, or what is it you're expectin' to see?—a collision or a ballon ascension, or what at all?"

Kate walked away, answering drearily: "Nothin' pa, nothin.'"

His first anger improved to his second stage.

"And are you tellin' me you're not ready yit? The devil admire me! but you've your praskeen on still and your old driss. Is it to a barn dance or an apern-and-necktie party you think you're goin' to? No, this is a grand bahl—the grandest iver!"

"I'm not goin', pa!"

"And why are you not goin?"

"I don't care to go."

"You don't care? And what have you to care? It's me that's doing the carin'! I'll not be lavin' you heer alone. I'd not thrust you not to go fahlin' out the windy. And for why would you not go?"

"I never have any fun, pa. I'm only an old maid. Nobody dances with me except some other old maid. I'd liever stay at home. The dishes are to be washed yet, and grandma, sleeping in' her room there, ought not to be left alone."

"I'll speak to Mrs. Whoriskey across the hall to keep an ear on her would she want annything. You're goin' to the bahl, and you'll have a good time or answer to me!" She shook her head and turned away, and for all his bluster he called for help: "Dalia! Ma! Come heer, would you, and make this little-good-for obey me and go to the dance. Sure and haven't I the ticket bought for her? It says, 'Tickets admitting gentleman and lady, includin' wardrobe, 50 cints. That's you and me, ma. But I didn't take the wardrobe. And it says, Extra lady, 25 cints.' So I bought her wan, and she would be wastin' the quarther, besides the gittin' in for the half price."

"I urged her and she said she'd not go," said Delia, who appeared at the door. "And there's no makin' her move if she has not a mind to. She's very obadient in everything excipt what she doosn't want to do."

"It's a shame for you to be stayin' home," Michael growled. "You'll not see your ma thrippin' the light fantastic nor me ladin' off at the hid of the percission. The balance of the family'll be there, ahl the byes and their wives or gerls."

"Thank you kindly, pa, but what am I at a dance? Who'd ever dance with the like of me?"

"Ah, Kate, honey, I'll dance wit' you and proud of it, if you'll dance the Irish dances. I'd not disgrace my heels with anny of these modern Yankee diviltries, these thurkey-throts, and tongos, and boony-hugs, and the like thrash. But lave me loose in a four-hand reel, or a rinnce fada, or a shlip jig, and I'll handle me feet as artistic as 'the best of thim. So come along wit' you, now."

Kate shook her head with the obstinacy of the meek, and when Michael insisted she walked out of the room and locked herself behind her own door.

Michael was for breaking it down, but Delia checked him.

"Save your breath for your jigs.

"LONG EVER AGO"

By RUPERT HUGHES.

Katie won't dance the Irish dances, and she hates the Irish music."

"Then she's no daughter of mine," Michael raged.

Delia was calm even at that, and she smiled.

"Her sthubbornness alone would idintify her if she had not your jab. She takes her aisy and sinsible ways from me, so lave her home. She loves to be by her lone."

When she had closed the door on them she went back to the window, raised it and leaned out again. She would have reminded one of the Blessed Damosel on the bar of heaven, she was so different.

Her mother looked up and waved to her and pointed her out to Michael from where they waited for the surface car.

She was there long after they had gone. She watched train after train go by. Then she trudged to the kitchen and washed up the dishes and put them in the cupboard and in the sideboard. Now and then she paused and listened at the door of the room where old grandmother slept, or pretended to. But always when she — the dining roon. she paused by the window to watch the train go by.

At last the fatigue of another day at the task of a Martha overcame her. She said her unselfish prayers and stretched herself out wearily in her bed.

Michael came home fagged with enjoyment long before daybreak. He was sighing that he was not the man he was when he used to dance the moon down and the sun up. His finery was rumpled with exercise and he pulled it off regardless. Kate would straighten it up and press it for him later. He overslept, and waking him was like poking a polar bear, till Delia sprinkled cold water on him and ordered him out.

Kate waited on her yawning parents and asked them about the party as if she were their mother and they the youngsters. She listened to their rhapsodies with an indulgent smile of affectionate patience and far less enthusiasm than Michael's ancient mother revealed when Kate rolled her in her wheeled chair to the table.

"She'd ought to go to dances and the like and meet the min. She maybe might find her match. How's annybody to marry her whin she niver stirs a fut outside the door? It's no convint I keep here to have a nun on me hands."

"Maybe her seein' the way you take on, she's contint not to tie her-

"LONG EVER AGO"

By RUPERT HUGHES.

self up with anny of the min. Some of you seem to think that you're ahl a woman has to think of."

"And what else have to you to think of? I ahlways misthrust these women that is too good for the min. A single woman's an accident, I tell you, not an intintion. Break open an old maid's heart and you'll find some lad's initials is cairved there."

Delia laughed. "What need have you min for flatthery from us when yous can ahlways supply yourselves? Katie's niver been out of my sight for two days runnin' since she was born—lavin 'out the time she wint over to Ireland to see your mother for a few months. And that was 14 years gone. And niver a sign given of a ring or a letther written or resaved. Quit out of this now or you'll be late, and your lady hurler will be struttin' off wit 'a younger man and I'll be losin' me beau Martin."

Michael thrust his big bulk into his dress coat and his overcoat and put his hat on the side of his head and looked at himself in the mirror with unconcealed satisfaction. He was so pleased that his heart softened generally.

He went to Kate's door and knocked.

"Good-night, honey, and plisant drames. We'll be home soon afther daylight, so have me breakfast ready and I'll ate it in me dress suit like the sweels doos."

Kate came out, and told him how fine he looked, and kissed him and her mother, and watched them go.

The venerable Bridget had in her day danced barefooted on many a door taken from its hinges and laid down on the sod; and she dated back to the time when the pipers were men of honor and glory. She had seen the famine rage and the dances fall under the ban of the church and the pipers become outcast and vagabond. She had seen the better times come back and the pipers once more lifting their heads and the Irish language flourishing everywhere.

Her little eyes gleamed like liquid coals as Michael told of his dancing prowess. Kate alone was indifferent; she stood near the window and every passing train caught her eyes away from her father's account of the numbers of old men and women he and Delia had danced to death.

"Och, ma honey," he was saying, "I'd rather than 10 shillin' you were there last night. You're younger now than that old Kate-hang-out-of-the-windy. Come away from that Kate, for the love of the saints, and lave the trains go by.

"Well, ma, everybody admitted I was the best man there except Dalia here. And she danced something outrageous. The way she bobbed to the center in the sets made the other women look like rags. She had their hair in their eyes, and their combs hoppin' out of them and they sweatin' like thruck horses and she fresh as a daisy. Her heels wint, kickin' this side and that and her skirts flyin' the way you'd never drame she was mother to a priest.

"But at that it's more betther to be dancin' Irish ahl night than doin' them scandalous new fangles—thim Castile Wahks and lame dooks and Swedish movements that they was dancin' on the flure below.

"They had a band of white nagurs poundin' dhrums on the side and swattin' gongs, and the min and women wint round more like they was doin' a wrastlin' match than dancin'. Kate, if you don't stop starin' out that windy I'll smash it for you. Have you no inth'rest wativer in your father's and mother's succiss?"

"Oh, yes, indeed and I have that, pa," said Kate, trying to shake off her reverie and asking a question to prove her absorption in their experiences. "And who made the music upstairs for the Irish dancers? Mr. and Mrs. McAvoy, or Mr. Hennessey, or Mr. Fitzpatrick, or who?"

"It was none of thim, but a new piper. I don't know the name of 'um, a shrimpeen of a felly he was, but he could squeeze the win' out of the Union pipes the way you'd swayre it was the fairies was in it."

"I hate the pipes," said Kate.

Michael whirled on her with a gulping sound.

"What!"

"Fiddles and flutes are all right," Kate went on, "but I can't abide the noise of a pipe."

"The divil blisther us all," Michael roared. "She hates the pipes, she says. And you sayin' she's my daughter. She's not even Irish. She's a—a Portugoose or a Zulu!"

Even Delia was aghast at the treason. She stared at Kate so knowingly that she saw something behind the dark look, something that implied more than a musical criticism.

"Lave her be, Michael," she murmured. "It's one of her headaches is on her."

Michael turned away from her in disdain and addressed his mother with exaggerated brightness:

"Of course, he was as nothin' to old Killilea—the granduncle of Shane's Moyna—you remimber him, ma, belike?"

"That I do," said Bridget. "He was a young bouchal whin I was a colleen. He played at manny's the 'pattern' I danced at. He played at the wedding of me and your poor father—God give him heaven for his bed. He was blind, too, old Killilea."

"Most pipers used to be blind in the good old times," said Michael. "It was that kept me from takin' up the pipes meself whin I was a broth of a boyo—that and the hard they are for to be learnin'; and the expinse of them. After seein' Dalia here, I had no wish to blow me eyes out pipin.'

"But why pipers shold be blind I d'know, unless it's the win' that gets in their faces like. I niver understood it. Now a man who plays the war pipes, or the Scotch bagpipes, is different. I could understand them goin' dark, for they keep up such a poofin' and blowin' you'd think they'd whoof the eyeballs out of their heads. But at that I niver saw a Scotch bagpiper blind. But the betther part of the Union pipers used to be blind. Old Killilea was a dark man in the eyes."

"Maybe," Delia said, "Union pipers was blind because they was blind first and took up the pipes for to comfort themselves with, or for lack of other thrades to work at."

Michael glowered at her admiringly. "Now it would be you would be thinkin' of that! Yous women is foolish and you can't keep to the main road of sinse and raison, but now and then you take a short cut and stoomble on the trut'th be accidint. Maybe you have the right of it, Dalia. Yis, I do belave you have."

Kate broke in unexpectedly: "Was the piper who piped to you last night blind?" There was a trace of ill-suppressed excitement in her voice.

"No; he had a pair of eyes in him would outblink a weasel."

"And his name—did you say?"

"No, I didn't say. His name is a thing I didn't get. And what's it to you what his name is? You that have no likin' for pipin'." He turned to his mother again. "Somebody said he's been playin' round the counthry dances quite regular recent. He was pipin' for the Ballinlough Boys' Social Club lahst Saturda' and the Tuam Social Club of a Windsda', and the Manchester Martyrs' celebration the week before that. You was to the County Leitrim Ladies' dance, Kate. He was there. Did you not see him?"

"I didn't go into the Irish room," said Kate.

"And why werrun't you at the dance lasht night, Katie?" Bridget asked.

Kate shook her head and Delia explained:

"Sure and we couldn't booge her, though we tried. She niver goes to dances—or only rayrely."

Bridget's little eye widened. "That's strange, Katie. Whin you

The First Application Makes Skin Cool and Comfortable

If you are suffering from eczema or some other torturing, embarrassing skin trouble you may quickly be rid of it by using Mentho-Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist.

These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at little cost, or the druggist will put it up for you. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. The Free-Westinghouse
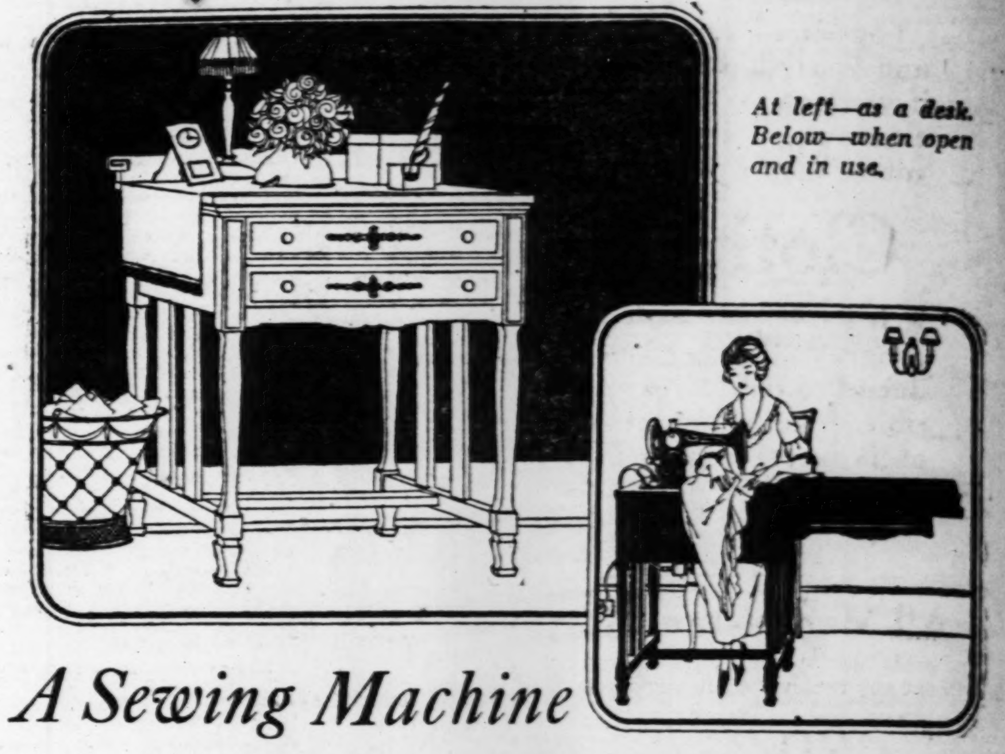
ELECTRIC SEWING MACHINE



At left—as a desk. Below—when open and in use.

A Sewing Machine You Won't Want to Hide

Why shouldn't your sewing machine be just as smart and stylish an article of furniture as any other in your home? It should and it can be, as the Free-Westinghouse Electric shows.

When you finish sewing on the Free-Westinghouse you won't want to hide it away in some obscure corner. You'll want to keep it out where it can be seen.

For the Free-Westinghouse, when not in use as a sewing machine, is a convenient and attractive writing desk or serving table, as you like. Just drop the head of the machine, close the cover and the transformation is complete.

Who wouldn't enjoy sewing on a machine that's good-looking, that requires no pushing of treadle or pedal, that makes a perfect stitch, runs quickly and with exceeding lightness, and has many other advantages over the ordinary treadle or electric machine.

The Free-Westinghouse is not a treadle machine with an attached motor. It is an electric machine from start to finish. The electric drive was developed by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company and the motor is built in. The machine itself is made by the Free Sewing Machine Company. Come and see it tomorrow.

POSTOFFICE FORCE ENROLLS IN RED CROSS

Roll Call to Begin Wednesday—Booths to Be Opened in Office Buildings.

The 1501 employes of the St. Louis Postoffice have enrolled 100 per cent strong in the Red Cross for 1921, thus heading the list of organizations or institutions on the 100 cent honor roll. The postmen also have volunteered to aid the roll call and on Tuesday will make a drive for membership subscriptions throughout the city. Several other organizations have unofficially informed Chairman Hammar that they expect to come into the 100 per cent honor roll before the actual roll call begins.

The roll call will begin officially Wednesday morning. Practically every activity in the city, public, private, secular and religious, has come into the big organization, which now numbers upwards of 2500 persons.

The women's division has organized for an intensive drive for five days, beginning next Saturday. Mrs. Benjamin F. Bush, former State chairman of the Women's Committee, Council of National Defense, is head of this division and has enlisted more than 500 women. The women's organizations, clubs and societies have mapped out a campaign that will cover practically the entire city. These women will make no solicitations, but will "man" the Red Cross booths that are to be set up in office buildings, hotels, clubs, department stores, public buildings, municipal buildings and other locations are frequented by large numbers of persons daily. There everybody may enroll and will be provided with the membership button for 1921, and the certificate and window banner signifying renewed membership. The captains and members of the various teams will meet at the Vandervoort Auditorium Thursday to receive final instructions and get their supplies.

Clubs and societies of foreign-born residents also will take part in the canvass. Gus V. R. Mechin has been placed in charge of this department and is appointing as his lieutenants the secretaries of each of the societies desiring to co-operate.

Six hundred men have enlisted in the downtown division, which is headed by E. J. Berkeley and E. J. Russell. These men will have entire charge of the canvass in the Fourth, Fifth, Sixth and Seventh Wards, exclusive of the hotels and department stores.

The program for this year's roll call will open unofficially today with the Armistice Day parade. Tomorrow at noon team captains and their lieutenants will assemble under their respective division chairmen at noon at the Red Cross Roll Call headquarters in the Kinloch Building for an inspirational meeting and to receive instructions. Tuesday the advertising matter and mechanical paraphernalia will be set up throughout the city. The roll call will end Thanksgiving Eve.

"LONG EVER AGO"

By RUPERT HUGHES.

come over to see me, long ivver ago. I could hardly lay eyes on you for the dancin' you did. Ivery night most she was off to some parish patron or field dance or something. There was a lad in it, of coorse. What was his name, Katie?"

Katie answered only with a blush of rosiness unseen in her cheeks before. Michael and Delia stared at her incredulously. Bridget rambled on:

"He left home about the same time with you, Kate. I thought it would be he was follyin' you acrost the say. What was his name, now? I knew his mother. She died about thin. Who was she? You should remimber the name, Katie."

"Oho!" Michael guffawed. "So Katie had a lover! Aha, she was human once. The deceptionable baggage she is!"

Delia was astounded: "Why, what at all? Musha, then! Why, Kate, my darlin'! and what happened him that you niver mentioned his name?"

Kate mumbled in a low tone: "Grandma is wanderin'. She remembers things all twisted. How should I remember the foolish things I did as a girl? I may have danced over there. Prob'ly I did. But nobody I knew was on the steamer with me. Nobody ever wrote me a letter in all these years. If I'd loved any lad, wouldn't there have been letters? If there'd have been letters wouldn't you have seen them?"

Delia nodded and Michael looked solemn. But they were rather baffled than convinced.

Michael put Delia's thoughts into his own words when he said:

"You've your answer ready, Katie—and there's only wan thing the matter with it, and that is there's nathin's the matter with it. It's just a thrifle too perfect—like yourself. And things that's too perfect isn't humanlike. So come and tell us ahl about it."

The stolid Kate was on the verge of an outbreak. She appealed to Delia as from a bullying brother:

"Ma, you better make him quit teasin' me, now!"

The child-obeying mother rounded on the so-called master of the house:

"Go on about your business, Michael, if you have any; the clock's been starin' at you this half hour. Or have you settled down to be an ould woman with the rest of us and nothin' to do but sit in a chair and mind anybody's business but your own? Go alang, now, or I'll put the broom acrost your lazy shoulthers!"

Michael turned to his own mother. "Ma, are you goin' to set there and leave thim two ould hags pick on your little son?"

Bridget knew the art of being a mother-in-law, and she laughed:

"Michaleen, you quit out of where you're not wanted, or I'll take you over me own knee."

Michael was pouting like a spankable boy as he took has hat and coat and sulked away to his office.

CHAMBER ASKS EMPLOYERS TO AID FIRST REGIMENT

Appeal Is Sent Out on Behalf of Directors Urging Time Allowance to Employes for National Guard Duties.

A general appeal to all St. Louis employers was sent out yesterday by Paul V. Bunn, General Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, asking for their co-operation in re-establishing the First Regiment of Infantry, Missouri National Guard, on lines of its pre-war status. Before the war the First Regiment was the largest in the State.

Bunn proposed that as a means of encouraging enlistments, employers allow men who join the organization all the time required for drills, formations, annual vacations and similar activities. His appeal follows:

"The War Department has authorized two Regiments of Infantry for Missouri. Kansas City has one and St. Louis, the largest municipality in the State, should have the other. It is our civic duty to perpetuate the First Regiment Infantry, National Guard of Missouri, which is the successor of the 138th of glorious record. We must do it now.

"One of the chief difficulties in recruiting the regiment has been that not enough large employers have shown a willingness to give their enlisted men time for camp duty (two weeks annually) without deducting this time from their vacation or pay.

"If such employers, realizing the actual necessity for a regiment in St. Louis, will agree to give their employes the necessary time, provided that in no case are the enlistments to exceed 2 per cent of the total number employed, it is thought that the necessary number of enlistments can be easily secured.

"Our board of directors has given this matter consideration, and has instructed me to write to all firms, recommending that they agree to give to their employes who wish to enlist, the time that may be required."

So far the regiment has been able to muster only one battalion. Full strength is three battalions.

EXHIBITION TO PROMOTE PUBLIC HEALTH PLANNED AT COLISEUM

Six St. Louis Organizations to Have Part in Program in Connection With Women's Exposition.

Six St. Louis organizations, the aim of which is the promotion of public health in the city, will give a joint exhibition and entertainment every afternoon and evening this week at the Coliseum in connection with the Women's Exposition, which opens there tomorrow. The program is to consist of movies, short addresses and talks explanatory of the exhibits, and a group of matrons and girls will act as a reception committee. Special exhibits were placed yesterday. Admission is to be free.

The organizations participating are the St. Louis Chapter, American Red Cross, Missouri Social Hygiene Association, Missouri Association for the Prevention of Cancer, Missouri Association for the Blind, St. Louis Dental Society, Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis. The Tuberculosis Society is conducting the exhibit for the six organizations and is providing speakers. Mrs. Max A. Goldstein, chairman of the executive committee of the Tuberculosis Society, has been named general chairman for the concession. She has appointed a day chairman, Mrs. Benjamin F. Bush, Mrs. A. G. Wichman, Mrs. Arthur Lieber, Mrs. Alvin Bauman, Mrs. Herman Steinwender and Mrs. W. C. Johnston.

The program will be generally the same each day, running continuously from 2 to 5:30 and from 7 to 10:30. It will be varied from time to time as the audience changes. Principal features will be a motion picture, "Mrs. Brown vs High Cost of Living," shown by the St. Louis Chapter, Red Cross; "Jinx," a motion picture shown by the Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis; stereopticon slides on the prevention of cancer, prevention of blindness and relation of teeth to general health, shown, respectively, by the Missouri Society for the Prevention of Cancer, the Missouri Association for the Blind, and the St. Louis Dental Society; "Everywoman's Problem," shown by the St. Louis Chapter, Red Cross; motion picture shown by the Missouri Social Hygiene Association.

REHEARING SOUGHT ON CLAIMS OF PRIEST AND M'CULLOCH

Albert D. Nortoni, Their Attorney, Says Priest Especially Is Entitled to Compensation.

In supporting a motion for a rehearing of the claims of Richard McCulloch, president of the United Railways Co., and Henry S. Priest, general counsel, for salaries and expenses, which have been denied by Judge Faris in Federal Court, Albert D. Nortoni, attorney for them, yesterday declared to Judge Faris that Priest, especially, was entitled to compensation because of his work in defending for the company the Seaman suit which resulted in the present receivership.

"The Seaman suit is not a suit against the United Railways Co.," Charles W. Bates, attorney for the receiver of the company said, "but in favor of it, and whatever benefits come from it will accrue to the company."

McCulloch's claim was for $7500 yearly salary and $384 expenses. Priest claimed $15,855 as salary from April, 1919, to May, 1920.

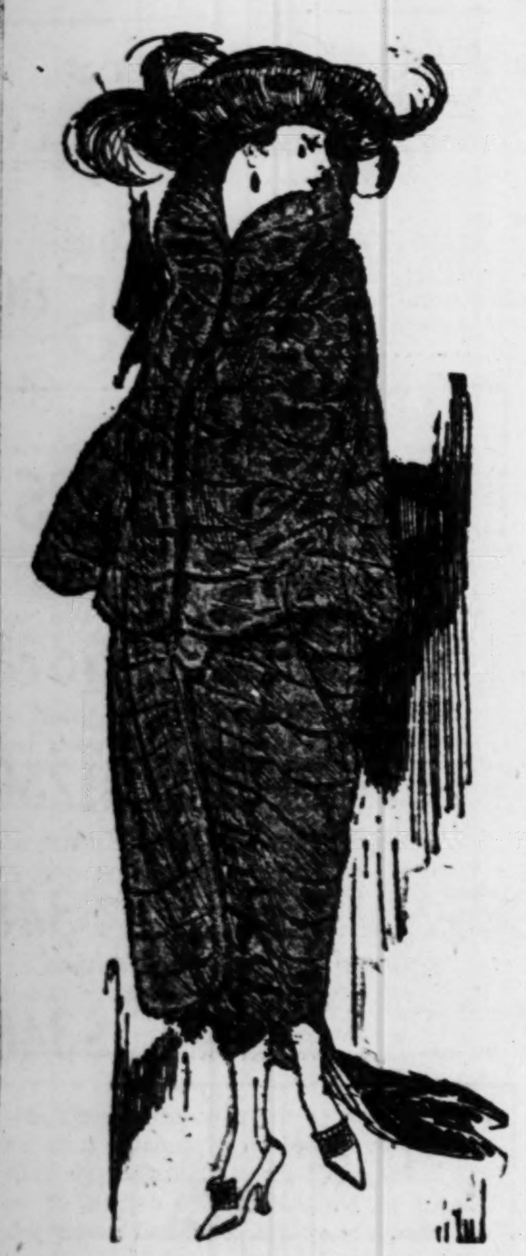
An Announcement Extraordinary!

Our Entire Stock of FURS



Offered, Beginning Monday, at a Discount of 25%

Off the Regular Marked Prices

◖ There have been a number of contributory causes for this unparalleled announcement. Lack of space does not permit their recital, however. The big point is the reduction, its size and the time of the year at which it comes.

Right now our collection of Furs is at its height, and not a single piece is excepted in this sale. Wraps, dolmans, coats, coatees, capes, throws, scarfs, chokers, muffs—everything is included. Every piece measures up to the high standard of quality and style exacted by us. Surely this is the time ideal to secure Furs for present use or for gifts, and we expect scores and scores of women (and men, as well) to avail themselves of this remarkable opportunity.

A deposit of 25% will hold your purchase until Christmas, if desired.

La Tausca Pearl Necklaces

Over 1000 Strands of These Exquisite Artificial Necklaces at Fractional Prices

◖ With the Christmas holidays approaching and the selection of gifts uppermost in the minds of all, this sale of La Tausca Pearl Necklaces is indeed opportune. The extraordinary savings offered are made possible by the fact that these Pearls are classed as seconds because of the rigid inspection to which they are subjected, though in most instances the fault lies in an extremely slight irregularity of an individual pearl, or the size graduation of the Necklace and noticeable only to the keenest observer.

All styles of Necklaces are included, from the small 18-inch strand for young misses to the heavy, 35-inch rope pearls for matrons. Iridescent Oriental pearls, Cynthia cream pearls and Roman white pearls.

This is, without question, the greatest purchase and sale of La Tausca pearls ever attempted in St. Louis. So varied is the collection that the appended description is entirely inadequate to convey an idea of its scope.

Each Necklace comes with the genuine La Tausca tag and in a handsome velvet gift case.

THANKSGIVING
DAY 1920

Music for Thanksgiving Day

Three hundred years ago the sturdy Pilgrims planted their standard on the New England shores and dedicated themselves to freedom — religious and political.
A few years later, the little colony, in dire need, devoutly prayed that relief might come. When, just at harvest time, a sailing vessel from England appeared, laden with provisions and clothing, that day was consecrated to God for the blessing He had sent.
In this day the greatest blessing of the home is Music, with its power to comfort, cheer and refresh mankind. Have Music in your home on Thanksgiving Day!

SCHMOLL PRAISES WORK OF ST. LOUIS HEALTH DIVISION

Director of Public Welfare Quotes Figures to Show City Is One of the Healthiest in the Country.

A statement concerning the general healthfulness of the city of St. Louis, including that of its infants, was issued yesterday by Director of Public Welfare Schmoll. As is known, various women's and other organizations are about to enter upon a campaign for the improvement of the St. Louis milk supply, an action prompted, in part, by statements of child specialists that the poor quality of the milk was causing sickness and some deaths among infants.

Director Schmoll's statement follows:

"The Health Division, which in this city is a section of the Public Welfare Department, is one of the most important divisions in municipal government, for upon it depends to a large extent the health conditions in a city.

"Through the enactment of proper laws and the enforcement of them, sometimes it has to resort to harsh and vigorous methods, as was the case when we had the flu epidemic, thereby bringing upon itself a great deal of unwarranted and unfair criticism by those who are not in responsible positions and do not know anything about sanitation or health measures.

Citizens Must Co-Operate.

"It is obvious, then, in order to have proper laws, first enacted and then enforced, that it needs the co-operation of all good citizens who are interested in welfare work, of which we have so many who are conscientiously laboring for the best interests of the city, as in order to know what the Health Division, through the Welfare Department, is accomplishing, one must be constantly in touch with the work.

"A division like the Health Division has less to show in the way of direct results obtained than any department of the municipal government. If the death rate, by proper sanitation and health measures, is reduced day by day and year by year, it is reflected only in the bare statistics; no ocular evidence can be produced, because the improvement comes so gradually, and these statistical figures are not, as a rule, impressive to the average citizen, unless it is by comparison. If, for instance, hundreds of lives have been saved by preventive measures, as a rule, unless special attention is called to it, only those who are in touch with health work know of these accomplishments.

"How many of our citizens know what the death rate of this city is now and what it was a half century ago? How many know that the activities of the division of health have prevented thousands of cases of disease and saved many lives by efficient and intelligent prophylaxis?

"How many of our citizens know that St. Louis is one of the healthiest cities in the country in which to live and rear a family, by reason of its extremely low death rate from all causes and more in particular among the babies under 2 years of age?

"In 1919 there were only 12.5 deaths from all causes out of every thousand of the living population, which is practically as low as any of the larger cities and very much better than most of them, as is shown by the following: Cleveland, 11.8; Detroit, 12.2; New York, 12.30; St. Louis, 12.5; Chicago, 12.09; Philadelphia, 14.52; Boston, 14.67; Buffalo, 15.3; Pittsburg, 15.8; Cincinnati, 15.9; San Francisco, 16.03; Baltimore, 17.06.

"From this we perceive that St. Louis is fourth with only [illegible] cities slightly under it. Then if we consider the fact that Cleveland, Detroit and New York have a large floating population, which is ordinarily composed of young and healthy men, for sick men do not leave their homes to go to labor in other cities, we can readily see what a splendid record St. Louis has made.

"There is another great disadvantage so far as health records are concerned in St. Louis, and that is the fact that possibly 100,000 or more people who work in St. Louis and ought to be a part of our population, live in the suburbs where

Mother, Why Don't You Take Nuxated Iron

And Be Strong and Well and Have Nice Rosy Cheeks Instead of Being Nervous and Irritable All The Time and Looking So Haggard and Old?—The Doctor Gave Some to Susie Smith's Mother and She Was Worse Off Than You Are and Now She Looks Just Fine

THE CHILD'S APPEAL

"There can be no Beautiful, Healthy, Rosy Cheeked women without Iron."

F. KING, M. D.

"There can be no healthy, beautiful, rosy-cheeked women without iron," says Dr. Ferdinand King, a New York Physician and Medical Author. "I have strongly emphasized the fact that doctors should prescribe more organic iron —Nuxated Iron—for their nervous, run-down, weak, haggard-looking women patients. Pallor means anaemia. The skin of the anaemic woman is pale, the flesh flabby. The muscles lack tone, brain fags and the memory fails, and often they become weak, nervous, irritable, despondent and melancholy. When the iron goes from the blood of women, the roses go from their cheeks.

"In the most common foods of America, the starches, sugars, table syrups, candies, polished rice, white bread, soda crackers, biscuits, macaroni, spaghetti, tapioca, sago, farina, degerminated cornmeal, no longer is iron to be found. Refining processes have removed the iron of Mother Earth from these impoverished foods, and silly methods of home cookery, by throwing down the waste-pipe the water in which our vegetables are cooked, are responsible for another grave iron loss.

"Therefore you should supply the iron deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron, just as you would use salt when your food has not enough salt.

"I have used Nuxated Iron widely in my own practice in most severe aggravated conditions with unfailing results. I have induced many other physicians to give it a trial, all of whom have given me most surprising reports in regard to its great power as a health and strength builder."

Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York City, said: "I have never before given out any medical information or advice for publication, as I ordinarily do not believe in it. But in the case of Nuxated Iron, I feel I would be remiss in my duty not to mention it. I have taken it myself and given it to my patients with most surprising and satisfactory results. And those who wish quickly to increase their strength, power and endurance will find it a most remarkable and wonderfully effective remedy."

If people would only take Nuxated Iron when they feel weak or run down, instead of dosing themselves with habit-forming drugs, stimulants and alcoholic beverages, there are probably thousands who might readily build up their red blood corpuscles, increase their physical energy and get themselves into a condition to ward off the millions of disease germs that are almost continually around us.

It is surprising how many people suffer from iron deficiency and do not know it.

Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you the proper amount of good. You don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained.

Dr. Ferdinand King, New York Physician and Medical Author, says that Physicians should prescribe more organic iron—Nuxated Iron—for their patients; Anaemia—iron deficiency—is the greatest curse to the health, strength, vitality and beauty of the modern American Woman.

You can tell the women with plenty of iron in their blood—beautiful, healthy, rosy cheeked women full of Life, Vim and Vitality

MANUFACTURERS' NOTE: Nuxated Iron, which is recommended by Dr. Sullivan and other physician, is now being used by over four million people annually. It is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. It is put up in tablet form, and you can swallow the tablets or eat them like candy. Each tablet of genuine Nuxated Iron is stamped as follows: And the words Nuxated Iron are stamped into each bottle, so that the public may not be led into accepting inferior substitutes. It is easily assimilated and does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed in this city by all good druggists in tablet form only.

the air is necessarily better than it is in the congested districts, and who by reason of the fact that we cannot extend our city limits, keep down our population; nevertheless all that part which lies in the congested district where the death rate is necessarily larger than in the outlying districts are all taken into account in this table. In other words, if the limits of St. Louis were extended as they should be, then our death rate would be accordingly decreased and there is no doubt that it would be lower than any city in the United States.

"St. Louis experienced the lowest death rate among infants in 1919 of any of the cities having a population of 600,000 or over in the United States. Our baby death rate was 75,5 per 1000 of children born, as compared with New York, 81.6; Philadelphia, 89.8; Cleveland, 90.8; Chicago, 91.0; Detroit, 96.8; Boston, 96.8; Baltimore, 97.0; Buffalo, 109.85; Pittsburg, 115.3, which means that out of every 1000 babies who were born in 1919 only 75 died. When we go back for 15 years and find from the records that at that time 149 babies died each year out of every 1000 born, it brings us to a realization as to just what has been accomplished in the saving of human life to the community.

"By comparison let us go back 50 years and we find that the death rate then was 51.7 per 1000; in 1895 it was 25.1 per 1000, and today it is only 12.5 per 1000, showing that just about one-fourth of the people die per 1000 now as compared with 50 years ago, and one-half as many per 1000 since 1895. This decrease coming gradually is not easily perceptible and only is called to our attention when we take the actual figures and compare them.

Necessity of Large Budget.

"One of the difficulties that is always experienced in health work is that it is hard to make those who have the financial end of a municipality in hand to understand the necessity of larger appropriations for health and welfare work in the community. The American Journal of Public Health in November, 1920 reads:

" 'Public health is purchasable,' says the United States Public Health Service, and adds that a first-class health protection service can be provided for $1 per head per year. In fact, some city health departments render excellent service at a cost of 75 cents per head. Let's all get together and give better support to health work in this community."

"From this article from the American Journal of Public Health, we find that they hold that it costs $1 per capita to get splendid public health service and that in some cities 75 cents has brought splendid results; in our city, unfortunately, we have been allowed only 35 cents, which is less than one-half the lowest rate which the American Journal of Public Health says is absolutely necessary.

"If we consider the facts as set out above, the many disadvantages that the department has labored under, we feel that we have made a splendid record in St. Louis. It must not be forgotten, however, that a great deal of the credit in lowering the death rate of our city is due to the splendid co-operation of the division of hospitals, whose duty it is to take care of the dependent sick, and who rendered such splendid service and assistance during the flu epidemic.

"If we are to still further improve the health and welfare conditions of St. Louis, then it is very obvious that we must be willing to pay a larger share for this work than we have in the past."

Infantile Death Rate Low.

Dr. Borden S. Veeder, who commanded Hospital Unit No. 21 upon its return from France, and who is a former chief of staff of the Children's Hospital, stated at a recent mass meeting to discuss the milk question, that the reason for the low infantile death rate in St. Louis was that children's clinics about the city, which were founded by private endeavor, had educated mothers to feed their infants at the breast, and that the number of breast-fed infants here now was 75 per cent of all born.

Dr. W. McKim Marriott, chief of staff at the Children's Hospital, and Drs. John Zahorsky and Gustave Lippmann, child specialists, declared that many infants in St. Louis had been made ill by the milk and some were dying.

Dr. Carl L. Alsberg, chief of the Bureau of Chemistry of the United States Department of Agriculture, said at the meeting that if St. Louis had escaped epidemics due to milk, it was fortunate. Upon a visit to the city last year Dr. Alsberg's attention was called to statements of the Health Department at the time that the character of milk here could not be as bad as pictured because of the city's low infantile death rate.

"That does not follow," Dr. Alsberg replied. "There are many things which contribute to an increase or decrease of infant mortality. Milk is an important one. More important, however, is the home environment. The cities whose citizens have a high average of individual prosperity, such as St. Louis, might be expected to have a lower death rate than New York, which has many tenements. Yet the boroughs of the Bronx and Brooklyn, each comparable in size to St. Louis, had a lower death rate last year than did St. Louis."

HEARING ON ORDER AGAINST PICKETING SET FOR FRIDAY

Four Restaurants Obtain Writ to Stop Interference by Employes Who Quit Because of Open Shop Policy.

UNION OFFICIALS MADE DEFENDANTS

Petitions Recite Series of Alleged Illegal Acts and Interference With Customers of Places.

Pickets representing the striking waiters, waitresses and cooks continued picketing yesterday afternoon in front of four downtown restaurants following the issuance of a temporary restraining order by Federal Judge Faris. The order was made returnable next Friday, when there will be a hearing to determine whether or not it shall be made permanent. Miss Bessie Brooks, president of the Waitresses' Union, one of the defendants, said the pickets would not be withdrawn except on advice of counsel.

The order was asked for by the Benish Baking and Catering Co., Eighth and Olive streets; the Gem Restaurant Co., 708 Pine street and 1727 Market street, and the Arco Cafeteria Co., 409 North Broadway, and applies only to picketing in front of those four restaurants.

Acts Specifically Enjoined.

The strikers are temporarily enjoined from bothering persons entering the restaurants, obstructing entrances, intimidating, threatening and insulting customers and employes and from throwing offensive smelling bombs in or near the restaurants.

The defendants against whom the order was directed were the following unions and officials: Waiters' Union, Local 20, James Scully, business agent; Waitresses' Union, Local 249, Florence Hendricks, business agent, and Bessie Brooks, president; Cooks and Pastry Cooks, Local 203, Charles L. Crabill, secretary, and the Bartenders' Protective and Benevolent Association.

As is known, the union waiters, waitresses and cooks employed by members of the Hotel and Restaurant Employers' Association quit work when that organization adopted an open shop policy Oct. 1.

Affidavit by Benish.

Accompanying his petition, Edward A. Benish, president of the Benish Baking and Catering Co., filed an affidavit that before picketing was started Oct. 4 the daily receipts of his restaurant were $1500 and that since then the receipts have greatly decreased.

George A. Harris of 4438 Delmar boulevard, in an affidavit filed in court, said he had watched the entrances of the Benish restaurant daily and had observed women pickets "shouting in a wild and boisterous manner" so that they attracted large crowds. He said he heard one woman picket call Benish an offensive name and saw another grab a customer and try to prevent him from going in, saying he would be a "dirty scab." A picket named Grace, he said stopped 12 or more customers and told them they were not Americans if they patronized Benish.

C. N. Casimatis, president of the Gem Restaurant Co., with restaurants at 708 Pine street and 1727 Market street, filed an affidavit that strike pickets had thrown offensive smelling bombs and iron missiles at the Pine street restaurant and had told passersby that the place was run by "dirty Greeks." Employes had been assaulted by strikers, he said, and representatives of unions had threatened to kill the proprietors and managing officials of the company

Seven Women Pickets Named.

The affidavit asserts that union representatives told Casimatis the unions were now in control of the Government and would break up the Gem Restaurant Co. unless it acceded to the union demands for a closed shop. The affidavit gave the names of seven women who were alleged to have done offensive picketing.

George Angelich, president of the Arco Cafeteria Co., filed an affidavit in which he said women pickets "howled and yelled" so that they could be heard several blocks. As proof of the "howling" he submitted a snapshot photograph of a woman picket with her mouth opened wide. The pickets, he said, told customers the place was un-American and that employes worked 14 hours a day seven days a week and were "fed from the garbage can." He said evil-smelling bombs had been thrown at the restaurant and customers had been interfered with.

Detroit Minister to Preach Here.

The Rev. Augustus P. Reccord of the Unitarian Church of Detroit, Mich., will preach at the Church of the Messiah this morning and evening. Tomorrow evening he will address a joint meeting of the Church of the Unity Chapter of the Laymen's League and the Church of the Messiah Chapter of the Laymen's League at a smoker in the parlor of the Church of the Unity, King's highway at Waterman avenue. He will tell about the "Get acquainted club," which was organized in his church at Detroit.

KING'S

DEHYDRATED FRUITS & VEGETABLES

An Achievement of Vast Importance to Your Winter's Food Supply

From time immemorial, fresh fruits and vegetables have been a mainstay of human existence. Without them as food, it would be difficult to maintain physical health.

Heretofore, the great disappointment has been that ripe fruits and fresh vegetables were obtainable only in certain seasons and at certain places.

Today, they may be enjoyed in any season and at any place.

King's Dehydration—scientific, improved, practical—establishes this new era that vitally concerns your supply of winter foods. King's Dehydration is one of the century's greatest achievements.

KING'S Dehydration means removal of water in a special way

Not to "dry" them, but to remove most of the water in such a way as to leave the fruits and vegetables so that they may be revived again to all their natural fresh succulence and ripe flavor is what King's Dehydration has accomplished for you.

King's Products will now supplant, in a large degree, "dried," canned and even so-called "fresh" fruits and vegetables from the fruit stands, because King's are neither hopelessly changed from the fresh in flavor nor have they been gathered green and mellowed artificially.

Gathered at ripening time

King's Fruits and Vegetables are gathered on the very day that they are fully ripened,—when the rich natural sugar, mineral salts and acids are fully developed, when the natural, ripe bouquet and flavor are most remarkable—from the famous orchards and gardens of the Oregon country they are hurried to King's Dehydration plants. There they are sorted, washed, dehydrated and packed in clean, convenient cartons and sealed against the entrance of dust or germs.

Refresh in clear, cold water

Without the water in them King's Fruits and Vegetables "keep" indefinitely. They are available in any season and for any meal; by soaking them as directed on package, in clear, cold water, they are re-freshed, and may then be used just as though they were actually freshly gathered.

One Pound of King's Fruits or Vegetables Equals 3 to 15 pounds of the Fresh

This is a special economy. To have the equivalent of one pound of King's in fresh fruits and vegetables, you would have to buy from 3 to 15 pounds of the latter,—select them, carry them, clean them, and peel them.

Because of the removal of the water, peelings, cores, etc., King's Dehydrated Foods are reduced in weight to one-third to one-fifteenth of the original weight. You do not pay for water or refuse. What you buy is all food.

Yet when revived by soaking in water, King's Dehydrated Foods are equal to the fresh in taste, texture, and food value.

Let your grocer know that you want to try out these wonderful King's Fruits and Vegetables

AN OVERSTRAINED CREDIT SITUATION EFFECT NOW FELT

Break in Securities Reflects Passing Through of a Major Phase of the "After-War Readjustment."

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"Not for a long time has Wall Street watched so anxiously for a recovery in prices as this week. When the markets not only refuse to rally, but broke day by day to lower levels, with extreme violence, people in the financial district began to realize that they were confronting a major phase of the 'after-war readjustment.' For months past bankers have been carefully appraising the outlook of these autumn and early winter months. It was the consensus of all well-informed opinion that then would be witnessed a test, whether the mechanism of credit could successfully withstand the stain certain to be imposed upon it. The present turn of affairs is merely the carrying out of what was then clearly foreseen.

"That the week's striking developments in the financial markets one in a very real sense the consequences of an overstrained credit situation, cannot be doubted. Monetary demands for the carrying on of the season's trade and the financing of the crop marketing movement, inevitably converge upon this particular time of year. In two particulars, however, the present autumn was different from those which preceded. First the period of midsummer financial ease, when money is habitually slack had been altogether lacking; and second, a last desperate attempt was being made by dealers and producers to stave off, with the use of bank credit, the inexorable downward movement of prices.

"Under these influences, a situation was created whose existence was not commonly understood. When the bankers, some months ago, informed the public that they should be able to get by the autumn without a downright 'credit smash,' failures, and all the familiar incidents of such periods in the past, there was too much of a disposition to assume that all would be well.

Reaction May Go Too Far.

"Possibly the responsible financial authorities themselves went rather too far in predicting an orderly and gradual readjustment, for men whose business affairs needed readjustment were apt to believe in their case, at any rate, the necessary changes would be slight and not altogether disagreeable. But it will not do to trace too minutely the sources and circumstances of the public state of mind. Our war-grown prosperity was certain to receive some shocks after the war, and it would have taken something more than the warnings of financial experts to avert or materially soften what has now occurred.

"It is easily possible that the present movement of reaction will go too far, in the curtailment of manufacturers' output, the reduction of prices, commodity and the fall of values on the Stock Exchange. The very cause of the present condition has strained credit conditions—is one that makes discrimination difficult. Dealers with large stocks of goods on hand and with pressing loans to meet are not particularly interested in the movement of prices in their own market, insofar as the decline might suggest that further purchases be made. With everyone anxious to sell and with a diminishing number able or willing to buy, it may be that some stocks will be disposed of before provision is made for their replacement, with the result that prices may recover sharply.

Await Better Bank Showings.

"In the light of recent experience, however, it is not likely that many people would be deceived by such movements into believing that liquidation has run its course. More tangible and convincing evidence will be required on that point. No better evidence probably, will be afforded than a distinct, if gradual, improvement in the banking position, with reduction of loans and expansion of banking reserves relative to liabilities. Such a development would indicate that the strain of financing general trade and the crops had passed its apex and that the banks were by degrees liquidating the special loans extended to help their customers over rough places. Just what funds will be available for the stock market itself, either before or after such a general easing of credit, is rather difficult to foresee. Of late heavy Government requisitions on the banks have absorbed funds ordinarily employed on the Stock Exchange. It would not be surprising if, in the near future, the heavy fall in prices on the exchange brought about some easing of credit. But in the meantime it will be recalled that stocks were sold because the money was urgently needed elsewhere, not because the banks wanted to increase their surplus of teamporary funds. That is sufficient explanation of the fact that thus far there has been no permanent relaxing of rates; it also indicates something of the severity of the financial strain under which the community was laboring.

CURB MARKET DULL AND GENERAL TONE IS EASY

No Signs of Outside Support in Evidence—Nervous Feeling Prevails.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Fluctuations were more orderly on the curb market today and in most issues were confined to fractions. There was still a feeling of nervousness and no signs of inside support were in evidence. Outside business continued small on the selling side. Traders did little except to even their accounts over Sunday, so that dealings were smaller than usual for a half-holiday. The general tone was easy.

Oil shares were moderately active for a few minutes, but later lapsed into dullness. Simms Petroleum again duplicated its recent lowest record. Carib Syndicate was fractionally lower at the start, but rallied slightly. Ryan Consolidated got down to its previous low mark. Midwest Refining was lower. Others were about unchanged.

General Asphalt was dealt in on a small scale but rose a fraction. United Retail Candy moved up on covering of shorts. General Electric rights were fairly active, but moved within a narrow range. Sweets Co. and United Profit Sharing ruled around the low point reached on Friday.

Mining shares were dull, business being confined to a few of the low-priced issues. There was moderate activity in the bond crowd, but price changes were small.

Wall Street News and Comment
—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—There are only two possible interpretations to be placed upon this week's demoralized Wall Street movement. Either it means that the market has been getting ready for a more severe and more prolonged depression in general business than has been figured all along, or else it means that in the process of discounting the trade readjustment stock prices have gone to just as much of an excess as they went a year ago in the opposite direction.

If the first assumption is correct, then the best judgment of representative business and financial leaders has been very wrong.

They have been quoted, nearly all of them, as expressing the view that the period of reaction would be comparatively short, that starting as it did in midsummer last it would run its course within six or eight months, that it would be over some time during the early part of 1921. These men have insisted that conditions at bottom were sound. The superstructure of inflated prices and inflated volume of business which grew up as a result of the war had to be swept away. There had been an overstrain of credit and this must be corrected through the instrumentality of liquidation and declining prices. All classes of the business community would have losses to face which they must accept as their share of the hardships incident to the restoration of industry to a peace footing. But it has been everywhere agreed that the position of the country, a creditor everywhere in the markets of the world, with bountiful crops to augment its store of capital, would pass through the ordeal without any vitally serious consequences. Looking ahead, important men have not been pessimistic, but all of them, who have talked publicly, have taken the ground that the business situation would shortly clear.

It is easier to believe the second explanation merely an excessive swing downward of a disordered speculative market than to believe the best business and financial opinion of the nation has made a wrong diagnosis. It is the American fashion to do things up quickly and when at the outset of the autumn it became generally recognized that commodity prices would have to be cut and cut deep, the attitude taken was that it was better to go the limit at once regardless of the losses entailed. Consequently, the slump in trade has been extremely violent. It is not easy to recall a past situation equalling it for the intensity of the decline in prices and the shutting down of production activities. Because it has been so violent, because so much has been accomplished in so short a space, it is the best reason for believing that the acute stage of the depression will quickly pass. There have been many rumors of impending failures, but none has materialized. While it is true that the utmost pressure has been brought to bear for a reduction of credits there is no deficiency of resources available to help out any enterprise which is essentially sound and yet which may be temporarily embarassed by having to meet obligations while not able to realize immediately upon assets.

The Credit Situation.

Bank reserve ratios are low, but we have passed through the crop moving season with all its heavy extra demands with very slight impairment in the bank position. It is absurd to talk of a dearth of credit facilities with a reserve ratio around 42 per cent when business is going on as usual in England with a proportion to liabilities of little more than 10 per cent. The Federal Reserve system has proved its worth. It has demonstrated how it can utilize surplus strength in some parts of the country to bolster up the situation in other parts. Herein is the vast difference between the present and other times of stress. There are abundant reserves of credits and the Federal Reserve system has brought about the ability to effectively mobilize this reserve and make it available where most needed. If this could have been in 1907 there would have been no panic. Suspension of a perfectly solvent institution like the one which start runs on other banks and precipitated the crisis of October and November of that year, would not have been permitted. It is the difference between the old regime of laissez faire, of every bank for itself and the new regime of a coordinated system under a central control managed disinterestedly for the general good.

South American Exchange.

The only new feature in the general situation that has come into prominence during the week is the collapse in the exchanges with South and Central America and the consequent rapid rise in the value of the dollar in those countries similar in every way to that which occurred a year ago at the European capitals. Besides the problem of how to keep up trade with Europe and get payment of debts to us, we now have the same problem in our relations with the Southern continent. The outcome is hard to forecast. It is well to remember, however, that despite the tremendous depreciation in exchanges, Europe has managed to buy very freely from this country during the past 12 months and the great shrinkage in our export commerce with war lands, which was predicted a year ago, has not materialized. It is also well to bear in mind that there is an excellent market for foreign Government securities and there is no reason if France and Belgium and the Swiss and Scandinavian municipalities can sell their bonds so readily over here, why Brazil and Argentine and Chile cannot do the same.

Much has been made of tight money as a factor in the break in stocks, but it may be doubted whether the call loan renewal has stood this week at 7 per cent instead of 9 it would have made any great amount of difference. There has been no calling of Wall Street loans like there was last year at this time for the purpose of building bank reserves and stocks have not been sold because it was impossible or even difficult to get money to carry them. The sequel to the liquidating movement in industry is bound to be a loosening of credit and lower rates of interest.

The Bond Market.

The break in stocks made more impression upon bond prices today than it has on any day so far. The losses were not heavy, but nevertheless they were sufficiently pronounced to indicate that a good many recently purchased bonds were being thrown over by people who were hard hit by the smash in stocks. There was much selling of this character and Liberty Bonds of the fourth loan dropped below 87 for a loss of half a point. Other Liberty issues were depressed, but not to the same extent as the fourth 4¼s. Other Government securities were lower. The French 8s were down to 100⅝. Belgian 7½s were a fraction lower than 99¼. The Mexican 5s dropped a half point to 45.

Specialty bonds suffered with the weakness in stocks. St. Louis & San Francisco income 6s sold down to 48¾, or 8 points off from their top, and back to within a point of where they started on their upward selling two months ago.

BRITISH MARKETS WAIT ON TREND OF MONEY RATES

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—The immediate course of the markets is likely to depend on the outcome of the controversy between the "cheap" and "dear" money men, the inflationists and deflationists. The dispute is evidently proceeding with identical vigor on both sides of the Atlantic.

Without attempting to pronounce upon the merits of the controversy, I am able to assert that the soundest views in London financial circles recognize that while extremist views on either side are probably wrong, the point in favor of the deflationists is that while the loudest exponents of cheap money and expanded credit manifestly have axes to grind, the deflationists probably represent more disinterested views. In this connection I may remind you that "both operations" in stocks are still forbidden here.

Nevertheless, strong political influences here are operating in the direction of expanded credit and cheaper money. Politicians are naturally influenced by the desire to avert temporary distress resulting from deflation, and especially to provide ample employment. This partly explains the eagerness expressed in some quarters to certain resumption of trade with Russia to obtain Bolshevist gold.

Steady Rates Expected.

This policy is disapproved in the soundest financial quarters. Lord Beaverbrook, in the Express, loudly champions the necessity of financing distressed European nations. He advocates the cheap money policy and probably has strong supporters in the Cabinet.

The Bank of England and your Federal Reserve Board are pursuing an identical policy.

At the moment the controversy appears to be evenly balanced, and I am inclined to expect neither a rise nor a fall in money rates immediately. It therefore seems that stocks will be comparatively stagnant.

Having discussed the American situation with many important individuals who have recently returned from the United States, I find the consensus of opinion to be that, while serious trouble has been averted, largely through the Interstate Commerce Commission's decision advancing railway rates, nevertheless it is considered that your country must inevitably experience numerous failures through the fall in prices.

Retailers Won't Cut Prices.

Retailers here decline to cut prices, in spite of reduced demand on the part of the consumer, and this involves congested stocks in manufacturers' hands. It also explains the eagerness in trading quarters to give further credits to impecunious European countries.

If the schemes for trading with Russia were to be carried out, the result might be that large amounts of gold would come here. The Russian trading plans, however, will probably not be put through. The French and British Governments on March 28, 1918, issued a joint manifesto practically proclaiming their determniation to insist on recognition of Russia's external debt.

Foreign Exchange and Domestic Money

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—The week that just ended was one of acute unsettlement in the foreign exchange market, new low records being made in rates from many points, and at times the market was one of heavy offerings without nearby bids. There were frequent alternations, however, between weakness and strength, recoveries of substantial extent being made after low levels were established, but the advances were not maintained, and, although the market later lacked uniformity, weakness continued to prevail in many quarters. Many new low records were made, the most important being attached to the decline in the rate of checks on Paris to 5.70 on Thursday. Italian exchange showed a receding tendency, lire checks selling down to the new low of 3.36, and Spanish exchange was heavy all through the week, pesetas checks selling yesterday at the new low of 11.97.

Sterling was at its weakest point on Monday when demand was down to $3.33, the lowest level touched since last February, but this decline was followed by an upturn of 7 cents after which the market receded again. Holland exchange was also heavy, guilders checks selling at the new low of 29.00. Austrain exchange sold down to the new low of 27¼ to the crown. Exchange on Switzerland and Denmark also made new low records. South American exchange moved in the same way, Argentine exchange falling to the new low of 133 and Brazilian exchange also established a new low yesterday when milreis sold at 15.75. Rallies which occurred in sterling were attributed to sales of securities for London account. German exchange, after selling at 1.10, moved up to 1.18.

Sterling exchange at final session of the week was strong in the early trading, demand moving up 1 cent to above $3.37 at the opening and there were material advances in French and Italian, but later in the forenoon there were increased offerings, and recessions occurred from high range in the early trading. Italian was active and strong, lire checks advancing in the initial trading to $3.51 on the news of the Adriatic settlement, but this advance was quickly followed by a reaction. Spanish continued pressure, pesetas checks again making a new low record.

BREAK IN WHEAT PRICES FOR WEEK NEAR-RECORD

General Business Situation at Moment and Exchange Rates Factors in Market.

Downward plunges taken during the week by grain prices have seldom if ever been so steep in an equal length of time. Financial stress, particularly as shown in demoralization of foreign exchange, was one of the leading apparent factors.

December wheat at St. Louis closed yesterday at $1.80¾b compared with $1.92½ week ago; March wheat $17.15 compared with $1.86½b; December corn 76¾b compared with 81⅜@½c; May corn 78⅞b compared with 85⅝c; December oats, 49½c compared with 52½a; May oats 54c compared with 58½a.

Bearish sentiment regarding wheat acquired special impetus from views expressed by Julius Barnes, former Director-General of the United States Grain Corporation, that wheat producers had escaped the full effect of deflation as contrasted with cotton, sugar and coffee. Subsequently, big new breaks in exchange rates on Europe attracted eager attention, and talk was current that domestic curtailment of credit would force much grain on the market, notably in Kansas. Sudden rallies followed word that for the first time in nearly two months Great Britain had done some buying on this side of the Atlantic and that no extensive calling of rural loans in Kansas was looked for. Unfavorable opinions of the general business outlook, however, proved subsequently more than an offset, despite unusual meagerness of receipts and of offerings from the country.

Corn and oats were swayed by the action of wheat.

Provisions' weakness in sympathy with grain was checked somewhat by reports of an Eastern demand for lard.

HIGHER TREND TO PRICES IN CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Nov. 13.—There was a general rush to buy wheat at the start today by commission houses which disclosed a badly oversold condition and prices advanced sharply with December in the lead. After starting ½c to 6c above yesterday's finish, with Dec. $1.78¾ to $1.82 and March $1.70 to $1.72½, the market underwent a slight reaction.

The undertone in wheat was strong and the spread between December and March widened out to around 10c, the widest in more than two weeks. At the finish prices were up ¾c to 4c, with December $1.79⅞ to $1.80 and March $1.69¼ to $1.69½.

Trade in corn was light and of a local character. Short covering in sympathy with the upturn in wheat sent the market up but the best prices were not maintained due to increased pressure. After starting unchanged to 1c higher with Dec. 74¾c to 75⅛c and May 79⅝c to 80¼c, prices suffered a setback.

Corn was under pressure and a rally toward the close brought prices up near where they finished. The close was unchanged to 1c net higher, with December 74½c to 74⅝c and May 78¾c to 79¼c.

Oats were in sympathy with other grains and opened ¼c to ⅛c higher with Dec. 48⅜c to 48½c and May 53⅜c to 52½c.

Provisions were firmed with grains and hogs.

Sugar Market.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Raw sugar was weak again today. There were sales of 4000 bags of Brazilian centrifugal at 5¼c to a local refiner with more offered but not placed.

Refined was quiet at 10.00@10.50 for fine granulated.

Futures opened weak under pressure from Wall street and the heaviness of raw, but rallied on Cuban support and trade buying and closed steady at 10 to 20 points declin-

WEEK'S HOG RECEIPTS HEAVY, PRICES FALL

COMPARATIVE LIVESTOCK RECEIPTS.

	Last Week.	Prev. Week.	Year Ago.
Cattle and calves	36,228	31,083	38,727
Hogs	82,173	52,005	80,156
Sheep	14,446	12,684	15,551
Horses and mules	420	451	8,206
Totals	133,267	96,223	142,640

Receipts of cattle at St. Louis last week were among the largest of the year and market ruled downward in virtually all departments. Total arrivals for the six-day period amounted to 36,228 head, 13,812 of which were received Monday. Values that day broke sharply and weakness was manifest throughout the remainder of the week.

Beef steers closed for the period on an average of 50c lower, putting values down $1.50@2.75 during the past 10 market days. Offering of steers included approximately 40 cars of western grassers that sold from $6.50@9.35 for bulk. Quality of native steer offering was unusually poor, less than half-a-dozen cars bringing $12 or better and bulk going from $8.50@11.25. Top was $14, paid for a load of Angus, fed in Pike County, Ill.

Butcher stock declined more violently than steers in some cases. Especially mean action was experienced on yearlings, prices of which are down 75c@$1 for the week. There were no good corn-fed yearlings to speak of, but an abundance of common grassy kinds.

Butcher cows declined 50@75c on an average and canners and cutters dropped 50c for the week. Bulk of butchers at the close of the week were selling at $6@7 for strong kinds, while medium grades went from $5@6 mainly. Canners closed the week selling from $3@3.25, while cutters cashed at $3.75@4.50.

Bologna bulls dropped 50c during the days under review, while beef grades registered a break of 25@50c. Trade was irregular. Most fair to good bolognas sold from $5@6, plainer kinds $4@5. Beef grades extended from $6.75@8.

A light call prevailed for stocker and feeder cattle early in the week and market declined 50c on all classes in sympathy with decline in killing stock. Demand was materially improved later in the week, although values did not react to any material extent.

Veal calves closed 25c lower, top on lights Friday being $14.25. Market showed considerable fluctuations during the week.

Heavy Run Forces Hog Decline.

With one of the largest runs of the season and over 30,000 more hogs than were handled last week, values in this department dropped to a sharply lower level the past week, the top descending from $14.65 last Saturday to $13.10 in the final session of the week just closed. Receipts totaled 82,173 head, comparing with 52,005 last week and 80,156 the corresponding period of last year. Market is about $1 lower for the week on pigs; $1.50 lower on hogs and $2 off on rough packers. A strong order call, mostly for light stuff and an unusually brisk demand from city butchers was all that saved prices from further punishment, as packers bought sparingly and were bearish at all times. A feature was the unusual demand for pigs weighing 80 to 100 pounds, which on several occasions sold higher than hogs, as, for instance, Saturday, when top on hogs was $13.10, some good light pigs were noted up to $13.50. Bulk of the hogs for the week sold from $12.85@14. Rough hogs are quotable from $11.25@11.50.

Sheep and Lambs Close Lower.

Aproximately 15,000 sheep and lambs were received on the local market the past week, as against a supply of 13,000 a week previous. Market was slow through the period at declining prices and closed $1 lower on lambs and $1.25 lower on sheep. Current quotations are $11@11.50 for best lambs, $10@11 for medium to fair; plain kinds and feeders, $8@10 and culls $6@6.50. Market for mutton sheep and other aged grades was very slow, owing to heavy runs, and the level reached is the lowest in five years, or since 1915. Best fat ewes at the close were found selling at $5.

Turpentine and Rosin.

SAVANAH, Ga., Nov. 13.—Turpentine: nothing doing; last sale Nov. 5, at $1.12; receipts, 634; shipments, 10; stock 15,792.

Rosin, dull; sales, none; receipts, 2,704; shipments, 23; stock, 58,567.

CENSUS REPORT BEARISH FACTOR IN COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—There was a renewal of yesterday's selling movement in the cotton market at the opening today, owing to unfavorable week-end reviews of the goods situation, the easier ruling of Southern spot markets late yesterday and spot house selling, presumably to hedge purchases made at an easier basis yesterday afternoon in the South. First prices were easy at a decline of 3 to 27 points, with active months selling 15 to 32 points net lower right after the call. This carried January off to 17.70c, or within 15 points of the season's low record, while May and July both made new low prices, May selling at 17.50c and July at 17.30c. The census report showing domestic mill consumption of only 399,837 bales against 556,041 for October last year was a factor on the decline.

There was covering enough to cause rallies of 20 or 25 points during the middle of the morning, but the bulges met increased offerings, with March and later deliveries making new low records for the season. In the latter trading, January sold off to 17.64c and March to 17.50c, with active months generally showing net losses of 30 to 36 points. Reports of freezing temperatures generally over the South had little influence, but trade interests were good buyers on a scale down and the close showed moderate rallies, with the tone steady at a net decline of 15 to 25 points.

Cotton futures closed steady; December, 18.27c; January, 17.78c; March, 17.68c; May, 17.50c; July, 17.25c.

OCTOBER COTTON CONSUMPTION SMALLEST IN PAST SIX YEARS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Curtailment of cotton manufacturing, which has resulted in the complete shutting down of some mills and the placing of others on part time, was reflected in the October cotton consumpion statistics announced today by the Census Bureau. The amount of raw cotton used for manufacturing purposes last month was the smallest of any month in the past six years. The quantity used in October was [illegible] bales, or 156,000 bales less than used during October last year, and 57,000 bales less than used during September this year.

Mills in the Northern states seem to have [illegible] production to a greater extent than those in the South. Spindles active during October for the entire country numbered 674,[illegible] less than in October last year, while in cotton growing states the number of active spindles in October showed an increase of 164,943 over October a year ago.

Consumption during October last year amounted to 556,041 bales of lint and 26,008 of linters.

Cotton on hand Oct. 31 in consuming establishments was 943,851 bales of lint and 234,-670 of linters, compared with 1,365,139 of lint and 245,570 of linters so held a year ago; and in public storage and at compresses, 4,-167,992 bales of lint and 340,546 of linters, compared with 3,687,141 of lint and 235,361 of linters so held a year ago.

October imports amounted to 13,825 bales, compared with 35,281 bales in October last year.

October exports amounted to 582,014 bales, including 1700 bales of linters, compared with 352,231 bales, including 820 bales of linters, during October last year.

Cotton spindles active during October numbered 33,669,804, compared with 34,344,095 in October last year.

FACTORY TO BE MOVED HERE FROM HAVERHILL, MASS.

Proctor Firm to Occupy Former Plant of American Bakeries' Machinery Co.

The Proctor Sole and Counter Co., which has been located at Haverhill, Mass., for 40 years, will remove its plant to St. Louis about Jan. 1 and will occupy the former plant of the American Bakeries Machinery Co. at 2121 North Ninth street. The buildings have been purchased for $60,000.

This is stated by the Chamber of Commerce as one of the results of the national advertising campaign which was initiated with municipal aid and the co-operation of the Advertising Club.

E. A. Proctor, president of the Proctor company, said that his company was coming to St. Louis to be nearer this city's growing shoe industry. "The St. Louis advertising campaign is helping to awaken Eastern industrials to the disadvantage of their position for serving Western customers. I believe others will soon be on their way in this direction," he said.

The Government and Inland Waterways

By FRANK T. HINES

Late Brigadier General, U. S. A., Chief of Inland and Coastwise Waterways Service.

This is the second of a series of five articles by Gen. Frank T. Hines, late chief of the Inland and Coastwise Waterways Service of the War Department, analyzing the relation of the Federal Government to the national inland waterway traffic situation. Three more articles by Gen. Hines will follow in the Post-Dispatch.

THE presence of the Federal Government in an operating role on inland waterways, particularly long after the railroads have been turned back to private ownership, has caused many opponents of Government operation of public utilities to ask if the implied intent of the transportation act in this connection is not being evaded.

While this might seem to be the case, a closer examination of the circumstances under which the Government-operated barge lines came into existence, and have since been maintained, indicates that, on the contrary, the work which the Government is now doing in this direction is actually paving the way for profitable private operations on these waterways, which, when possible, will go far toward compensating for some of the enormous sums spent in the past for waterway improvements.

It will, therefore, be of interest to trace the origin and development of these waterway transportation lines, and to see what benefits may be expected from the losses incurred in their maintenance.

As a result of the preliminary investigations conducted by the Committee on Inland Waterways of the Railroad Administration, described in a previous article, the Director General of Railroads early in the spring of 1918 instructed that plans be prepared under which the maximum use might be made of the Mississippi and Warrior rivers and of the New York Barge Canal, for the relief of war-time freight congestion.

The method by which these waterways might be made most productive was at the moment immaterial. The three routes particularly selected were those which seemed to be most capable of helping untangle the immense traffic jams against which the railroads were futilely struggling. The problem was to materialize these possibilities. Whether physical operations on these routes should be maintained directly by the Government, as were other common carriers at that time, or if better results could be secured by encouraging and assisting private enterprises in supplying the necessary transportation facilities, were questions left to the committee for solution.

AFTER several weeks of intense study of the various elements affecting operations over these routes, the Committee on Inland Waterways recommended the former plan, including the acquisition by the Government of all suitable existing floating equipment and the construction of such additional boats as conditions demanded, it being thought that most immediately efficient results could be secured with the Government operating these fleets so that they would be actually integrated, so far as possible, with nearby railways and highways.

The Director General of Railroads, concurring in these views, directed the commandeering of all available privately owned craft, and set up the necessary organizations in order that operations might commence immediately on these three waterways.

This action resulted in the assembling of a very mixed collection of floating units, many of which were extremely inefficient and in poor operating condition. Nevertheless, these boats made possible the initiation of freight movements by water on a scale much larger than had previously been possible.

It was not the purpose of the Railroad Administration, however, to depend on these chartered boats thus hastily assembled, for the intensive utilization of waterway transportation which traffic congestion then demanded. At the same time these barge lines were inaugurated, the construction of fleets of larger and better barges and towboats was undertaken, with which equipment it was proposed to conduct more economical and efficient freight services.

For the Mississippi River, between St. Louis and New Orleans, this building program called for 40 barges of about 2000 tons capacity each at average navigating depths, and six towboats of some 1000 indicated horse-power each.

With this and other incidental equipment, estimated to cost in all about $6,500,000, it was believed that net earnings in the neighborhood of $1,000,000 per year could be secured, or an income equal to at least 15 per cent on the investment.

For the Warrior River a fleet of 20 wooden barges and three towboats were contracted for, designed especially for bringing coal down from Central Alabama to Mobile. In addition to this fleet, contracts were also let for the construction of four self-propelled barges of dimensions suitable for navigating the upper reaches of the Warrior, but stanch enough to proceed directly through the Gulf of Mexico to Violet, La., with coal for New Orleans.

This equipment was estimated to cost $1,500,000, but it was believed that these boats could easily be made to earn a substantial revenue on the initial investment, besides supplying urgently needed transportation facilities.

THE New York Barge Canal demanded a quite different type of equipment than was being provided for Western rivers. The contracts let by the Railroad Administration for boats for this waterway called for 21 concrete and 51 steel cargo barges, each of about 500 tons capacity on a 9-foot draft, and for 20 barge towboats, each having capacity for 300 tons.

With this latter fleet, costing about $4,000,000, it was estimated that sufficient operating revenue from the movement of eastbound grain alone could be secured to pay, at the outset, about 15 per cent on the initial investment.

As a matter of actual fact, none of these earnings originally estimated as possible have to date been produced by these boats. However, it is doubtful if the knowledge of this fact

Feed for an Egg Harvest NOW!

IT must be done with an egg ration. A perfect egg ration contains material for an equal number of whites and yolks. Grain, the usual winter ration, goes largely to yolks and unnecessary fat, while it is short on white-making material. Grain-fed hens can't lay many eggs because yolks alone can't be laid.

Purina Poultry Chows

furnish material for just as many whites as yolks, and they keep the hen's body in fine condition. The Purina System is guaranteed to get you more eggs from your hens, or your money will be refunded. And, it will do it at a lower feeding cost per dozen eggs. Try it.

"New Hair Will Start Growing Today!"

A Powerful Secret for Hair-Root Developing. Also the New Way of Positively Removing Wrinkles by Refining the Texture of the Skin.

By Madame Marce

WHEN the proper materials are used, it becomes really astonishing what results can be produced in the growth of hair, and in its invigoration. There is nothing so satisfying as to be able actually to see a difference in the length of your hair, and a very pronounced difference in its appearance inside of a very few weeks. There are many cases where hair has stopped falling in only a few days' time by the use of the simple formula given here. This invigorates the hair cells and has a very beneficial effect on the scalp tissue. The result is a vigorous hair growth. Get a one-ounce package of beta-quinol at the drug store, and mix it with a half pint of water and a half pint of bay rum. If you prefer you can use a full pint of witchhazel instead of the water and bay rum. Try this, it will not fail.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS

EXPECTANCY—It is by no means necessary to wait many months for the definite improvement of the complexion. You can beautify the surface wonderfully by the use of the following simple formula. By making it yourself you get a beautifier far richer than you get ready-made in the stores. The results, too, will be more satisfying. Mix with two tablespoonfuls of glycerine in a pint of water the contents of a one-ounce package of sintone, which can be procured at any drug store. This will give the skin a spotless tint in a short time, and you will be proud of your remarkable complexion.

MRS. C. G. N.—You will nearly always find that soap makes the hair brittle and the scalp dry. What every woman should use is an article such as eggol, which dissolves all oily secretions on hair and scalp and leaves the hair in splendid, vigorous condition. It is wonderful for dandruff. It cleans out the pores and lets your hair "breathe" and grow vigorously. A teaspoonful of eggol in a half cup of water cannot be equaled as a head-wash. Enough for twelve shampoos or more can be obtained from a twenty-five cent package of eggol.

EMBARRASSED — You should never use anything which will irritate the skin while removing superfluous hair. Removing superfluous hairs now becomes a pleasure instead of a real dread if you will just moisten the hairs with a little sulfo solution which can be obtained from your druggist. It leaves the skin as smooth, white and soft as before. There is no reddening or irritating, and it never fails to remove the most obstinate hairs with perfect ease. It is as pleasant to use as a lotion.

• • •

DESPERATE — You will make yourself look years younger if you will follow this suggestion. This formula makes the skin texture finer, it makes it firm and more plump in this way, and as a result, in a few days you see a very marked difference in your appearance. Wrinkles will seem to vanish. You will realize quickly that you have found a remarkably effective wrinkle secret, and tell your friends. Get from your druggist a two-ounce package of eptol and mix with a tablespoonful of glycerine in a half pint of water. Use this cream liberally and often.

BLACKHEADS—Get from your druggist a package of neroxin, and sprinkle a little of it on a wet cloth and rub this on the blackheads. You will find they will disappear in a few moments almost magically.

• • •

MRS. G. F. D.—The best and finest face powder it is possible to get is called "Fresca Beauty Powder" which any druggist can supply you in white, flesh or brunette. It far surpasses many imported products.

THE GOVERNMENT AND INLAND WATERWAYS, BY GEN. HINES

would have deterred the Railroad Administration from entering upon this boat-building program. In the summer of 1918 peace seemed distant and victory demanded facilities for practically unlimited transportation, a demand which had to be met, regardless of cost.

While contracts were being let and work started on the construction of these several fleets, considerable progress was being made toward the establishment of services for the transportation of freight with such boats which the Government had been able to charter.

The first to get under way was the Buffalo to New York service over the New York State Canal and the Hudson River. The first boats for this route were chartered on May 10, 1918, and started westward for cargoes of grain.

While the Government did not take over the operation of this canal proper, as it did the Delaware & Raritan Canal, it eventually requisitioned about 250 canal boats of the old Erie Canal type, familiarly known as "Sally Janes," which was about all that remained of nearly 6000 such boats which at one time prospered on the Erie Canal.

Service on the lower Mississippi was not started until four months later, in September, 1918. The first sailing was on Sept. 28, when a towboat and three barges started down the river, the first scheduled freight-carrying trip through to New Orleans in many long years. The sailing was therefore appropriately cheered off by an enthusiastic gathering of far-sighted folks who saw what they believed to be the beginning of the renaissance of Mississippi River traffic.

These initial trips were to provide north and southbound transport for freight between St. Louis, Memphis and New Orleans, the only river points which at the time offered the necesary shore facilities for the delivery and receipt of freight.

The chartered equipment with which these early operations were conducted consisted of six towboats and 25 relatively small barges with a combined capacity for carrying about 15,000 tons.

ON the Warrior River, operations under the Railroad Administration did not commence until early in 1919, much later than had been originally anticipated.

The fleet chartered for this line consisted of wooden barges and towboats for handling coal and ore from Central Alabama to Mobile, as well as five self-propelled barges, each capable of moving 750 tons of coal through to New Orleans.

On none of these lines were the results obtained at the start as satisfactory as had been hoped for. Still, a tangible beginning in waterway transportation on a large scale had been made, while the tonnage actually transported on these inland routes resulted in materially relieving the railroads for the movement of freight in other directions.

The maintenance of these lines by the Government has been a hard, uphill fight. In no instance have they, until the present summer, shown actual operating profits in any one month. Construction of the new equipment, particularly power units, has been delayed far beyond the original delivery dates, which has in turn prevented the movement of traffic with the regularity and dispatch which had been hoped for. In the meantime, until these power boats could be secured and placed in service, it has been necessary to conduct operations with types of equipment necessitating exorbitant operating costs which have turned possible profits to actual losses.

On the service between New Orleans and St. Louis these average monthly deficits up to October, 1920, have been some $50,000. On the Warrior line these losses have been slightly less, yet averaging over $30,000 each month. On the New York Barge Canal, however, with the delivery of the new types of power units received during the present navigating season, actual profits have for the first time been earned. For the whole year, however, taking into consideration the five months during which these boats must be tied up, the total earnings will be little more than the expenses

So much of these losses as the Government sustained in handling freight over inland waterways prior to the termination of the Federal control of railroads, may be properly charged off as a wartime expenditure, along with the heavy deficits met in the Government operation of rail lines. But how shall the continued losses since that date be accounted for? Certainly in no other way than by the benefits which may be derived by commercial interests of the country from the establishment of an efficient, co-ordinated network of transportation lines on inland waterways capable of transporting coarser commodities at cheaper rates than can existing rail facilities.

Whether this can be done or not is really striking back to the original question which has caused so much discussion for years past—Is transportation on inland waterways economically feasible?

OF course, aside from the purely operating point of view, our navigable inland water routes must always remain to a certain extent necessary for the public defense, to be called into service in time of emergency as they were during the late war. Yet it is not too much to say that their use during peace times depends entirely on whether inland water transportation can be established upon permanently profitable basis. Many authorities believe that this is possible, and point to the extent to which transportation by water is used by crowded countries in Europe as proof of the fact that the continued growth of this country will shortly, if it does not now, demand that waterways be actively used in the fullest co-operation with the railways.

Before this end may be accomplished, however, there remains to be worked out many problems which it seems can only be solved by the Federal Government. Congress therefore directed that these barge lines be retained and operated by the Government for this purpose.

In order to understand what progress has thus far been made toward reviving transportation by water, it is only necessary to picture the situation before the Government embarked on these waterway operating projects, and to contrast that with conditions as they exist today, more than two years later.

While each of these three routes was, at the outset, deserted, so far as freight boats were concerned, they are today serving as avenues for transporting thousands of tons of merchandise every month at an average of 20 per cent below rail rates for similar hauls.

As has already been shown, however, the actual freight which is being transported by these lines is by no means the most important end which they are accomplishing. The service now being offered is in many respects unsatisfactory, and must continue so until it is possible to replace the present equipment with boats of newer and more effective designs.

The most important things which these lines are doing are to awaken widespread public interest in the possibilities of waterway transportation; to educate the shipper in the advantages of routing shipments by water; to demonstrate the classes of merchandise best suited for water haulage and the types of boats best adapted for this purpose; to indicate the necessity for waterway terminals, and to pave the way for a mu-

Y. W. C. A. TO HOLD WORLD FELLOWSHIP WEEK OF PRAYER

Association Branches in All Countries to Join Movement—Special Services Every Day

Women of the city are invited to join the Young Women's Christian Association this week in the world fellowship week of prayer which will open this afternoon at the 4:45 vesper service, when Mrs. Lottie Hess Smith of Kobe, Japan, formerly one of the St. Louis secretaries, will speak.

The week has been appointed for prayer by Mrs. Constance M. Waldegrave, president of the World's Y. W. C. A., and association branches in every country will join in the movement. PROVIDENT ASSOCIATION TO OBSERVE 60TH YEAR TUESDAY

Dr. A. J. Todd of Chicago Will Speak at Meeting at Second Baptist Church.

The sixtieth anniversary of the St. Louis Provident Association will be observed at the Second Baptist Church, King's highway and Washington boulevard, at 8 o'clock Tuesday night. Dr. A. J. Todd of Chicago will speak. He has done volunteer work in the Associated Charities of San Francisco and was for 10 years director of boys' work in social settlements in San Francisco, and for three years was chief probation officer of the Juvenile Court of San Francisco. He is the author of a book entitled "Probation—What It is and Why." He is one of the founders of the National Probation Association.

His address here will be on the "Spirit of Social Work."

The other speaker will be Francis H. McLean, field secretary of the American Association for Organizing Family Social Work. He will speak on recent developments in that field. He made a survey of the charities in St. Louis in 1911 under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce and the Social Service Conference, as a result of which the Charities Committee of the Chamber of Commerce and the Central Council of Social Agencies were organized.

The meeting will be open to the public.

BEETHOVEN SONATA WILL BE PLAYED FIRST IN ST. LOUIS

Unpublished Number to Be Given by Mme. Samaroff at Piano Recital Wednesday.

An unpublished sonata of Beethoven, to be played for the first time in St. Louis, is promised for Mme. Olga Samaroff's piano recital Wednesday at Hotel Statler. The concert will be for the benefit of the scholarship fund of the Twentieth Century Art Club.

In addition, Mme. Samaroff will play the "Moonlight" and "Appassionata", sonatas of the same composer. She is a former St. Louisan, and the wife of Leopold Stokowski, conductor of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra.

GIRLS, 3 TO 6, WILL BE IN PLAY

"Snowdrop and the Seven Dwarfs" at Artists' Guild.

Seven little girls, from 3 to 6 years of age, are to be the dwarfs in "Snowdrop and the Seven Dwarfs," which will be given by the Junior Players at the Artists' Guild Theater, Saturday matinees, Dec. 11 and 18, under the direction of Miss Alice Martin. The old fairy tale has been adapted by Mrs. Belle Waddell. All the characters will be depicted by the children, some of whom are now in their third season of plays.

Costumes and stage settings have been designed by Miss Marguerite Breen and Laurence Ewald of the Artists' Guild. Anita Paul will take the part of "Snowdrop," and "Bill" Ewald will be the Prince.

THE GOVERNMENT AND INLAND WATERWAYS, BY GEN. HINES

tually profitable basis of joint interchange between rail and water carriers.

REVIEWING briefly the progress made in the latter important direction, it is at once evident that a waterway can be of very limited usefulness as a cheap carrier of traffic if its service is restricted to those cities immediately along its bank. Yet once it is possible to carry a consignment of goods for part of its journey by water and to complete the movement by rail, the scope of the waterway as a cheaper mode of transport is immediately broadened.

Two things are particularly necessary before this is possible; terminal plants for transferring freight between car and barge, and a basis of interchange tariffs between land and water carriers so that shipments may be routed by the shipper for movement part way by water, part way by rail, on a single bill of lading—in the same manner as a traveler can buy a ticket over a railroad but calling for passage between Cleveland and Buffalo by water.

Congress has already appropriated $2,000,000 to be spent within the next year in building necessary terminals particularly along the Mississippi and Warrior rivers for the handling of waterway freight. These projects, once well under way, must stimulate similar construction by private capital, and will go far toward reducing the cost of transferring freight between car and barge.

During the past two years the Government, as a barge line operator, has entered into rate agreements with many railroads by which shippers and consignees at interior points may receive the benefit of cheap freight rates due to part-water haulage, something which had previously been almost impossible.

These and similar details essential to the establishment of waterway transportation on a sound and economical basis, are being worked out in the conduct of these services. Once these individual lines have reached a stage where they are actually producing profits, which seems inevitable despite the recognized handicaps which the Government must face in an essentially private undertaking of this nature, then the physical operation of these lines may well be given over to private ownership on much the same basis as the Shipping Board is disposing of its war emergency fleets. Until that time, however, the money spent by the Government in pioneering the way toward profitable large-scale waterway transportation may be considered as an investment which will in the near future bring spendid returns.

EDITORIAL

"'Keep On and the Light Will Dawn' are but seven simple, short words, yet they have helped me all my life," said the cheery man to the young fellow who was just beginning to try to find the way.

Frame these words and keep them ever before you, over your desk or at your bedside where you can read them when you rise each morning.

"Keep on—— and the light will dawn."

With this you can climb the most inaccessible mountains in life or the steepest hills of discouragement.

The history of this business may be fully spoken in these seven simple but significant words.

FAMOUS OLD RECIPE FOR COUGH SYRUP

Easily and cheaply made at home, but it beats them all for quick results.

Thousands of housewives have found that they can save two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, by using this well-known old recipe for making cough syrup. It is simple and cheap but it has no equal for prompt results. It takes right hold of a cough and gives immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, pour it into a pint bottle, and add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, keeps perfectly, and lasts a family a long time.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, hoarseness or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract known the world over for its healing effect on membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

GIRL DENIES YOUTH WHO DROVE INTO DITCH WAS ANGRY AT HER

Says Accident Which Resulted in His Death Was Due to Steering Gear, Not Reckless Driving.

Miss Carrie Hirstein, who was with Edwin Seewald of Summerfield, Ill., when he drove into a ditch three miles north of Mascoutah Saturday night, Nov. 6, receiving injuries which caused his death, called at the Post-Dispatch office yesterday and denied that Seewald was angry at her for dancing with other youths at Mascoutah and drove recklessly and refused to talk to her.

She said that they went to Mascoutah to attend a dance, but changed their minds and drove about the town. He did not drive recklessly on the way home, she said, and did converse with her. She attributed the accident to the steering gear becoming jammed, as she said Seewald tried in vain to make the sharp turn in the road where the machine went into the ditch.

The statements in the Post-Dispatch, which Miss Hirstein denies, were obtained from neighbors to whom she talked immediately after the accident.

What's in the pay envelope besides money?

There is everything in it that money will buy—a home; home comforts; funds for recreation; clothing; food; education for the children; savings for the times of sickness; an estate against want in old age.

Whether you get much or little of these good things of life, depends upon the amount and the kind of work you do today.

And that is governed by the "tools" you use. Good work and a lot of it can't be done with poor equipment.

Imperial Inner-Locked Ibeco Belts have fattened the pay envelopes of countless workmen—down in the mines; in mills; shops; factories; everywhere that belts are used for transmission of power.

They enlarge incomes by increasing out-put. They enable you to do more, in less time, and do it better.

They speed up machines. They turn out two pieces of work in the time it takes an ordinary belt-driven machine to do one. And you get paid for it.

Their rugged, dependable strength does away with breakage and delays due to belting repairs. There is no lost time. You don't have to wait for a belt to be fixed before you can get back to work.

Imperial Inner-Locked Ibeco Belts do not stretch and sag nor slip as do ordinary belts. There is no lost motion. There is no leakage of power. You are not held back by slow, sluggish mechanical action.

Every pound of pull back of an Imperial Inner-Locked Ibeco Belt is carried straight to the work you are doing. Every move you make counts.

Imperial Ibeco quality, the highest mark of excellence ever attained in belt building, insures uninterrupted performance—a bigger day's work and a better day's pay.

The value of Imperial Inner-Locked Ibeco Belts to you and to those you work for can be accurately determined by their proved value to others whose demands are the same as yours.

Good Judgment After Eating

Giving the Stomach the Alkaline Effect by a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet Is Worth Remembering.

You cannot, as a rule, say in advance that this, that or the other food will cause indigestion. Experience has taught most people that even mince pie fits snugly at times while at others a glass of milk raises hobs with the stomach.

One good rule to follow is the preventative measure of taking one or two Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after meals. You thus avoid gassiness, sour stomach, heartburn and such distresses due to indigestion or dyspepsia. These tablets also help to digest the food by giving the stomach the alkaline effect to offset acidity; they relieve the distress when the mince pie or milk should be more than a match for your digestive powers. Get a 60-cent box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at any drug store and note how nicely they seem to calm the stomach when it feels all upset.

"They WORK while you sleep"

Cascarets

Take one or two Cascarets occasionally to keep your liver and bowels active. When bilious, constipated, headachy, unstrung or for a cold, upset stomach, or bad breath, nothing acts so nicely as Cascarets. Children love them too. 10, 25, 50 cents.

DANDRUFF SOON RUINS THE HAIR

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

TEXAN TELLS OF TRIP TO RUSSIA TO GET MOTHER

Returns With Parent and Sisters; Found Them in Home No Bigger Than His Newsstand.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DALLAS, Tex.—Harry Harris, a Russian, 22 years old, who has been in business in Dallas for several years, braved the trials of a trip back to his native land in search of his near relatives, and has just returned here with his mother and three sisters. It was a remarkable journey, and Harris saw some of the misery which exists in Russia. Last January Harris received a letter from his mother saying his father had died from lack of food, and that she and her children were destitute.

After his arrival in France he made his way to Minsk, in so-called White Russia, where his mother and sisters were when the last letter he had received was written. He had to make his way into Russia in a roundabout way, going from France to Switzerland, thence to Austria, to Warsaw, in Poland, and then to Minsk.

At Minsk he found that his mother and sisters had left their old home after the death of his father, and had gone to Lithuania, to the home of his mother's parents.

He had hardly gained this information when the Bolsheviks, advancing on Poland, captured Minsk and advanced westward, leaving him behind their battle lines. During his stay in Minsk Harris got a real taste of Bolshevik rule.

"The first law they made was for everyone to turn in their gold and silver or be shot," he said. "Then a search was made, and thousands were killed when hidden gold was found in their houses. After 4 o'clock in the afternoon no citizen was allowed in the street. Only Bolshevik soldiers could be outside."

Educated as Bolsheviks.

Harris said that the Bolshevik regime took children 5 to 6 years old away from their parents and placed them in schools where they are being educated as Bolshevikis.

"The Bolsheviks proceeded to divide property," Harris said. "Each person was entitled to so much living space. If a family consisted of two members they got so many rooms. If you had a big house they moved in other people with you. If you had a small family you kept a few rooms and the rest of your house was taken over by other people. You didn't own anything yourself any more.

"Even if the Bolsheviki are overthrown, how can you tell who owns anything?" Harirs said. "Everything is in a mess."

To make the outside world believe that Bolshevism is the condition which the people have been seeking, an intense compaign of propaganda was started after the Bolsheviki occupation, Harris said.

"The Bolshevikis sacrificed everything for their soldiers," he continued. "The women and children are the sufferers. The people themselves don't want conditions to be as they are, but they do not dare disobey the orders of the military authorities.

Cattle Cars for Coaches.

"I got out of Minsk as soon as I could," he said. "I was sent further east into Russia toward Moscow, riding a Bolsheviki train, with cattle cars for coaches. And that was a trip. No coal. The engine burned wood for fuel. Every few hours the passengers would pile off and chop wood for the engine. And it usually would take a couple of hours to warm up the engine and start again. Then when the wood was burned up we would have to get off again and chop more wood. If you refused to chop wood you didn't ride."

Harris stopped at a town called Sarratov, not far from Moscow. The Bolshevikis were in control here, but he found conditions more settled. There was no money and if there had been any it would have been useless. Food was issued on a card system, Clothing was the scarcest thing in the country.

"With clothing you could buy anything," Harris said. "Even something to eat."

Throughout Bolshevik Russia Harris found the people were "looking to America like we look toward heaven."

"American goods can be sold for 10 times the price of English articles of exactly the same kind," he said. "The people hate England, although the English are preparing to flood the country with their goods. There is a big opportunity for Americans in Russia, for the people want American goods."

All Doctors in Army.

Harris spent four weeks in the town near Moscow. Conditions were bad. There was no sewage system. There were no doctors, because all were in the army. From this town he made his way to Riga, going through Lettland. From Riga he went to a town in Lithuania, where he found his mother and sisters.

"When I found them, they were in a little shack no bigger than my newsstand on Elm street," young Harris said. "It was early in the morning and they were just getting up. They could not believe that I was really there. And when I told them I had come to take them back to America, my mother and sisters thought they were in heaven."

It was several weeks before he could make arrangements through the American consul at Riga to sail with his family for America. During the two months he waited young Harris taught English to a class of young Luthuanian girls who were anxious to come to America. The class was started by an American Red Cross captain, who enlisted Harris' aid.

Be Young in Body, Mind and Looks Despite Your Years

How often you have wished that you could indulge in the strenuous exercise of out door sports with the vigor and enthusiasm of youth! But the end of the week finds you all in—you are tired, listless and lack the energy to go out for a vigorous walk or a round of the links—or any other exercise that requires much physical exertion. Many a man, even in his middle forties, has a vague feeling that he is "getting old"—and right at a time when he should be at his very best physically.

And he is growing old, not in the sense that the years are pressing heavily upon him—but in the sense that his vital forces are wasting away faster than Nature replaces the worn out tissues.

Thousands—yes millions—of people find themselves in this condition early in life. And there is no excuse for it. You can check that tendency to grow old. You can carry your youth with its joys and enthusiasm into your 70's and 80's. But you must give Nature all the help you can. The best assistance you can find—assistance of a sound, constructive character is in the use of

Makes Curls or "Ear Muffs" Stay In Place

You will be glad to learn that you can keep your hair beautifully wavy and curly by using a perfectly harmless liquid known to druggists as "silmerine." You need only apply a little with a clean tooth brush just before doing up the hair, and in three hours or so you will be most agreeably surprised with the effect. And this effect lasts for quite a considerable time, so a small bottle goes a long way and is quite economical to use. Pure silmerine is really beneficial to the hair and there is no greasiness, stickiness nor anything unpleasant about it. It is a good idea to divide the hair into strands and moisten these one at a time, drawing the brush down the full length.

With the aid of liquid silmerine it is easy to shape the prettiest "ear muffs" and easy to keep them as placed all day. Just try it!

"MANDARIN" CALLED PIECE OF STAGE TRASH

"French Leave," a New War Comedy, Also Fails to Enthuse New York Audience.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—"The Mandarin," which occupied the time and some of the attention of a first audience this week at the Princess Theater, at least does not follow the stage's conventional groove, which may or may not be conceding something in its favor. In the relentless pursuit of new themes for the theater, it has remained for Paul Frank, a Viennese author, to dramatize a lunatic asylum. Our own Herman Bernstein has thought well enough of this wild example of the post-bellum dramaturgy of Central Europe to put it into the straitjacket of an English text, and Brandon Tynan, in turn, has been reckless enough to attempt the role of the principal lunatic.

"The Mandarin" is a singularly futile piece of stage trash. It is, however, only one of the results that are naturally to be expected in a season in which indiscriminate play production has itself become a form of lunacy.

Plot of "The Mandarin."

This precious effusion from Vienna follows the familiar stencil of the dream play. A hopelessly crazy inmate of an insane asylum, sitting disconsolately on a bench in the garden of the madhouse, is approached by another inmate of equally addled mentality. The latter has a delusion that he has invented a doll—the mandarin—which will bring him everything he desires.

The purpose of this preamble to the actual play is plain enough. It is a transparent pretext for the series of scenes which follow, and which are principally in the familiar mood of the bedroom play. The lunatic straightway embarks upon the career of a Don Juan. He has impassioned experiences with various female figments of his disordered fancies until he is found screaming in frenzy on the madhouse bench by an asylum attendant.

The pickings in theatrical fields must be sparse this year if Brandon Tynan has been forced to appear in this play after his remarkably fine portrayal of the detective in "The Purple Mask," just a year ago. Besides, he acted the passion-fired lunatic badly. He is not of the mold for Don Juan roles, sane or insane. This one he played after the fashion of the crushed tragedian of stage tradition.

"French Leave" Criticised.

There can be no justifiable objection to a play at this time, or any other time, merely because it deals with or touches upon the World War, provided it is a conspicuously good play.

"French Leave," the work of Reginald Berkeley, a young English playwright, in which Mr. and Mrs. Coburn appeared at the Belmont Theater, cannot be regarded as a conspicuously good play. It contains one act—the first—in which there are sufficient humorous situations to warrant the hope that after a while there will be real fun for every one. But the second and third acts wither away into a dismal attempt at a mixture of farce and comedy until one wonders how and why these two superb performers have been led to attach their names to such a piece.

Mlle. Juliette, the pretty wife of an English Captain, makes her way, through misrepresentation, to the billet of a brigade resting out of the line in which her husband is stationed. Mrs. Coburn is Mlle. Juliette. It is in her attempts and those of her husband to keep her identity a secret and protect her from the attentions of a junior officer, and even the growling old Brigadier General, a part played by Mr. Coburn, that the theme of the story lies.

A scene in which the General makes earnest love to the dashing young "acress" is one of the promising moments.

Some Interesting Moments.

The finding by all hands concerned that the girl has left her bedroom late at night, the General and the junior officer each believing she has wandered out to find him, when, in reality, she is hiding behind a sofa, with her husband, listening to it all, is splendidly done. There are several other farce-tinged minutes that are entertaining, and times when "French Leave" appears to have the proper stuff to win. Then it weakens.

It comes to a close with the decision by the General and his staff that Mlle. Juliette is a German spy, then the revelation by confession of her real identity and the sending her back to Paris under military escort. The military escort is her husband. It is not a great surprise.

Dallas Welford is not a butler, but is the real humorist of the billet as the Mess Corporal. He has replaced his cough with a trick lip contortion of questioned good taste. Helen Tilden as the French landlady bursts into French exclamations well, and Noel Tearle was the Acting Staff Captain.

The most satisfactory results have been obtained in combating Diabetes by observing certain dietary rules and the judicious use of Warner's Safe Diabetes Remedy, an herbal preparation used with marked success for more than forty years.

Following is a letter from a grateful user:

"This letter is the best proof that I am still alive. Your medicine is a miracle to me. My weight was reduced from 157 to 114 pounds when I left the hospital. I left there Aug. 6th in despair. Hundreds of people that knew me said I would never live to return to my studio. After leaving the hospital I saw your "Ad." in the paper. I began its use and at once commenced to improve, and now everybody is saying to me that I look better than ever before. I tip the scales at 132 pounds and I am back working again to the astonishment of all. I feel splendid and people say I am looking better every day. I must tell you that every word I have written is true, and I can prove it by hundreds that knew of my condition. Jules Friquet, 511 West First Street, Los Angeles, Cal."

HOUSEWIVES JEER GERMAN FOOD MINISTER AT WEDDING

Women Sieze Upon Public Ceremony as Opportunity to Tell Him What They Think of Him.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Oct. 27.—Angry housewives vented their indignation on Herr Hermes, the Food Minister, while he was being married in a church at Steglitz recently, by jeering and keeping up a running fire of uncomplimentary remarks while the marriage ceremony was in progress. Their comments were directed against the Minister's food policy.

The bride was naturally proud of the fact that she was to wed a Cabinet Minister and took care that the time and place of the wedding should be known to everyone. Notices giving that information were published in the newspapers.

A knot of women had gathered at the church doors and took advantage of the opportunity to tell the Minister what they thought of his administration. The Vorwaerts says that Herr Hermes and his bride found the situation so uncomfortable that after the ceremony they left the church by a side door.

Those Smiling Faces—

That healthy look—you envy so

Everywhere you see them. Smiling, happy faces. Cheeks aglow. Nerves steady. Minds alert. You, too, can know real health.

Millions today who once craved health have now found the real health secret. Millions have found a way to keep fit. Once they did not know, and suffered. But now that time is past.

Their method of keeping well is the basis of all health. Medical science attests its soundness. Doctors endorse it. Men and women — young and old — are finding in it real health once more.

Most people today know that constipation is the beginning of most human ills. Till recent years, however, few realized that old-fashioned cathartics, slow-acting and uncertain of results, invited disease by allowing the poisoned waste matter to remain for hours in the intestines. Few realized the vital importance of a quick-acting physic.

Medical Authorities Know

Medical authorities now agree that promptness is the first requirement of a laxative. Time counts — results must be sure and quick.

Foul breath, coated tongue, mental depression or pimply skin mean that poisonous waste matter is doing its destruction — polluting the blood — undermining your health. Kidney diseases of a serious nature commonly result. Colds, headaches, auto-intoxication, rheumatism, pneumonia and other ailments are pitfalls to which constipation frequently leads.

No time must be lost in removing the intestinal waste. A day—even half a day — is too long. Your physician will tell you this. Complete — and prompt — elimination of the waste matter is essential.

What Physicians Recommend

Leading physicians everywhere recommend a harmless mineral water for prompt, complete action. This water is known as Pluto. It is certain — quick — never-failing. Its effectiveness is due to the minerals it contains.

These minerals soften the waste accumulation. The water helps to flush it gently away. Elimination is sure, prompt and complete. The action is pleasant and gentle — entirely free from the griping effects of old-fashioned cathartics.

Try this for real health: Take home from your druggist's a bottle of Pluto Water. Use it first thing in the morning, or before meals. Note the prompt results. Note the pleasant, harmless action. See how completely it ends the constipation and restores normal, healthy activity. Feel fit once more!

Many people avoid constipation by taking Pluto Water at regular intervals. Thousands of physicians are now recommending that Pluto Water be kept always in the home. It is equally effective for children and grown-ups. As a laxative take ¼ tumbler of Pluto; as a cathartic, ½ tumbler; as a purgative, ½ tumbler — add hot or cold water to fill glass. Bottled at French Lick Springs, Indiana.

'Aphrodite,' Pagan Revel of Beauty and Decadence, Opens at Shubert Tonight

Also David Warfield, in Revival of "The Return of Peter Grimm," Appears Tomorrow Night at American.

This promises to be an uncommon week in the theatrical calendar, what with the heralded spectacle-drama, "Aphrodite," unrolling its pageant of ancient Alexandria's beauty, brutality and decadence at the Shubert-Jefferson, beginning tonight, and with David Warfield arriving at the American tomorrow night in a revival of David Belasco's spiritualistic play, "The Return of Peter Grimm," in which the distinguished character actor created the principal role some nine years ago.

"Aphrodite" is the third of four lavish and multitudinous productions which have been given to the American stage by Morris Gest—the others being "The Wanderer," "Chu Chin Chow" and "Mecca." The equipment of "Aphrodite" for the theater is said to have cost upwards of $300,000. It was produced last season at the Century Theater, New York, and ran for 148 performances. It was sent on the road this fall, the first stop being the Auditorium in Chicago, where it sojourned four weeks and attracted to the box office a sum around $250,000. Then it traveled to the Hippodrome in Cleveland, and there one week's receipts reached the record figure of more than $98,000. On one Saturday in Cleveland three performances were given, beginning with a matinee at 10 a. m.

Many men of talent have co-operated in achieving this work. It is based on a classic French novel by Pierre Louys, which, notorious for its realistic resurrection of pagan savagery and licentiousness during the first century before Christ, is forbidden in this country. The novel was dramatized for the Parisian stage by Pierre Frondaie, and also converted into a grand opera by Camille Erlanger, in which Mary Garden has appeared with resonant success.

Ballets by Michel Fokine.

The choreography is by no less a personage than Michel Fokine, generally regarded as the creator of that synthesis of dancing, pantomime, drama, music and sumptuous accoutrement known as the Russian Ballet. The costumes are by Percy Anderson of London, who designed the memorable habiliments of "Chu Chin Chow," and by Leon Bakst, scenic maestro of the Diaghileff Ballet Russe. The settings are by Joseph and Philip Harker of London, who performed a similar office for "Chu Chin Chow." The music is by Henri Fevrier and Anselm Goetzl, with interpolated numbers by Glazounoff and Moussorgsky. The staging was in the hands of E. Lyall Swete, who also produced "Chu Chin Chow" and "Mecca," and who, at His Majesty's Theater in London, put on the first English production of Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird." The production was under the personal supervision of Morris Gest, aided by his father-in-law, David Belasco. The American stage version of the text was prepared by George C. Hazelton.

Judging by the novel, "Aphrodite" should have a powerful but sinister plot. Louys described his work as "a romance of manners in ancient Egypt." The central characters are Demetrios, a Greek sculptor, and Chrysis, a Galilean courtesan. The sculptor has created so divine an image of the goddess Aphrodite that the love of mortal women, in contrast with his ideal, becomes hateful, even that of the girlish Queen of Egypt, Berenike. But the vengeance of woman scorned is preparing for him at the cruel hands of the golden-haired Chrysis.

Encountering her in "The Market Place of Love," where kisses are bartered for gold, the sculptor is seized by a fit of madness. In his infatuation he swears a great oath to give

HYOMEI INHALER

ADVERTISEMENT

OUR BIG OFFER
Catarrh
ENDED OR GET YOUR MONEY BACK

What if a specialist in catarrhal afflictions, a real physician of character and integrity, should offer to relieve you of catarrh, or nothing to pay?

You would jump at the chance. Of course you would. You would be foolish if you didn't.

And now that the makers of Hyomei (pronounced High-o-me), say to you that Hyomei will end catarrh, or that you can have your money back, what are you going to do? Are you going to be prejudiced and narrow minded just because the offer is not made by a physician?

Are you going to continue to suffer with snuffles, crusts in the nose, watery eyes, mucous in the throat, and all the annoying and distressing conditions that accompany catarrh, when Hyomei will satisfy you of money back?

Do you know what Hyomei is? Let us tell you; it is composed chiefly of eucalyptus obtained from the eucalyptus trees of inland Australia where catarrh, asthma, croup and hay fever are practically unknown.

Pour a few drops of Hyomei into the hard rubber inhaler (same as illustration) and you can then breathe into the lungs the germ-killing antiseptics you would breathe in the Australian forests of pine and eucalyptus.

And Hyomei is so pleasant to use; you'll like to use it; when you breathe it in it has such a soothing, healing effect on the inflamed and germ ridden membrane. In five minutes you get such wonderful relief that you know that at last you have help.

A Hyomei outfit consists of one bottle of Hyomei, a hard rubber pocket inhaler and medicine dropper and simple instructions for use.

And besides catarrh remember that Hyomei is guaranteed to relieve asthma, croup, bronchitis, coughs, colds, sore throat and hay fever, or money back. Hyomei is sold by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. and leading druggists everywhere.

APHRODITE, PAGAN REVEL, WILL OPEN AT SHUBERT TONIGHT

Chrysis three presents which she desires, a mirror, a comb and a necklace of pearls. But the sculptor recoils when he finds that the gifts she wants are no ordinary articles.

The mirror is the mirror of Rhodopis and to obtain it he must commit theft; for it is the property of the courtesan Bacchys. She values it beyond all her earthly possessions, as it once belonged to the poetess Sappho. Murder must be the price of the comb, for the high priestess of Venus, to whom it belongs, has twined it deep in her hair for her wedding night. Most monstrous of all, he must commit sacrilege to obtain the necklace, for its seven strands of 70 pearls each must be stolen from the upstretched hands of his own holy statue in the temple. Bewitched by the loveliness and indifference of Chrysis, Demetrios is soon seen murdering the priestess and tearing the pearls from the wrists of the marble Aphrodite.

A Lurid Bacchanale.

It is at the house of Bacchys—in a scene of wild revelry and license for which Fokine designed the play's climax, a Bacchanale ballet—that Chrysis hears of the theft of the mirror. A slave girl, falsely accused, is crucified, but Chrysis looks on unmoved. Intoxicated with her lover's crime, it is now her turn to become crazed with passion.

But, in a vision in the temple, the marble Aphrodite has come to life and pressed a kiss upon the lips of Demetrios. When he awakens, his infatuation of an hour is dead; what is the voluptuous love even of Chrysis compared to that of the goddess of love? He commands that Chrysis make atonement for his sins, and she consents, though it means death. She must appear before the terror-stricken and enraged populace of Alexandria, bearing the stolen mirror in her hand, and wearing the blood-stained comb and the ravished pearls.

Thus occurs the play's denouement, with Chrysis, wearing her plunder, revealing herself in nude loveliness—although she is not seen by the audience—at the summit of the lighthouse. At first the crowd takes her to be Aphrodite herself; but soon she is recognized as the notorious courtesan, Chrysis. The mob storms the tower, intent on tearing her to pieces; but she is saved from the crowd by Demetrios, who now recognizes that Chrysis is Aphrodite herself, in the flesh. But Chrysis has taken poison and dies in her lover's arms.

In the opinion of critics in other cities, the finest single feature of the production was provided by the sumptuous beauty, the elocution and the acting ability of Dorothy Dalton, who had the part of Chrysis. She will not be seen in the St. Louis production. The role will be taken by an understudy, Pauline Armitage. Miss Dalton left the cast after the Cleveland engagement.

"The Return of Peter Grimm" was first performed at the Hollis Street Theater in Boston, on Jan. 2, 1911; it had its first New York production in the following October. Peter Grimm, a prosperous, self-willed, kind old man, with a passion for flowers, has made serious errors in the government of his family, the most deplorable of these being the separation of his ward, Kathrien, from a youth who loves her and whom she loves, and her betrothal to his nephew, Frederik Grimm, a hypocrite and scoundrel.

Peter Grimm is suddenly stricken dead, with heart disease. After a little time his spirit returns to the place which was its earthly home, intent on retrieving his mistakes in life, discomfiting the rascal by whom he was deceived, and making

AMERICAN FLAGS IN MOST ALBANIAN TOWNS

Colors Left by Red Cross Workers Kept in Place by Natives—Condition of Country.

By the Associated Press.

ELBASSAN, Albania, Oct. 20.—One of the cheering sights that greets the American visitor to Albania is the American flag. In all the larger towns the Stars and Stripes may be seen side by side with the colors of Albania. This is the outgrowth of the work of the American Red Cross, which established hospitals and orphanages in the principal towns. Most of the American relief workers have now withdrawn, but the native Albanians have kept the American colors flying as evidence of their appreciation and gratitude to their benefactors.

Italy's action in withdrawing from Albania has given fresh impetus and strength to the Albanian yearning for complete independence and freedom from foreign protectorates or mandates. But the country is scarcely strong enough to stand alone. She needs the aid of England or America to enable her to become a virile, self-supporting, self-governing state.

The country is extremely primitive. There is not a single mile of passenger railroad, not a telegraph wire, not a mile of good highways, not a newspaper or a postoffice. It required eight days for the Associated Press correspondent to travel from Scutari to Koritza, a distance of about 125 miles. The journey had to be made on horseback, which is the only form of conveyance outside of the immemorial ox cart.

Though Albania is divided between Mohammedan and Christian and further divided by the existence of different sects of both these religions, the national consciousness is predominant everywhere except in very few communities in the south, where Greek influence has reached in through the medium of the Orthodox church. Every Albanian is an Albanian first and inherits a tradition which has, through many generations, prohibited religious persecutions of any sort.

The Albanian is a good business man, a good soldier. He is extremely independent. His great fault grows out of the fact that the only means of punishing murder and certain other heinous crimes is by personal vengeance.

'LADY HARCOURT IS CHOSEN AS A JUSTICE OF THE PEACE'

She Is First American-Born Peeress to Hold That Position in England.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—One of the most recent additions to the list of women Justices of the Peace in England is Viscountess Harcourt, who has just taken the oath at the County Hall, Oxford. Before her marriage to "Lulu" Harcourt, son of Sir William Harcourt, the present Viscountess was Miss Burns, daughter of William Burns of New York, at one time the representative of the house of Morgan in London.

Lady Harcourt enjoys the distinction of being the first American-born peeress to be made a Justice of the Peace in England.

Like Viscountess Astor, also an American-born peeress and now the only woman member of Parliament, she is very popular here. During the war Lady Harcourt was prominent in relief work and one of the leading spirits in founding the American Women's Hospital at Paignton, which had an American Red Cross medical and nursing staff.

SAFETY COUNCIL IN CAMPAIGN

Civic Organizations to Take Part in 50,000 Membership Drive.

The educational campaign under the direction of the Speakers' Bureau is presenting the program for the 50,000 membership campaign of the St. Louis Safety Council before various civic, commercial and industrial organizations.

The North St. Louis Business Men's Association indorsed the Safety Council Friday night and appointed a Safety Committee to direct the campaign in the association. The resolution as introduced and adopted is as follows:

Harry S. Gleick addressed the Mt. Auburn Improvement Association, 5855 Easton avenue, Friday night, and received the indorsement of the association for the campaign. This organization also passed a resolution and appointed committees to aid in the drive.

Church Club Dinner Tuesday.

The Church Club of St. Louis will give a dinner at the American Annex Tuesday evening at 6:30, when Coadjutor Bishop Johnson will speak on his recent visit to London to attend the Lambeth Conference of Bishops of the Episcopal Church of England, America and other countries. T. K. Knight is president of the club. Reservations for the dinner may be made with the secretary, C. L. de Renthel, 419 Chestnut street. It is open to both men and women.

K. OF C. CHORAL CLUB CONCERT

To Give "The Ballad of the Golden Sun" Nov. 24.

"The Ballad of the Golden Sun," poem by Frederick H. Martens and music by William Lester, is announced as the chief offering of a concert to be given at the Odeon, on the evening of Nov. 24, by the Knights of Columbus Choral Club.

The work is founded on an incident of the conquest of Peru by Pizzaro, in which one of the Spanish cavaliers gambled away in a single night an image of the sun, made of gold, in the temple of Cuzco. Monica Graham Stults of Chicago, a soprano, has been engaged as soloist. William Theodore Diebels is director.

Whatever You Do Don't Neglect Your Eyes, Says Dr. Lewis, Who Tells How to Strengthen Eyesight 50% in One Week's Time in Many Instances.

A Free Prescription You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye strain or other eye weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope for you. He says neglect causes more eye troubles and poor sight than any other one thing. Many whose eyes were failing say they had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says, after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully! Now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and allow to dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time.

NOTE: Another prominent Physician, to whom the above article was submitted said: "Bon-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them." The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time, in many instances, or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist, and is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family. It is sold in this city by all leading druggists, including the Enderle, Johnson Bros., Pauley, Judge & Dolph and Wolff-Wilson stores.

$1.00 Delivers Your Hoosier

One dollar isn't much, is it? But it's enough—enough to put a Hoosier into your kitchen. Come in tomorrow. Select the model you want. Pay down your dollar. The Cabinet will be delivered at once. Then while using it, you can finish paying for it—just a little each month. You'll hardly miss the payments.

Nearly two million American women are using the Hoosier Kitchen Cabinet today. It is taking all the tiresomeness and drudgery out of their kitchen work. It saves them hundreds of steps a day, hours of time every week.

In many new homes that are being built the kitchens are planned with a special place for the Hoosier. But there isn't a kitchen in existence that hasn't space for a Hoosier and that won't be a better and a pleasanter place to work in if it has a Hoosier. Put a Hoosier in your kitchen. No doubt you've been wanting one for a long time, but haven't just got around to buying it. Make up your mind now that you're going to quit wanting and begin having.

Much thought and care, expended in the design and construction of the Hoosier, have made it the perfect kitchen cabinet. It has all the conveniences that any other cabinet has and many that others lack.

It's easy to clean and easy to keep clean. You can get at any part of it without trouble. It helps to keep your kitchen neat and uncluttered—the shiningly spotless and efficient place that you want it to be.

Hoosier prices are lower now. They went up last, went up least and came down first. On October 1, 1920, the price of every Hoosier Cabinet was reduced $7.50.

Pluto Jewel Heater

A Detroit Jewel Heater, built on the hot blast principle, as shown in the illustration. The hot blast tube feeds warm air over the gas that forms just over the coal, causing this gas to burn and doing away with most of the smoke and soot. NEWFOUNDLAND SHORT OF POSTAGE STAMPS

Left Over Series of Jubilee Issues of 1897 Used at Reduced Values.

ST. JOHNS, Newfoundland.—Stamp collectors have a rare opportunity to enrich their albums. Since early in September the postoffice here has been suffering from a dearth of stamps, particularly those of low value, 1, 2 and 3 cents, which are in most general demand. Local letters had to be handed in at the general postoffice, where they were postmarked "postage paid." All adhesive stamps being reserved for foreign correspondence. But in a few days the whole supply reserved for this purpose was exhausted.

So it became necessary to provide provisional stamps of the face value of 3 cents to defray the oversea postage. On Sept. 10, therefore, the remaining stock of the obsolete 15-cent stamp of the jubilee series of the colony, originally issued in 1897, in a pictorial design representing seals on an ice-floe, was pressed into the service and reissued, after having been reduced to the uniform value of "3 cents" by means of a surcharge in two lines of black Roman capitals.

Although these emergency stamps were not sold to the public, but were fixed by postal officials to letters handed in over the counter, the first printing was used up by the outport postoffice in about 24 hours. A second provisional 3-cent stamp had therefore to be improvised, and for this purpose the 35-cent value of the same out-of-date series was utilized, surcharged in like manner and issued to the public on Sept. 14.

A new issue of postage stamps is in preparation for Newfoundland to replace the present caribou head type. It commemorates the exploits of the Royal Newfoundland Regiment in the great war. Delivery of the new issue will be expedited, in view of the present stamp famine. Meanwhile further printings of the current 1, 2 and 3 cent stamps have been ordered from England by cable.

GIRLS TO PAY ELECTION BETS

One to Wear Straw Hat to Church—Another to Ride in Wheelbarrow.

With the coming of equal suffrage, girl students at Lindenwood College took the election so seriously that they made a number of wagers.

Miss Cathleen Richeau will wear a straw hat to church on Sunday, Nov. 21, whether it snows or whatever happens. Miss Gladys McKinley of Kansas City will be wheeled around the campus in a wheelbarrow by Miss Margaret Owen. Miss Laura Cross is obliged to place a wreath on a lonely grave, slipping out to do this in recitation time. A number of the students are obligated for a season to uncover their ears, take out all the artificial aids to coiffures, and dress the hair stiffly in a Psyche knot.

FURNACES differ as much as people, and we welcome a comparison of the Cahill with other pipeless furnaces. The "insides" of a furnace are what count, and that is where the Cahill excels. The castings are unusually heavy, unusually thick and unusually well fitted and finished. This means that heat is retained longer in a Cahill Furnace, that the radiation of heat is greater, less fuel is used, less attention is required, and that cracking and breaking of the vital parts is eliminated. The Cahill castings guarantee greater durability, economy and convenience.

MAYR'S PINE NEEDLE BALM

A Comfort and a Corrective

FLU and other infectious germs develop in a nose affected with Catarrh. These germs remain in the nasal passages. When the mucous caused by Catarrh becomes excessive, mouth breathing results. Prolonged Catarrhal affection often causes foul breath. Mayr's Pine Needle Balm opens the passages and promotes a clean, wholesome condition. MAPLEWOOD WOMEN ON "COAST-TO-COAST" TRIP NOW IN DALLAS

Defray Expenses by Working as Stenographers, Clerks or Milliners in Cities Visited.

Friends in Maplewood of Mrs. Carrie Gant and Misses Hortense Gant and Lisetta and Lily Haug of 7402 Zephyr place, who left Maplewood early in the summer to work their way "from coast to coast," have received word that the four are now in Dallas, Tex.

Chicago was the first city visited by them after leaving St. Louis, and from there they traveled through Indiana and Wisconsin, visiting all the principal cities. Later they visited Omaha, Neb.; Council Bluffs, Ia.; Kansas City and Topeka, Kan. Several weeks also were spent in Tulsa, Ok., where they visited the oil fields. In letters to their friends they say they will remain in Dallas for several weeks, going from there to El Paso.

Their costumes cause much interest wherever they go, according to their letters. While traveling they wear khaki suits, made one-piece middy fashion, with their insignia, a four-leaf clover in red, on their sleeves, and soft hats with red bands with the words "Coast to Coast" on them.

They defray expenses by filling positions as stenographers, clerks or milliners in the cities they visit.

FEAR TWO WHITES WERE EATEN

By the Associated Press.

BRISBANE, Australia, Oct. 18.—It is reported from New Guinea that two white men and 10 native carriers are missing and are believed to have been killed and eaten by the natives on the Fly River.

The missing men were hunting birds of paradise in Dutch New Guinea. A searching party reported that on visiting a native village on the Fly River the villagers fled. Some booklets stained with blood, a photograph, some clothes and other evidences of the white men were found.

PRAISES LENINE; PUPILS STRIKE

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Switzerland, Nov. 13.—The school children of the little Savoy town of Bourg went on a strike recently because the head mistress of the municipal school, who is said to have become a Bolshevist, delivered a lecture praising Nikolai Lenine, the Russian Premier.

The children were supported in the strike by their parents, who demanded the dismissal of the head mistress.

Are you interested to know just how realistic the New Edison is? The Realism Test is a test you can make yourself. Takes 5 minutes. Stop in at our store. Try it. Mark the extraordinary result.

The NEW EDISON

"The Phonograph with a Soul"

The realism of a phonograph is the measure of its value.

Edison proves the absolute realism of his new phonograph.

His first proof is the Tone-Test. The singer stands beside the New Edison. He sings. Suddenly he ceases to sing. The New Edison continues the song alone. If there were any difference between the two, the human ear could detect it instantly. What is the result?

Four thousand of these Tone-Tests have been given. Three million people have heard them. No one has ever found any difference.

The second proof is the Realism Test.

You can't deny what you can hear for yourself.

Come and make the Realism Test.

Please advise full particulars regarding your special Edison proposition. Also mail Free Booklet entitled Favorite Songs.

Our Rapid Growth Constantly Calls for New Capital, of Which We Get All That We Can Here at Home, By the Sale of Union Electric Preferred Stock

Union Electric, supplying St. Louis and the greater St. Louis District with electric light, heat and power, is one of the fastest growing utility companies in the United States. It has to be, in order to keep pace with the growth of the St. Louis district.

Union Electric has made good on its job. The St. Louis district, growing rapidly during the past four or five years, is one of the few big industrial districts in the United States which have NOT suffered from an electric power shortage during the past year.

Rapid expansion of Union Electric's power producing and distributing systems calls for constant investment of new capital. During the past three years Union Electric has raised nearly $3,000,000 of this new capital here at home, by selling 7% preferred stock to its customers and other friends in the St. Louis district. We expect to raise additional millions in the same way, for the same purpose, during the years just ahead.

We recommend this preferred stock for purchase by our friends here at home, as "Missouri's safest 7% dividend-payer," for these reasons:

First: A thorough State appraisal proves the business is legitimately capitalized.

Second: State regulation prohibits issuance of a dollar of securities except to capitalize additions to property which have been or are to be made subject to State approval.

Third: The State, recognizing the right of utility investors to a yearly fair return on honest capitalization under sound management of the business, obligates itself to protect that fair return at the same time that it protects utility customers against excessive rates. State regulation, administered in this spirit, thus undertakes to maintain a condition under which sufficient new capital will be attracted into the business to enable it at all times to provide the public with ample good service at its fair cost.

Fourth: Union Electric's long record of low rates, good service and regular payment of moderate dividends has won for the company the confidence of its public and its investors—an asset of great value which the Company means to retain by continuing to deserve it.

If a regular and dependable 7% income from your savings or idle capital appeals to you, you can get it by buying shares of this stock at room 201 Union Electric Bldg., 12th and Locust streets, St. Louis, or at Union Electric's offices in Franklin, Jefferson, Union, St. Louis and St. Charles counties.

Price, $100 a share for cash; $102 on a ten-monthly-payment plan.

Full details of the Company's business will be mailed, or brought to you, on receipt of your name and address:

CRUSADE ON OPIUM DENS IN FRANCE IS PLANNED

Smoking of Drug Has Grown to Large Proportions Since War, Officials Say.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

PARIS, Nov. 13.—The Minister of Justice, Gustave L'Hopiteau, is about to launch a country-wide crusade against opium dens, it is announced. When the Chamber of Deputies resumes its session he will lay before it a bill increasing the penalties for selling and using the Oriental drug. Since the war the opium traffic has reached proportions unknown to the authorities prior to 1914.

Before the war the principal countries of the opium trade were the great Mediterranean and Atlantic ports, such as Toulon, Marseilles, Brest, Havre, Lorient and Cherbourg. But the police officials now find with growing stupefaction, that Paris has become infected with opium haunts. This fact is partly accounted for, say observers of the Paris underworld, by the vast increase in the number of French navy officers and marines who have returned to France from far Eastern naval stations, where they had fallen victims to the opium habit.

Scores of titled people, among whom are distinguished Indian and other Oriental Princes, frequent the opium salons situated in fashionable districts near the Champs de Mars and the Place de l'Etoile, where only those are admitted who can pay the price and are known by references to be bonafide addicts to the drug. High colonial officials, home on leave, belong to this category of smokers, although for months several of the Indian Princes, who are now numerous in Paris, have been seen entering notorious dives in the Montmartre district, clad in flowing gowns of many colors and turbans and, in some cases, accompanied by dancing girls from nearby cafes and fashionable restaurants.

Minister of Justice L'Hopiteau plans to increase the number of special detectives for searching out opium dives, whether they be of the luxurious class of the Avenue du Bosquet and the Avenue du General Detrie, around the Champs de Mars, or the lowly huts in Montmartre.

As the search continues the authorities are prepared to see the devices of the opium den owners become more subtle. One of the methods most commonly practiced by opium traffickers to obtain new customers is for a woman or man agent to start a casual conversation with a fellow passenger in an underground train and then disappear after handing the prospective customer a card with a name and address and the following inscription: "Pipes and utensils for smokers."

In many weekly papers advertisements may be seen offering "pipes and narghile," but it appears the police are only now just comprehending the meaning of the word narghile. Several arrests have been made in Montmartre in the last few weeks of men and women possessing large quantities of opium. It is these arrests that have forced the authorities into a determined anti-opium crusade.

GIRL STUDENTS DRINK AND TAKE DRUGS TO STUDY EFFECTS

British Investigators Resort to "Jags" at First Hand in Making Tests.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—If anybody in America has forgotten, or is no longer able to find out, what are the effects of too much alcohol he might ask Miss May Smith. She knows.

Miss Smith and her colleague, William McDougall, have been carrying out a series of personal experiments at the Psychological Laboratory, Oxford, not only with alcohol but with chloroform, opium, strychnine and tea. Their reports have been sent to the Medical Research Council.

As Miss Smith says she had never, knowingly, taken alcohol before she began these investigations, she is now somewhat of an authority on the first-time jag. She also knows a lot about the "hop" feeling. Recording her impressions of a session with opium, she says:

"My limbs felt as if recovering from cramp. I felt 'nervous,' as if about to undergo an ordeal, but without the attendant organic sensations, a feeling of excitement. * * * I felt tired, a tingling sensation. My head felt as if it were beginning to ache, but in a way too undefined to be actual pain."

Tests were made of the influence of various drugs on the ability to work, on the sight, hearing and nerves. The two investigators concluded, as the result of their work, that alcohol and chloroform fall into one group in their effects on the nervous system, and strychnine, opium and tea into another group.

The club will give a dance the evening of Thanksgiving day at Hamilton Hotel.

Enlisted Men's Club Dance.

The Enlisted Men's Club of the First Missouri Infantry will keep open house at the Armory to the officers and enlisted men and their friends Thanksgiving eve. There will be a dance and special entertainment features. Light refreshments will be served.

Says, "Have Taken Mentho-Laxene, and Found It Just as You Said—Only Better" Homemade and Pure

MOTHERS! Give Pure Medicine to your sick child. Make it at home with concentrated Meantho-Laxene and simple sugar syrup. Directions with each bottle. So many cough medicines contain narcotics—not enough, perhaps, to poison—but enough to deaden the nerves which cause coughing.

Mentho-Laxene contains no narcotics. It is all purity, with Wild Cherry, Tolu, Menthol, Cascara, Grindelia, Ammonian Chloride—a highly concentrated, pure compound.

Give children and aged folks this pleasant homemade mixture, and see how the very first dose does a world of good, for severe cough, tight cold, bronchitis, hoarseness, whooping cough, throat tickle, etc. It is an antiseptic; it loosens the tightest cough, and sleep, restful sleep comes.

Mrs. M. L. Martin, 993 Prospect av., Buffalo, N. Y., writes: "I have taken your Mentho-Laxene for a short time and found it to be just as you said—only better—for I had a very bad cold and it made me well in four days." Quick relief gotten cheaply, too—as any one saves two to three dollars by making Mentho-Laxene cough syrup at home. Your druggist has it—you should have it too.

Be Your Own Weather Prophet

You can make the temperature of your home just what you want it to be, by installing, in one day, the

Detroit Jewel Pipeless Furnace

No pipes—no muss, fuss or disturbance in putting it in. One hole is cut, one register placed, in hall or living-room, and your winter's comfort is assured.

The heated air rises through the center of the register; the cooled air sinks through an orifice around its rim. Thus, perfect air circulation, perfect sanitation and an even temperature throughout the house are assured.

Very economical in operation. Many instances were recorded last year of eight-room houses being heated comfortably throughout the winter on five tons of coal. There are now more than 27,000 Jewel Pipeless Furnaces in successful operation.

ZIMBALIST WILL BE SOLOIST AT SYMPHONY

Violinist and Composer of "Honeydew" to Play Hubay's Concerto This Week.

Efrem Zimbalist, violinist, will be the soloist at the regular symphony concerts for next Friday and Saturday. Since his last appearance here, Zimbalist, like Fritz Kreisler, has made his bow as a composer of operetta, with a work called "Honeydew," which has been running at the Casino in New York since September.

He brings as his contribution to the program a work never played here before, the Third Concerto, in G Minor, by Jenno Hubay, the veteran violin teacher of Prague, who has been called the Leopold Auer of Bohemia. Hubay has written three violin concertos, numerous violin pieces, and several operas.

Another novelty will be Rimsky-Korsakoff's overture, "La Grande Paque Russe," or "The Russian Easter." It is based on themes of the Russian church, and has as a "program" passages from the Psalms and from the Gospel of St. Mark, together with some added paragraphs of the composer's authorship. The complete program follows:

Overture to Le Nozze di Figaro ....Mozart
Symphony in E Minor, No. 4, Op. 98 ....Brahms
I. Allegro non troppo.
II. Andante moderato.
III. Allegro giocoso.
IV. Allegro energico e passionate.
Concerto for violin, in G Minor, No. 3, Op. 99..............Hubay
1. Introduction quasi fantasia.
II. Scherzo.
III. Adagio.
IV. Allegro con fuoco.
(First time.)
Overture—La Grande Paque Russe (The Russian Easter), on Themes of the Russian Church—Rimsky-Korsakoff
(First time.)

Birdie Hilb, "Pop" Soloist.

The soloist for the "pop" concert this afternoon at the Odeon is Birdie Hilb, soprano, who will offer the "Depuis le jour" aria from "Louise" and a group of numbers with piano accompaniment, including "O mio babbino caro" from Puccini's "Gianni Schicchi." The instrumental program will be as follows:

Overture to A Midsummer Night's Dream....Mendelssohn
Symphonic Poem—Danse Macabre ....Saint-Saens
Peer Gynt, Suite No. 1, Op. 46...Grieg
I. Morning Voices.
II. Ase's Death.
III. Anitra's Dance.
IV. In the Hall of the Mountain King.
Dance of the Gnomes, from Oriental Suite, Op. 13......Ilyinski
Waltz from The Sleeping Beauty, Op. 66 ....Tschaikowsky

At next week's regular programs, Mme. Hulda Lashanska, soprano, will appear as soloist, and the featured number, a novelty here, will be Liszt's first symphonic poem, "Ce qu'on entend sur la montagne," after a poem by Victor Hugo.

PRINCE OF WALES WRITES APOSTROPHE TO NEPTUNE

Verses Recited by Him on Occasion of Ceremony on the Warship Renown.

Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Oct. 26.—The latest role in which the Prince of Wales has appeared is that of a poet. The following verses were written and recited by the Prince on the occasion of the ceremony on the warship Renown, attending his first crossing of "the line," on his trip to Australia:

Apostrophe to Neptune.

(By H. R. H., the Prince of Wales.)

King Neptune, I am proud to wear
This honorable and handsome collar,
Although from all reports I hear,
There's still a great deal more to foller.

I'm glad to meet your charming wife
And all the members of your court.
From all I've seen I'll bet my life
That Amphithrite's quite a sport.

I hear you're handing out some dope
To each expectant, frightened lad
Made up of pills and shaving soap.
Why is not that just quite too bad?

I hear your bears—Say! What a noise.
They're hungry to begin the baiting.
I know I'm "for it," King! So boys,
Don't let me keep the party waiting.

TREATMENT SAID TO RESTORE ERASED MARKS ON PARCHMENT

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

ROME, Oct. 23.—In the middle ages, when parchment cost even more than paper costs nowadays, it was the custom to scrape old documents in order to use the parchment again for writing. Students and archeologists have devoted much time and labor trying to decipher these palimpsests, as they are called, and the work has usually been done by removing the later writing with some chemical and then trying to decipher the half-erased script underneath.

Prof. Giuseppe Perugi of Viterbo, distinguished by his studies in paleography, has lately announced the discovery of a photographic treatment whereby the original script returns to view entirely distinct from what has been written above it. One of Prof. Perugi's latest achievements has been to reproduce from under an uninteresting religious composition of the fifteenth century, the entire Sixth Canto of Dante's Paradiso. The erasure of the poem took place about the middle of the fifteenth century.

It is believed that the system will also be used for the scientific investigations of the police or in order to detect forgeries and alterations in business documents or paper money.

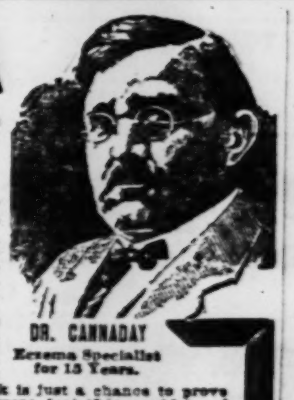
ECZEMA

Also Called Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Milk Crust, Water Poison, Weeping Skin, Etc.



DR. CANNADAY
Eczema Specialist for 15 Years.

For fifteen years I have been treating one disease alone, ECZEMA. I have handled over one million cases. I do not pretend to know it all, but I am convinced the disease is due to an excess of acid in the blood, and closely related to rheumatism and cancer. This acid must be removed.

Eczema is called by some people Itch, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Milk Crust, Weeping Skin, etc. I am fully convinced Eczema is a curable disease, and when I say it can be cured, I mean just what I say—C-U-R-E-D, and not merely patched up for a while to return worse than before. It makes no difference what other doctors have told you, or what all you have tried, all I ask is just a chance to prove to you that this vast experience has taught me a great deal that would be of help to you. If you will write me today I will send you a free trial of my mild, soothing, guaranteed treatment that will do more to convince you than I or anyone else could in a month's preaching. It's all up to you. If you suffer any more with eczema and refuse to merely write to me for free trial, just blame yourself. No matter where you live, I have treated your neighbors. Merely dropping me a postal today is likely to give you more real comfort in a week than you ever expected to enjoy again. Do it right now, your very life may be at stake.

J. E. CANNADAY, M. D., 1273 Court Bk., Sedalia, Mo.

Reference: Third National Bank, Sedalia, or ask your banker to find out about me.

Send this notice to some poor sufferer from eczema. It will be a kind act by you.

Truss Causes Man's Death

A man was admitted to Bellevue Hospital in a very serious condition, caused by wearing a truss which had penetrated the tissues, anteriorly, making a deep, clean-cut wound—the patient died the day after admission. Do you realize that rupture kills seven thousand persons annually? Are you courting death? Are you neglecting yourself by wearing a truss, appliance or whatever name you choose to call it? At best the truss is only a makeshift—a false prop against a collapsing wall—and cannot be expected to act as more than a mere mechanical support. The binding pressure retards blood circulation, thus robbing the weakened muscles of that which they need most—nourishment.

Science has found a way, and all truss sufferers are invited to make a FREE test in the privacy of their own home. The PLAPAO method is unquestionably the most scientific, logical and successful self-treatment for rupture the world has ever known.

The PLAPAO-PAD, when adhering closely to the body, cannot slip or shift out of place, therefore cannot chafe or pinch. Soft as velvet, easy to apply, inexpensive. It works while you work and while you sleep. No straps, buckles or springs attached. Learn how to close the hernial opening as nature intended so the rupture CAN'T come down.

BELGIAN NOBLEMEN TRADED WITH ENEMY

Barons Coppee Sold Coal and By-Products to Germans During War.

By the Associated Press.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 13.—The Belgian Government's campaign against Belgian subjects who, during the war, are alleged to have aided the enemy, has just had a sensational turn in the case of the Barons Evence Coppee, father and son, who were probably the wealthiest coal magnates in Belgium.

The two noblemen were arrested some months ago, charged with assisting the Germans during their occupation of Belgium, by turning over coal and by-products to the enemy. Hundreds of other Belgians, accused of similar offenses, have been convicted and sentenced to long prison terms.

The sensation in the Coppee case came recently when the Court released them from prison on bail of 1,000,000 francs each on the evidence of Count de Brocqueville, who was Premier of the Belgian Government during its stay at Havre, France, that he had given Baron Coppee perimssion to work his mines during the German occupation and ship coal, the idea being that this fuel was to be used for the Belgian population, who were forced to remain in the occupied territory.

Count de Brocqueville, in an affidavit submitted to the Court in the Coppees' behalf, further admitted that he had given the accused permission to sell freely their coal by-products, such as benzol and other things used in explosives, to the Germans, as he, in effect, thought that the Germans had so much of these anyway that a little more could not do any harm.

During the past few months the Belgian courts have tried dozens of other cases, making shoft shrift of the accused who were proved to have grown rich by trading with the enemy their country was fighting.

EMBARGO ON SOME IMPORTS BEING CONSIDERED IN SWEDEN

Thousands of Workers Out of Employment While Plants Accumulate Stocks.

By the Associated Press.

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 26.—Prospects for the coming winter are regarded by many Swedish business men as anything but bright.

After the war blockade was lifted the country became flooded with American and English produce, chiefly textiles, foodstuffs and automobiles. As a result, the dollar rate soared from 3.20 kroner to nearly 6. The importation of foreign foodstuffs soon ceased, but textiles and automobiles are still pouring into the country at such a rate that an embargo upon their importation is being seriously considered.

The overflow has thrown thousands of Swedish workers out of employment. The great mills at Norrkoping and Boras have been working only four days weekly since August and they are now preparing a general dismissal of their employes.

High wages and the operation of the eight-hour day which has been in force here for a year, are blamed in some quarters for this state of affairs.

Swedish manufacturers, especially of iron and steel, are no longer able to compete with the foreign-made articles. For a time plants have been accumulating stocks, but signs abound that this has reached its limits. A strike in the building trade has lasted for nearly a year and the housing problem has become so acute that to rent a flat in Stockholm or in any of the big Swedish centers is well nigh impossible.

With all this, the workers continue agitating for still higher wages and shorter hours. The elections last September resulted in disapproval of the Socialist regime and the present Socialist Government is said to be anxious to relinquish office.

CLIMBS ROPE, HAND OVER HAND, 360 FEET AFTER FINDING PURSE

Lighthouse Keeper Accomplishes Feat That Appeared Impossible to Others Baffled by Cliffs.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

EASTPORT, Me., Nov. 13.—Capt. Loring M. Myers, inventor of the Myers non-sinkable lifeboat, who has been in charge of the United States lighthouse at Lubec Narrows, off the frontier coast town of Lubec, will be retired in January on a pension after 35 continuous years of service.

He was a visitor recently to Eastport to meet the Rev. Samuel A. Eliot, D. D., L. L. D., of Boston.

In 1858 the English ship Lord Ashburton was lost on the shores of the Canadian island of Grand Manan, New Brunswick, 15 miles from Eastport, in a snow storm. Twenty-one of her seamen were drowned and eight were saved by climbing up the almost perpendicular cliffs, about 360 feet, to the top. It was to visit these cliffs on Grand Mahan that Mr. Eliot and a young companion had gone about a quarter of a century ago, and in bending over the top they had lost a wallet containing a sum of money.

Sailors had tried to find the missing property by being lowered down the rocks on a rope, but were unsuccessful. Capt. Myers, then a young man in the Lubec Channel Lighthouse, was called and lowered himself on a rope from the cliff to the beach, then by climbing up hand over hand the distance of 360 feet, returned the wallet to Eliot and his companion, whom he had never met.

When he arrived in Eastport this week it was to meet the distinguished clergyman of Boston and relate the story personally.

THE GENIUS OF WALTHAM

WINGS! What a poetic word that is! Wings for the mind to climb the ethereal heights of thought. Wings for the inventor to fly over the obstructing laws of nature. Wings for the dreamer who would take flight over the vastnesses of Time and reach his paradise of Heart's Desire. Man has always desired Wings—

Wings symbolize his ambition, his immortal powers, his desire for mastery even over the elements—and the wish has come true.

When the powerful aeroplane hurtles through the airways above us, we scarce lift our heads to look, so ordinary is the occasion that was once a seeming miracle beyond mortal attainment.

MAN'S mastery of the air is but one of those wizardries which have made the age we live in appear like a chapter from the "Arabian Nights." After all, it is but an achievement contemporary with the X-ray, wireless telegraphy and other wonders of science and invention.

The motor mechanism of a Waltham Watch or Clock involves just as wondrous principles and scientific applications as the more dramatic demonstration of an aeroplane performing its evolutions in the sky.

Indeed, if we examined, part by part—if we probed the surface of the appearance, the tangible thing, called a Waltham Watch or Clock, and understood the tiny inventions placed here and there in the mechanism—we could recite a story of genius—of amazing, concentrated effort that great men gave their very life-blood to provide during the past seventy years from the Waltham laboratories.

We could relate a story which would make the blood of every true American run a little faster and the lips frame words of commendation and honor unto these work-a-day heroes who had one purpose, one determination—to place America First in Timekeeping—in producing watches and clocks that would most accurately and dependably register Time's flying moments.

THEN, is it not a natural sequence of events—based upon long years of preparation—that when war laid the mailed hand upon the genius of our manufacturing ability, our Government should demand of Waltham an Aeroplane Clock to meet tests of time-registering almost equal unto the marvelous Waltham Time-Fuse created to govern the explosion of American shells?

And that American bird-men should carry with them "up there" a dependable timepiece, Waltham produced an Aeroplane Clock—65,000 of them (see illustration)—a small instrument, yet a work of supreme attainment, for it was specified and created to withstand conditions entirely at variance with that environment attributed as necessary for precision performance.

There it is upon the instrument board—just nine ounces in weight—and never before was such impervious motor energy encased in such stanch yet finely wrought strength.

THE aviator is in his seat. He waves a hand nonchalantly. The mechanician gives a half turn to the slim propeller—the blade whirls with a roar, the motor crackles like musketry and man's beautiful winged bird, vibrating like a huge taut steel string struck by a giant hand, climbs in great spirals into the sky.

Up and up; five thousand feet, seventy-five hundred, ten thousand—higher, higher yet, until the huge wings are but black specks in the blue.

Up there in the icy cold a drop of 50, 60, 70, 80 degrees in temperature. What a test in metal contraction! This is where metallurgical science proves the genius of man! But amid the vibration and the biting cold—

The little Waltham Clock ticks on.

And now, with bated breath, we watch the daring air-man defy the laws of gravity. With a swoop he loops a circle. Then, as if that were but an introduction, the machine begins a death-defying dive. Down, swifter than a stricken eagle, it falls. We catch our breath; we almost see the huddled, mangled mass of wreckage covering a tale of destruction—and then, as if in mockery of our fears, the winged beauty sweeps on level path to once more climb skyward.

And the tiny Waltham Clock ticks on.

Defiant trick after trick of human hand and nerve conjoined to human daring is displayed to our enthralled sight—the vrille, the dizzying fall as a whirling leaf, the side slip, the tail spin—

And there on the instrument board—no matter what the position, what the temperature, what the racking vibration—proof against these, the wetness of cloud, the cloying dampness of fog, the beat of rain, any weather—

The little Waltham Clock ticks on.

And hundreds of thousands of Waltham Clocks and Watches ever tick on—

In every climatic zone—in the air, in the submarine under the sea, in the warship that goes out upon the great waters, in countless automobiles, in myriads of pockets, upon wrists strong or fair—

Waltham keeps the time o' day; and, like an old saying, the sun never sets upon this American dominion—this Waltham Watch Over Time.

AND let us remember that Waltham is something more than the name of a Clock or Watch.

Waltham represents a growth, an advancement in the art of producing time-keeping instruments beyond the dream of foreign makers.

Waltham represents the concentrated faculty of American determination to improve upon old methods, to overcome the complacency of foreign watch and clock makers; to add to the watch, to the clock—

Marvelous machines for performing certain labors in gold, in steel, in brass, that the human hand could never approximate; to give the world a clock or watch that should represent American supremacy in the field of applied mechanics related to the art of horology. That this is so Waltham has proved by competition against the best horological products the world has pitted against America.

And just as Waltham was the pioneer of American watchmaking during nearly three-quarters of a century under the eagle of peace—so, when war came, the long preparation reaped its triumphant harvest—in the Waltham Time-Fuse, the Waltham Chronometer, the Waltham Aeroplane Clock—and last, but not least, the superb achievement and world challenge of the Waltham Watch.

APPENDICITIS

Appendicitis attacks at any moment, even persons seemingly in good health. Usually, however, it is preceded by stomach trouble or constipation. Many people have a bowel movement every day, but it is not a COMPLETE movement, and much old, stale matter stays in the system to ferment and cause trouble. Often there is only a small passage in the center of the bowels, while the sides are covered with old, hard matter, which sticks to the bowels and often poisons the system for months, making you feel tired all the time and "half-sick." Even if your bowels move slightly each day, that is not enough. There must be an occasional THOROUGH, complete cleansing to bring out all the accumulated, poisonous waste matter.

Appendicitis is an intestinal infection spreading to the appendix, and it can be guarded against in the same manner in which you guard against the spread of throat infection (sore throat). When you have sore throat, you can often prevent further trouble by using an antiseptic wash or gargle to destroy the germs, and a laxative to carry off the poisons from the body. Very similar treatment is necessary to guard against appendicitis. But instead of an antiseptic wash for the throat, an INTESTINAL antiseptic is necessary and a COMPLETE drainage of the bowel system.

INTESTINAL ANTISEPTIC

There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleaner. This preparation, known as ADLER-I-KA, acts as follows:

It tends to destroy or remove harmful germs and colon bacili in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here.

It is the most COMPLETE system cleaner ever offered to the public, acting on BOTH upper and lower bowel and bringing out foul matter which poisoned the system for months and which nothing else can dislodge. It brings out all gasses, thus immediately relieving pressure on the heart and other vital organs. It is astonishing the great amount of poisonous matter ADLER-I-KA draws from the alimentary canal—matter you never thought was in your system. Try it right after a natural movement and notice how much MORE foul matter is brought out which was poisoning your system. In slight disorders, such as occasional constipation, sour stomach, gas on the stomach and sick headaches, one spoonful ADLER-I-KA ALWAYS brings relief. ADLER-I-KA is a constant surprise to people who have used only ordinary stomach and bowel medicines and the various oils and waters, on account of its rapid, pleasant and COMPLETE action.

REPORTS FROM PHYSICIANS

The Doctor's Advice
by Dr. Lewis Baker

"Laura" says: "Some time ago I contracted a very severe cold and cough. I have tried many remedies, but they do not seem to help me at all. I wish you would advise me what to do."

Answer: What you need is a laxative cough syrup, one that will drive the cold from your system. The following prescription will check your cold and cough: Get a 2½-oz. package of concentrated essence Mentho-Laxene and make according to directions on the bottle. Take a teaspoonful every hour or two or until your cold is better.

"Widow" writes: "Due to a prolonged illness I lost 25 pounds and for over a year have been very thin, tired all the time and sleepless. How can I best gain and recover my health?"

Answer: Take regularly for several months Hypo-Nuciane tablets, designed to improve nutrition and enrich the blood.

This letter speaks for itself:

Dr. Lewis Baker: Dear Sir—The plain Yellow Minyol—it is great. I have used it twice. I have been troubled with itching scalp, falling hair for two years and have tried everything heard of and nothing did any good. I probably paid out $25 in the last two years. But the Minyol stopped the falling hair and the itching is most gone. It is a great relief, and I surely believe that I can have my hair as nice and pretty as it was before. I can recommend it to everyone who has falling hair, dandruff and itching scalp.

Yours very gratefully,
Miss Eva M. Spooner,
Norwich, Vt.
R. F. D. No. 1, Box 37.

"Mrs. M. R." writes: "I am too fleshy and want to reduce. Please advise."

Answer: For obesity I advise Arbolone tablets.

"M. M." writes: "Can you advise a safe blood medicine?"

Answer: I never use mercury or mineral salts for blood impurities. A pure herb medicine is safer and more reliable. Suggest you try Chin-Cea compound for several months. It is most effective.

• • •

"Young Mother" writes: "Since the birth of my child I have never been strong and well. A great loss of blood weakened me, and my nerves are shattered. Am most despondent."

Answer: Take Cadomene tablets regularly and you should soon be happy, strong and vital.

"Depressed" writes: "What should I do to relieve a severe case of kidney and bladder disease? Have fever, chills, pains like rheumatism and soreness in region of bladder."

Answer: For such symptoms as you describe I prescribe my favorite formula under the name of Balmwort Tablets. This is a splendid efficacious remedy for such abnormal conditions. Begin their use as per directions on each sealed tube.

LIPPMAN DISCUSSES TIRE PRICE CUTTING

At the meeting of the Motor Accessory Trade Association at the City Club, Tuesday night, P. B. McCann, educational director of the Central Y. M. C. A., told of the progress of the Y. M. C. A. Automobile School at Grand and Franklin avs., which was established three years ago under the auspices of the automobile dealers of St. Louis. He said that about 1800 pupils passed through the school at the last term, and that it had been pronounced by the U. S. Government officials as one of the best equipped schools in the country. Three new members were elected: Bckley-Ralston Co., B. & B. Manufacturing Co., and St. Louis Iron Store Co. W. A. Lippman of the Field-Lippman Co., gave an illustrated lecture on road conditions to the west of St. Louis.

At the meeting of the St. Louis Tire Dealers' Association, Thursday night at the American Annex Hotel, Mr. Lippman created a mild sensation by showing lantern slides of photographs taken along Locust street. These were the windows and fronts of the various tire houses along the street, each of them bearing broad, blazing signs announcing price cuts in tires. Mr. Lippman ventured the opinion that it would take a long time to convince the public that these slashes in prices were not made possible because the dealer in tires made an enormous profit instead of the meager profit actually allowed them by the tire manufactures. W. L. Burgess of the Surety Tire & Rubber Co., St. Louis tire manufacturers, was also a speaker. Two new members were elected: Field-Lippman Co. and Zerwick & Grayson. Officers elected to serve for the ensuing year, were: Joseph Roberts, Roberts Motor Tire Co., president; Art. B. Mooney, Art. B. Mooney Tire Co., vice-president; Robert E. Lee, secretary, and these directors: G. F. Poertner, Majestic Tire Co.; Joseph Kuemmerle, B. & K. Tire and Equipment Co.; I. Riefler, Independent Tire Co., and Auguste Chouteau, Lee Tire Service Co.

DODGE BROS. BUILDING NEW FACTORY UNITS

Dodge Bros. are arranging a series of conventions at their factory in Detroit, showing their dealers the big factory expansion project which is now well along and which will involve an expenditure of more than $6,000,000 before it is finished.

Frank Tate, president of Tate Motors, Inc., local distributor for Dodge Bros., and George Dunville, sales manager, inspected the new factories last week. They report that production has not been cut, but on the other hand is being pushed ahead.

For four months ending Nov. 1 the actual production of the Dodge Bros factories was 60,181 cars and at the present time the cars are coming through at the rate of 625 per day.

The major project of the many new factory units now under construction is a pressed steel building, which alone will provide floor area of 860,000 square feet, and which will be completed April 1. A new construction building has a floor area of 146,366 square feet. In addition at least 30 other minor construction projects are under way, representing a total new floor area of 1,250,000 square feet.

NEW COMPANY SECURES HOLMES DISTRIBUTION

A new organization known as the Holmes Motors Inc., last week purchased the interests of Dr. D. Klein and became successors to the Franklin Automobile and Supply Co., which distributes the Holmes air-cooled car throughout Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois.

The company is incorporated for $50,000 with C. T. Payton, president of the Payton Lumber Co., as president; E. C. Klipstein of Klipstein & Rathmann, as vice president, and W. A. Cochran, secretary and treasurer. Cochran, who was general manager of the old concern, will continue in that position in the new organization. They will continue to occupy the salesroom at 3015 Locust street.

4500 IN "JUNIOR REPUBLICANS"

Organization Plans Meetings Every Month.

The membership of the Junior Republicans, an organization of young men and women members of the Republican party, increased during the last three months from 25 to 4500, according to a statement issued by the president, Milton F. Napier. The plan of the Junior Chamber of Commerce has been followed in organization and the membership is expected to be held together between elections partly by the idea of "dance after the meeting."

The Junior Republicans sent four-minute speakers out before the election to urge St. Louis voters to cast straight Republican ballots. Membership, publicity and foreign divisions have been established, and also a speakers' bureau. It is planned to maintain a citizens' complaint bureau to hear complaints against municipal employes and others.

Meetings are to be held at 8:30 p. m. on the third Thursday of each month, at the Planters Hotel. There are several classes of membership.

This is in addition to a complete line of accessories for both the jobbing and retail trade.

The offices of the company will be in the new building.

SEARCH FOR SEAPLANE RENEWED

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—Search, directed from the Great Lakes Naval Training Station at Lake Bluff, Ill., was renewed early today for the seaplane which has been missing from the station since Wednesday. A bitter cold and rising wind, added to raging seas, caused the abandoning of the rescue work last night.

The missing men are Lieut. Harry E. Barr, pilot, of Lake Forest, Ill.; Ensign Edwin N. Clark of Peoria, Ill., and Gunner's Mate John Caesar of Hollywood, Ill. The expedition left on a tour of reconnoisance. Efforts to reach the spot where they were last seen, near two Rivers, Wis., were prevented by bad weather.

PISTON RING TALKS No. 6—

A special feature in Tell-Tale Piston Rings is the oil groove with vents cut on the wearing surface. The surplus oil on the cylinder wall flows through the vents into the oil groove on the down stroke of the piston and out again on the up stroke. This not only utilizes the oil over and over again for lubricating the cylinder wall, but positively prevents it from fouling the spark plugs and forming carbon.

Sure, Harmless Way To Remove Hair Roots
(New, Wonderful, Quick Method.)

You who are annoyed with embarrassing growths of superfluous hair have waited long for something that would do more than merely take off the surface hair temporarily—something that would really remove the hair roots. And now—at last—your wish is realized!

The new phelactine process is far different from, far better than electrical, depilatory or other methods, because it actually removes the hair entire, roots and all—before your very eyes—easily, quickly, harmlessly! Get a stick of phelactine from your druggist, follow the simple directions, and you will be surprised and pleased beyond words. It has no odor, no irritating element, and is so non-injurious a child could safely eat it. It leaves the skin so soft, smooth, hairless, that not the least sign of your former trouble remains.

Theater and Dinner Party for Orphans.

The St. Louis Protestant Orphans' Home at Webster Groves has chartered the American Theater for a performance of "Monsieur Beaucaire" to be given Dec. 6 by the original London company, including Miss Marion Green. The play will be followed by a supper and dance at Hotel Statler. Mrs. Edward K. Love is president of the home, and Mrs. Clinton J. Whittemore is chairman of the Entertainment Committee.

ESSEX MOTOR CARS

An Essex Advantage That All Acclaim

The distinction of performance which rates the moderate-priced Essex among the fine cars of the world is by no means confined to its greater speed, acceleration and hill-climbing ability.

Official proofs remove its supremacy in those qualities from debate. No car of its motor size ever matched them. Some of its marks were never equaled by any car, regardless of size, price or type.

Thus Essex Takes Rank With the Greatest Cars

Yet in one quality, more than another, causes men to link Essex in merit with the costly cars, it is its ease of motion, and elastic smoothness in action, which have no counterpart among light cars.

That is the enchantment Essex owners admit they value next to its reliability. Even long association they say does not dispel the impression of riding in a large car.

We know in all candidness that few men ever have call for such speed and power as Essex possesses. Yet no owner mistakes it for useless surplus. This excess ability is valued chiefly because it does the ordinary task without effort. And because men like to have capacity that can meet exceptional calls for power, speed and acceleration, with an ease and absence of strain that brings no concern as to its accomplishment.

The satisfaction and enthusiasm of nearly 50,000 owners contents us to leave the judgment of the Essex in their hands.

FROM WELL DIGGER TO GOVERNORSHIP AND NOW SENATOR

Governor of South Dakota, Just Elected to U. S. Senate, Began Life as Well Digger.

BORROWED $130 TO LAUNCH HIS CAREER

From the Very First He Has Been in Deep Sympathy With the Great Mass of People.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D.—From well digger to United States Senator is the record made by Gov. Peter Norbeck, who on Nov. 2 was elected United States Senator from South Dakota by the Republicans of the State to succeed Senator E. S. Johnson, Democrat.

Gov. Norbeck was born in Clay County, Dakota Territory, in 1870, within 10 miles of the first permanent schoolhouse erected in the territory. His parents were among the pioneers and made entry of a homestead only a few years after President Abraham Lincoln opened that part of Dakota Territory for white settlement. His father was a Lutheran cleregyman aside from being a farmer, and took great interest in all questions pertaining not only to the farm, but also to the State and the church. On account of his interest in public affairs, the elder Norbeck was elected to the Territorial Assembly in 1872, and the State Legislature in 1887.

The family moved to Charles Mix County, South Dakota, which at that time was on the very frontiers of civilization. The stern realities of life prevented young Norbeck from getting a real college education. He had only a short period at the State University at Vermillion, S. D., in addition to his common school course.

But what he lacked in college training was more than made up in the university of real life. In this respect he was like many other great Americans who, as self-made men, have blazed the trail to usefulness and fame.

Career an Inspiration.

Peter Norbeck's career will be an inspiration to all young Americans, and again illustrates the claim that worth and ability are recognized in American life regardless of the humble origin of the individual.

When only 12 years of age Norbeck became interested in artesian wells and artesian well machinery, and when he grew to manhood he engaged in the business of drilling artesian wells in South Dakota.

With only $130 which he had borrowed from his father, he started at the age of 25 on a business career as a well digger. During recent years he and his partners have conducted the largest artesian well drilling business in the United States, with headquarters at Redfield, S. D. Their success has been wonderful. New methods and machinery evolved by Mr. Norbeck and his partners, coupled with efficiency and organization, have made it possible for every farmer in the artesian zone of the Northwest to have a constant supply of water always at command, at a small fraction of the former cost.

After Mr. Norbeck moved to Redfield in 1900, the residents of that city soon discovered that he was interested in public questions, and he was twice chosen by the voters of Redfield to serve in the City Council. He then was elected State Senator from Spink County for three consecutive terms. Then, in 1914, he was elected Lieutenant-Governor of South Dakota. After serving two terms as Lieutenant-Governor he was elected Governor, and two years ago was elected to his second term as Governor. The term will expire Jan. 1.

During the years of his public service Mr. Norbeck has been deeply interested in all public questions bearing upon the success and prosperity of the people of South Dakota. He is of Scandinavian descent and a thorough American. He learned from actual experience the needs of the farmer. Mr. Norbeck for many years has been interested in practical farming, having specialized on alfalfa.

Stand for the People.

His record as Governor of South Dakota shows that he stands unswervingly for the rights of the people and for all reforms which will result to the benefit and well-being of the great mass of common people. As Governor of South Dakota he has at all times been found in the forefront of the fight for reform legislation. It is said of him that during his incumbency of the office of Governor he has agitated for and signed more reform laws than any other Governor, in the United States for the same period of time.

The first artesian well young Norbeck and his associates drilled after he started on the capital of $130 borrowed from his father was at a point 10 miles north of the town of Mount Vernon. It proved a success, and the well continued to flow for more than 23 years afterward, and at the present time is a very good well of the kind. This well is 420 feet deep and is cased from top to bottom with two-inch pipe. They had plenty to do from the start, as South Dakota at that time experienced several drouth years, making it necessary for the farmers to get water from any source they could—and the Norbeck drilling outfit proved to be a boon to the settlers of those days.

They were drilling successful wells of varying depth at prices ranging from $200 to $500 each. This was about one-tenth what outside companies had been charging; were casing these wells at their own expense and were nevertheless making money right from the start. If one of the wells drilled by them "went wrong," they promptly drilled the farmer another one nearby, free of cost.

Their reputation for honesty and square dealing spread before them. Their success also was enhanced by their improved machinery for drilling, which made it possible to do the work much more cheaply. They combined all of the best ideas of the old drillers' outfits, and then invented devices of their own.

Overcame Early Obstacles.

Their second well was drilled for a Davison County bank, which had a capital of $40,000. Yet, owing to the hard times prevailing at the time, this bank had loaned down so low in trying to aid the discouraged settlers to remain that it could not pay for the artesian well when it was completed. Norbeck and his associates took a certificate of deposit for the amount due. Then they con-

A New Kind of Detective

Mr. T. Carrington, private detective (or, "inquiry agent," as he preferred to call himself), is described by the author, J. Storer Clouston, as: "A young man, apparently a little over 30, above middle height, with a round, ingenious, very agreeable face, smooth fair hair, a little, neatly trimmed moustache, and a monocle that lent just the necessary touch of distinction to what might have otherwise been a too-good-humored physiognomy." The stories were, for the most part, told by Mr. Carrington himself over a smoking-room fire.

MR. T. CARRINGTON is no clap-trap sensational detective. Neither is he one who sits down and "deducts" crimes. He gets right to the bottom of the facts by hard work and rare intelligence and some of the big cases he has worked on, quietly and without show, he is now telling about in a series of intensely interesting short stories.

J. Storer Clouston, the author of this series of short stories, has created in T. Carrington a character new to detective fiction, but makes him a real, living person, and the records of his exploits make splendid reading. If you like detective stories, especially detective stories with a queer and unexpected twist, you will enjoy every line of these.

The T. Carrington Stories Will Be Printed

'PLEASE HURRY THE BODIES OUT, I WILL RENT APARTMENT'

Paris Caller at Flat After Murder and Suicide Had Been Looking for Home for Year.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Oct. 27.—One thousand francs only remaining of her former wealth, Madeleine, Moreno, who was a renowned singer in gay Paris theaters before she married Joseph O'Brien, a coachman for one of the wealthiest residents of the Champs Elysees, invited her husband out to dinner a short time ago.

To one of the most expensive restaurants in Paris, the scene of Mademoiselle Moreno's former splendor, they went. They returned home about 2 o'clock in the morning, minus the 1000 francs. An hour later Mrs. O'Brien cut her husband's throat with a razor, then committed suicide.

The concierge of the apartment, where the couple occupied a handsomely furnished flat in a street leading from the Champs Elysees, reported the matter to the police and in a few minutes a distinguished-looking man called. He made many inquiries concerning the affair, which the concierge answered.

"Mr. Police Commissioner," she ended, "please hurry and have the bodies removed from the flat."

"I am not the Police Commissioner," replied the visitor, "but you admit the flat is vacant, that the price is so much; then I will rent the apartment. I have been looking for one for over a year."

FROM WELL DIGGER TO GOVERNORSHIP AND NOW SENATOR

tracted for a second artesian well drilling outfit. They gave the certificate of deposit in payment for it and put another crew at work. There was plenty of it to be done. Every farmer in the surrounding county who had livestock, and many who did not, wanted one of these cheap artesian wells.

But people were hard up and could not pay for them. One man turned over to them a harness, another one give his new wagon in part payment. They drilled a second well for the bank which had given them the certificate of deposit for the first one. This bank had foreclosed a mortgage and had taken over a nice team of horses. These were applied on payment of the second well. Thus the firm now had a team, wagon and harness. They used the horses one season and then sold them for nearly double what they had allowed for them.

Thus the little firm, through barter and otherwise, began to grow. At the end of two years the original partner retired and C. L. Nicholson became associated with Peter Norbeck—and they are associated to this day under the name of the Norbeck & Nicholson Co., "deep artesian well contractors."

For some years they have been operating more than two score well-drilling outfits, and all of them are kept busy all the time. In addition to drilling artesian wells in South Dakota, the company also has drilled wells in Illinois, Indiana, Nebraska, Wyoming, North Dakota and Montana.

Has Vast Well Business.

They have thus far drilled upward of 9000 artesian wells in South Dakota alone, more than 1000 of these being in their home county of Spink, where they had to drill an average depth of 1600 feet before they struck the great artesian basin.

For some time the company hhs had part of its force at work drilling oil and gas wells in Wyoming, and more recently one or two of the drilling outfits have been put at work drilling for oil in supposed new oil fields in the extreme western portion of South Dakota.

That the new United States Senator from South Dakota does not shirk a fight when it becomes necessary to take radical steps in behalf of some measure which he deems essential to the needs of the people has been repeatedly shown during his two terms as Governor and during his service in the State Senate before being elected Lieutenant-Governor. He served six years in the State Senate. During his early legislative experience there was not the demand for progressive legislation as during later years and much more opposition to this sort of legislation than during recent years.

He forced several progressive measures through the State Senate against the wishes of the older men, and then through friends in the lower house had them adopted by that body and then sent to the Governor for the signatures which would enact them into law. When making a fight for what he believes to be the right he is very persistent, and this persistency promises to distinguish him during his service in the United States Senate.

Every druggist in this county is authorized to say to every rheumatic sufferer that if two bottles of Allenrhu, the sure conqueror of rheumatism, does not stop all agony, reduce swollen joints and do away with even the slightest twinge of rheumatic pain, he will gladly return your money without comment.

Allenrhu has been tried and tested for years, and really marvelous results have been accomplished in the most severe cases where the suffering and agony was intense and piteous and where the patient was helpless.

Mr. James H. REO

This Reo Speed Wagon Fits Every Business

In its proven range of usefulness and its great degree of adaptability as well as its wonderful efficiency and low upkeep, this Reo Speed Wagon has surpised even its creators.

Its influence on the truck business in general has been tremendous. It has rendered many other types obsolete.

Designed originally, in the belief that it would meet a specific need in a limited field, this pneumatic tired truck has found its way into innumerable industries, the very existence of which were previously unknown to us.

Realizing that only through greater speeds than were possible to trucks mounted on "solids" could greater economy of operation and upkeep be attained, the Reo engineers designed and built this Speed Wagon.

Results were immeasurably beyond their fondest expectations.

Not only was the efficiency multiplied, the fuel consumption divided, but even tire mileage was greatly added to.

And—most important of all—it was found the same chassis would live three times as long when cushioned from road shocks, power and brake stresses by the resilient air-filled tires.

In a word, this pneumatic tired Reo Truck, which we thereupon named "Speed Wagon" showed the way in the greatest single advance made in automotive engineering since the inception of the industry.

Lest you have forgotten:—

> This Reo was the original of its type as well as of its title.
> "Speed Wagon" is a copyrighted Reo trade mark.
> That's proof of its pioneering
> This was the first motor vehicle designed expressly for heavy trucking service that was mounted on pneumatics, and equipped with electric starter and electric lights.

From the day of its advent it was received with enthusiasm by users.

In five years it has found its way into every part of the world, doing wonderful work in war as well as in peace service.

It is as often seen on the farm as in the city. Seems as if its range of usefulness is as broad as the range of human activity itself.

Manufacturers, wholesalers, jobbers and retailers in every line, find this Speed Wagon ideally suited to their widely diversified needs.

Crowley-Milner Company—Detroit's largest department store—has a fleet of 38 Reo Speed Wagons, and we could name similar cases in almost every city and town.

Farmers in the east; grain growers and stockmen in the middle states; rancners in the west; cotton planters in the south—dairymen everywhere—look upon this Speed Wagon as the standard, because the best adapted, type for their work.

Passenger busses in Alaska and in South Africa —in California and in the Atlantic States (400 Reos running in this service in Newark, N. J. alone!)—

No matter what the business or the delivery problems peculiar to it; no matter what the climate or the condition of roads—still this Speed Wagon proves its capacity to do the work, and its superiority, by all tests.

Because of its proven quality, its economy and its broad sphere of usefulness, demand always has been in excess of possible output.

Demand of the last three months has clearly determined Reo leadership.

So the only way to be at all sure of getting delivery of a Speed Wagon when you'll need it is—to order now—at once. Today won't be a minute too soon.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys if bladder bothers you

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids of the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

"DRUNKS" SEEN ON HAVANA STREETS MOSTLY AMERICANS

Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

HAVANA, Oct. 26.—About the only persons seen on the streets of Havana who show symptoms of overindulgence in intoxicants are Americans. This does not mean, however, that all the Americans who come here drink to excess.

Beer and light wines are so much a part of the Latin life that it has no intoxicating effect. They drink moderately. But some visitors from the dry land seem to drink constantly, once they find a bar.

To Americans, however, the most disagreeable and sickening picture is the hobo from home, a hopeless, wretched figure that infests hotel lobbies. His panhandling is brazen. They pick out people speaking their own tongue, and without shame boldly announce that they want money for drinks. They long ago discarded the appeal for help to get the other shirt from the laundry.

Most of these unfortunates did not follow the flag; they followed the whisky trail, generally as stowaways or in ship crews which they deserted, once within swimming distance of the docks. But for passport regulations, Havana police authorities say, there would be hundreds here from the States with a thirst and no visible means of support.

Cuba happens to be the nearest "foreign country" to the States, and Government officials here declare that much of the growing travel is due to the fact that the island isn't dry. It is a big item of revenue, and has helped to put up prices for everything.

American Tourists in France Finding They Are Almost Too Late Now to See War Ruins

Travelers Complaining of Remarkable Industry of People in Rebuilding Country —One Town Restored by 1915.

By V. BLASCO IBANEZ.

MOST of the Americans I meet returning from the battlefields of the great war seem to be disappointed. Their first thought on landing in Paris was of the old front. "Show us the Hindenburg line, immediately!" They had read every day for four years about the great things done in the fighting. Their imagination had worked on the impressions thus received and magnified them. In addition it seems that people who come to France from great distances expect the country to exhibit something proportionate to the expense and discomfort of their travels. Anticipation outstrips realities. Ask them how they enjoyed their trips to the front and you get almost always the same answer: "Instructive and interesting, I suppose. But not so much after all." With the result that Americans come to Paris to visit the old battlefields; but they remain to spend their time at the theaters and dance halls of the capitals of Europe.

The fact is that in the two years since the end of the war France has not been idle. I have even heard sentimental tourists protest aloud at the methodical way in which the French are erasing the horrible vestiges of war. Shell-torn ruins, cellar holes of burned houses, ponds made by "Jack Johnsons" and "Big Berthas," fields plowed by the barrages, rusting wire entanglements, criss-crossing trench lines strewn with empty shrapnel cases, abandoned guns, dismantled tanks—how romantic! What a desecration to clean up! Unfortunately for sentiment, and art even, France has got to live. She is not able to survive on the picturesque alone.

French Rebuilding Quickly.

I may go even further. France is displaying a remarkable energy in this work of rehabilitation of the devastated regions. Tourists even of the present moment begin to feel they have come a trifle late to get an ocular impression of the world catastrophe. Those who wait until next year will probably see only such memories of four years of heroism as patriotism has decided to preserve for posterity.

France has more than once been accused of thoughtlessness as to the future; and, in truth, foresight is not a conspicuous French trait. In France as in all Latin countries, everything is postponed till tomorrow. She is habitually satisfied with the present, relying on her ability to improvise at the eleventh hour in case of emergency. No one can deny that as an improviser in times of stress France has few equals. As the old William, father of the woodchopper of Amerongen, used to say: "You've got to throw the Frenchman at the first grapple, or else you won't get him on his back at all. The moment he recovers from his surprise he gets his muscle up and wins in the end."

Changes in "Western Front."

This is just as true of reconstruction as it was of the war. I have just come back from a tour of the famous "Western front." You would be surprised at the dramatic changes two years have made in villages, in architecture, in landscape and even in people.

Enormous automobiles, packed with sightseers, stop at a specified station, and the barker begins his explanation of the great battle: "Here the artillery opened fire, hurling 150,000 tons of projectiles in the space of 30 minutes; think of it, ladies and gentlemen, in 30 minutes."

Well, you look, and you dig into your imagination to evoke the picture. For all you can actually see is a field like any other field, with a few oxen at work, perhaps, or a tractor more likely, getting the ground ready for the next crop.

Cemeteries Disappearing.

The barker orates on burning barns and tumbling houses. You look up and see before you an up-to-date farm establishment, with white-walled structures and red-painted roofs. Not a sign of the old trees, cut off short by artillery fire, with gnarled, charred stubs for branches. They have been chopped down and turned into firewood. So the fences and walls, but yesterday pierced with bullet and shell, have now been rebuilt along with the roads they line. Field cemeteries are becoming fewer and fewer. The identified bodies have been disinterred by the families. Only the graves of the unknown dead, along with a few Germans, remain. You find such tombs entirely surrounded by the growing wheat.

The French farmer respects the dead. On meeting a wooden cross he turns his plow a little to one side. That, however, is for the present. Next year or the year following the cross may have fallen. The cultivator will not spare the unmarked grave. The mound will be wiped out and the memory of it, just as the sleeping hero himself, will be absorbed in the earth forever.

Farmers Work Regularly.

Places may still be seen where the clash of opposing forces was so violent and so long sustained that the traces of battle will be slow in disappearing. You find landscapes that are still desolate, where months of artillery fire have churned the earth-crust to the depths of several yards, mixing loam and rock and hardpan as in a geological cataclysm. Thousands of human bodies have been lost in fragments in such deserts; and the ghosts of the dead seem to haunt the dreary wastes with a sense of weirdness and horror.

But the French farmer does not despair at anything. With limitless patience he has already driven his plow into the barren land which has hitherto yielded only a crop of human bones with pieces of rusty steel. He is bound that some day it shall produce again. The land is his. He inherited it from his father, or his grandfather. Or else he has bought it with hard-earned savings. He is determined to get his money back.

Town Had Been Rebuilt in 1915.

When I visited the Western front for the second time it was just six months after the first battle of the Marne. The year was 1915. A staff officer of the Fifth Army acted as my guide. He was anxious to show me a specimen of villages that had really suffered from the drive on Paris. I remember that our automobile ran along the country roads for the better part of a forenoon. The officer could not find the village he had in mind. His war maps were quite useless. All the old landmarks, buildings, walls, fields, had vanished. "We must find it," he said. "Only a mass of ruins, but picturesque ones; houses cracked in the middle, but, somehow, still standing; towers whittled sharp by bullets and pierced with shells like flutes. And a population of starving cats and dogs."

Finally we came to a pretty town, with excellent houses in good condition, a window broken here and there perhaps, and an occasional shell-torn wall. The officer thought he would ask the way. To our surprise, that was the very town we had been looking for. A half year had been sufficient to bring it back to life from its ruins. You had to look closely to find any traces of the storm that had passed—a ruin on some of the back streets, bullet holes plugged with plaster, shell holes newly filled. The fact was that the French peasants had come back again and taken up their life as usual, though the artillery could still be heard rumbling a few miles off, like distant thunder.

That was a miracle of six months of French energy. Imagine, then, the results of reconstruction over two years.

Much Removed by Souvenir Hunters.

Unfortunately the curiosity of the tourists who have recently been visiting the front sometimes takes a disquieting turn. It seems that many

Irrigation and Water-Power Promoters

WITH MOST PERIL FROM FORMER

Threaten Great Public Park Reservations

Danger That Playgrounds Will Be Defaced by Private Exploitation Is a Real One Which Can Be Turned Aside Only by Aroused Public Opinion.

The Argument of "Utility" Should Not Be Entertained by Congress John Barton Payne Secretary of the Interior Has Pointed Out in Answer.

THE Federal water-power bill, which passed Congress last spring, after years of controversy, gives the water-power people the right to file claims on falling water in any Federal reservation, whether it be park, monument, forest or cemetery. Quick to take advantage of its provisions, water-power interests have already applied to the Water-Power Commission set up by the bill, consisting of the secretaries of the departments of the Interior, Agriculture and War, for permission to enter the parks with various projects.

From the Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON.

A CAMEL that wanted to get warm came up to a tent. It was a small tent, and the occupants drove the camel away. The camel persisted and finally they let him put his nose inside. Before they realized what was happening, the camel got his whole body in and became the sole occupant of the tent.

A witness at a congressional hearing told that story to illustrate what will happen if the camel's nose of commercialism is once permitted to insert itself among the scenic wonders of national parks.

The camel's nose is sniffing covetously at the tent.

The danger that the parks, the playgrounds of the people, will be defaced by private exploitation of their resources does not exist merely in the imagination of the public-spirited organizations and individuals who have lately been warning the country against the threatened encroachment. It is a real danger. Only the pressure of an aroused public opinion upon Congress—assuming that the American people who own the parks really want them kept in all their pristine grandeur of lake and mountain scenery and wild-animal life—can turn the danger aside. It comes from two sources—from irrigation interests and from water-power promoters.

Danger Still Threatens.

Most immediate is the peril from the irrigationists. Last spring a bill was put through the Senate granting certain irrigation "easements" in Yellowstone National Park. So quietly was it done that the American Civic Association, which from its Washington headquarters keeps an eye on legislation affecting the parks, knew nothing of the bill till after it had passed the Senate. The bill was introduced in the House by Congressman Addison T. Smith of Idaho and was favorably reported out by the Committee on the Public Lands. Smith twice failed to get unanimous consent to bring the measure to a vote in the House. He then introduced a resolution calling for immediate consideration of the bill. By this time the conservationists had marshaled their forces, so that when Smith's resolution came on for a hearing before the Rules Committee, a few days before the session closed, they were able to get their arguments into the record against the persuasive contentions of the irrigationists.

Though Congress adjourned without acting on Smith's bill, the danger to the parks was not averted. It was simply postponed. With the prestige of having passed the Senate, the bill is still pending before Congress.

The hearing before the Rules Committee developed fully the opposing cases of those who would use the parks for commercial purposes and those who would preserve them intact, as a rich heritage from nature intended for the whole people, for all time to come. Contemplated in the Smith bill is the creation of a reservoir covering 8000 acres in Falls River Basin, in the extreme southwestern corner of Yellowstone Park. The Yellowstone Lake would be raised by building a dam at the outlet of the lake where it flows into the Yellowstone River, and then the water would be brought over into Idaho for the benefit of the farmers of that section. Smith contended that the water was needed to insure maximum crops in an affected area of about 200,000 acres; that the proposed reservoir site was the only one that could be utilized; that the area intended to be covered was swampy, containing nothing whatever of interest.

Plea of "Utility."

In reply to the first contention, the conservationists made the point that the people who would benefit by the proposed dam (estimated by Smith at about 30,000) were no more entitled to special legislation to protect them against the natural hazards of their occupation than any other farming community, and that, moreover, the water would be needed only about once in every five years. Smith himself had stated that except during dry years the lands were fairly well supplied with water.

The answer to the argument that the water resources of the park are needed for industrial or farming development is best given in the words of John Barton Payne, Secretary of the Interior, who has taken an immovable stand against all efforts of commercial interests to break into the parks.

"The argument of utility should not be entertained," wrote the Secretary recently, "and, indeed, it can nearly always be answered by the plain statement that the water which is sought for reclamation and power purposes does not remain in the park, but may be utilized after it leaves the park. In the case of the proposition to dam the Yellowstone River at the mouth of Yellowstone Lake, this is strikingly true, because the volume of water at the mouth of the lake is less than half of the volume of water outside of the park, due to the fact that the Lamar River, Tower Creek and other streams meantime enter into the Yellowstone River. The only argument I have heard in favor of placing the dam within the park is that it will be cheaper—an argument which in my view should not for a moment be entertained."

Secretary Payne visited the Yellowstone last summer and gave a hearing in the park to irrigation interests that desired to exploit its resources which they would get for practically nothing, rather than pay for water outside the park. He condemned their proposition both on the score of the damage it would do the park and on the practical ground set forth in the above quoted letter.

The statement of the irrigationists that the land which they were seeking is a worthless swamp, seldom visited by tourists, was warmly combated by the conservationists at the congressional hearing. They had the support of Stephen T. Mather, director of the National Park Service, who told the committee that the project would involve not only the damming of Yellowstone Lake itself, but the utilization of two or three other valuable lakes to the west, surrounded by heavy timber, would be largely "swamped out" by the reservoir, he said, and in addition it was possible that Geyser Basins, adjoining Shoshone Lake, would be flooded.

Broaching of the Idaho project, said Mather, had opened the way in other states to an agitation in favor of using Yellowstone Park for irrigation purposes. As an instance, he said that Montana people were arguing that if the waters of the Yellowstone Lake could be drawn across the Continental Divide as proposed in Idaho, there was no reason why the lake should not also be used as a reservoir to benefit the Montana country.

Greater Value to the Public.

"The Yellowstone Lake," said Mather, "is a body of water of 87,000 acres, and it has, no doubt, great possibilities from an irrigation standpoint, but our point is that its value is far greater from the standpoint of the scenic attractions and its recreation possibilities to the whole country, and that there are possibilities for securing these same waters outside."

Prominent in the fight for the parks is J. Horace McFarland, a large-scale printer, of Harrisburg, Pa., the head of the American Civic Association. According to Mr. McFarland, the Falls River Basin, which the Smith bill would convert into a reservoir, is not only not a "worthless swamp," but is in fact one of the most beautiful valleys of the park, with grassy meadows, surrounded in part by high lands from which spring several imposing waterfalls from 130 to 380 feet in height. He described is as a veritable "campers' paradise." McFarland said to the congressional committee that while the irrigationists claimed that only a comparatively small area—8000 acres—would be flooded, as a matter of fact the backwater necessary to form a reservoir of that extent would cover 30,000 to 40,000 acres.

McFarland declared that the Smith bill, if passed, would introduce, for the first time, the element of commercialism purely for private benefit into the national parks, after they had been held for all the people for 50 years. The bill would be, he said, an entering wedge for other projects; one slice of the park after another would be taken, till ultimately the whole park would be an agricultural reservoir. He pointed to Niagara Falls as an example of what follows when the entering wedge—the nose of the camel in the tent—is permitted.

Fourth of Water Gone.

"The first grist mill established along the river up there," said Mr. McFarland, "was just interesting, but now 27 per cent of the water is gone, and the whole of it will go."

Denying the contention of the irrigationists that no profit was sought from the enterprise, McFarland said:

"The farmers organized a corporation, and just as my firm prints for a profit, they farm for a profit. They have 25 subsidiary corporations which are related, and there may be more. It is absolutely for private grant."

The irrigationists assert that their project would not mar the beauty of the park. In answer to that the conservationists tell the story of Jackson Lake, Wyoming, just outside the park. Jackson Lake, with the Teton Mountains back of it, was rated one of the four or five finest scenic gems in the United States. Irrigationists dammed the lake. The result is that when the water, accumulated from the melting snows in the spring, is drawn off in the summer, Jackson Lake is left surrounded with unsightly mud flats half a mile in width. William C. Gregg of Hackensack, N. J., a manufacturer of railway equipment, was out there in the summer of 1919 and took some pictures, which he showed to the congressional committee to indicate what would be the fate of Yellowstone Lake if the Smith bill were allowed to go through. Gregg pointed out that the water is drawn off and the Jackson Lake slope covered with mud and debris at the very time that thousands of people go to the nation's great recreation grounds to enjoy their own.

"I could not see the Teton Mountains, although they rise to a height of 6000 feet, for the mud flats in front of me," said Gregg. "It was more repulsive than anything else. I am making this point to absolutely negative the statement that you can develop lakes (for irrigation purposes) so that during the tourist season the American people will enjoy seeing them."

Congressman Smith replied that the utilization of Jackson Lake had increased the population of Idaho by more than 100,000 and resulted in the development of towns and cities and great sections of country.

Would Establish Fair Balance.

"We must establish a fair balance between the interests of the whole people and the interests of that little section out there," retorted Gregg. "What is the money value of Jackson Lake? Fifty million dollars will not recompense the State of Wyoming for the damage that is done there. In Europe you can see the Jungfrau and the Matterhorn, while here you can see the Teton Mountains. Now, those people over there would just as soon think of committing suicide as to drain Lake Lucerne, so that when men got there in the summer time, bringing in lots of money, they would see mud flats instead of a beautiful lake."

The other danger to the parks arises from the desire of water-power interests for free sites.

The Federal water-power bill, which passed Congress last spring, after years of controversy, gives the water-power people the right to file claims on falling water in any Federal reservation, whether it be park, monument, forest or cemetery. Quick to take advantage of its provisions, water-power interests have already applied to the Water-Power Commission set up by the bill, consisting of the secretaries of the departments of the Interior, Agriculture and War, for permission to enter the parks with various projects.

As long as the personnel of the commission stands as at present—Secretaries Payne, Meredith and Baker—no such permission will be granted. What the conservationists fear is that the policy may be reversed under the incoming administration.

"You must not come into the parks," is the way Secretary Payne, in a talk with the writer, phrased his attitude toward all commercial interests seeking to turn the national playgrounds to their private gain.

"The whole purpose of the parks is to preserve forever the natural Western life of our country, with its scenery and its wild animals, that people may have a place where they can go and appreciate what generous nature grants," said Secretary Payne. "Encroachment upon the parks tending toward their commercialization must be resisted to the utmost."

The "inside" story of the President's delay in approving the water-power bill was told to the writer by Secretary Payne, and is here printed for the first time. At the time of the delay it was merely announced that the President was holding the bill "for further consideration."

Following the ordinary routine, the President sent the bill over to the department most concerned for its opinion. It went to Payne, who had become Secretary of the Interior, succeeding Franklin K. Lane, on March 15, and Payne wrote back to the President counseling him, not to sign it. To use Payne's own terms in telling the story, the bill contained a "joker;" otherwise it was all right. The "joker" was that part giving the Water-Power Commission jurisdiction over the national parks. The President accepted the Secretary's advice and gave the bill a pocket

Experiment to Determine Availability of Schools as Recreation Centers

City and School Officials Will Combine in Test at Ashland Institution—Ellis Case Cited as Indicating Need.

WHETHER the public school buildings of St. Louis are to become neighborhod centers where young and old may go several evenings a week to dance, see games and dramatic performances, hear good music, talk things over and otherwise enjoy themselves, may depend upon the success of an experiment which will be started within a few days at the Ashland School, Newstead and San Francisco avenues, under the joint supervision of the Park Department and the school authorities.

Various attempts have been made, with more or less success, to establish community centers at the school buildings, but this is the first officially conducted experiment. If it proves to be practicable, other centers will be started, and the schoolhouse may, in time, come to be regarded as the natural neighborhod meeting place for people of all ages. One of its advantages, it has been pointed out, is that a good time will be provided at no direct expense except that of maintaining the buildings.

The chief aim in establishing such centers is at once to furnish a place where young people may find amusement and recreation under wholesome conditions, and thus rescue them, as one educator put it, from cheap dance halls and poolrooms; and, also, to extend the influence of the school into the general life of the communities.

Ellis Case Is Quoted.

Percival Chubb, leader of the Ethical Society, chose the incident of the Ellis murder case to point a moral in this connection, remarking that "a social order that can offer nothing better than cheap dance halls for the diversion of its young people will continue to produce young men with razors in their pockets and murder in their hearts."

The same thought had occurred to others interested in education and social service, and the Post-Dispatch reporter who sought their views on the proposition of making community centers of the schools met with frequent allusions to the story of Albert Ellis, the 21-year-old confessed murderer, and its recurring theme of addiction to dance halls.

To return, however, to the contemplated center at Ashland School—William Walters, the principal; Rodowe Abeken, Director of Recreation in the Park Department, and T. E. Spencer, head of extension work in the public schools, are drawing up a plan which will be submitted to Superintendent of Instruction Withers, and set in operation, probably next week.

In general, the plan will conform to the following lines: The school building will be open three afternoons and evenings each week to the public. One night will be given over to dancing by persons of 16 years and over. In addition, there will be games of basketball, volley ball, handball and indoor baseball. Five classrooms will be fitted with chairs and tables for the accommodation of grown people, and here may be held meetings of political, social and other clubs and associations. Here also the neighbors may gather and swap yarns and opinions in neighborly fashion.

Games to Be Supervised.

The afternoon hours will be from 3:30 to 5 o'clock, and the evening period, from 7 to 10. A watchman from the Park Department will be present to protect the building from abuse, and the games will be under the direction of playground directors, all supervised by Prof. Walters, who is a trained social service worker.

Boys and girls alike will participate in the athletic games, and there will be three playrooms for each sex. If enough girls are interested, there will be a class in folk dancing as well as social dancing, where free instruction will be given. It is emphasized that all these activities are open to the public, and are not confined to students or former students. Good behavior is the only requirement for admittance.

Following the meetings at the various schools on election night, at which the Post-Dispatch furnished election returns, the suggestion was made from many quarters that such gatherings should be encouraged, and that the school buildings might be used on a much greater scale for neighborhood assemblages.

John Rush Powell, principal of Soldan High School, said that he had long advocated the use of school buildings as community centers, adding: "I think there is just as much need for such centers in the West End as there is in the more congested districts. It would stop loose street loafing — and worse. With music of the right sort, drama, dancing, properly supervised, and good moving pictures—all for nothing—there is no doubt that such centers would attract young people, and old, too, who are now forced to seek diversion of a much less healthy sort.

Community Bodies Suggested.

"The Patrons' Associations and Parent-Teachers' Organization might very properly take this matter up. It might be well to form community associations for the very purpose of establishing and maintaining community centers, and the Patrons' Association could well set about forming such organizations."

This fell in with the idea of Superintendent Withers, who said experience had taught that such movements would flourish only when supported by spontaneous action on the part of the neighborhoods generally. While the Board of Education is ready to give its aid and furnish such direction as would be required, he was certain that the people in the vicinity of the schools should themselves take the major part in starting and carrying on such centers. When they shall have begun, he said, the school authorities will be prepared to join them.

That community activities at the schools will take hold of the people's interest when properly carried on, has been demonstrated at the Wyman School, 1547 South Theresa avenue, and at the Franklin School, Nineteenth and Franklin. Under the management of the parent-teachers association, of which Circuit Judge Grimm was president, programs of entertainment were given once a month at the Wyman School last year with such success that the school auditorium became inadequate for the audiences that were drawn, and it was necessary to hire a larger hall. As many as 1800 persons attended some of the musical and dramatic performances.

Broad Program in Force.

An even more comprehensive program has been carried out at the Franklin School by the Neighborhood Association, of which Mrs. Catherine Fertig is the director. There, sewing classes, including more than 200 girls, met twice each week. A basketball league containing five clubs, each of which has four teams, plays its schedule there. In addition, there has been taught basket weaving, folk dancing and knitting, and concerts have been given by neighborhood orchestras and glee clubs. Many of those participating in these activities are not, nor ever have been, students at the school.

As for the part taken by the schools themselves, Chubb made a suggestion to circuit the high school plays. It was pointed out that the high schools usually give two plays each year—one at each commencement. To the rehearsal and staging of these plays, students and teachers give a great deal of time and energy. Chubb, whose opinion is given added weight by his former position as president of the Drama League of America, thinks that these plays should be sent around the circuit of the high schools, each school giving two performances of its plays at each of the other schools, one performance for students and one for patrons. Several years ago, Chubb conceived and sug

Travelers Complaining of Remarkable Industry of People in Rebuilding Country —One Town Restored by 1915.

By V. BLASCO IBANEZ.

MOST of the Americans I meet returning from the battlefields of the great war seem to be disappointed. Their first thought on landing in Paris was of the old front. "Show us the Hindenburg line, immediately!" They had read every day for four years about the great things done in the fighting. Their imagination had worked on the impressions thus received and magnified them. In addition it seems that people who come to France from great distances expect the country to exhibit something proportionate to the expense and discomfort of their travels. Anticipation outstrips realities. Ask them how they enjoyed their trips to the front and you get almost always the same answer: "Instructive and interesting, I suppose. But not so much after all." With the result that Americans come to Paris to visit the old battlefields; but they remain to spend their time at the theaters and dance halls of the capitals of Europe.

The fact is that in the two years since the end of the war France has not been idle. I have even heard sentimental tourists protest aloud at the methodical way in which the French are erasing the horrible vestiges of war. Shell-torn ruins, cellar holes of burned houses, ponds made by "Jack Johnsons" and "Big Berthas," fields plowed by the barrages, rusting wire entanglements, criss-crossing trench lines strewn with empty shrapnel cases, abandoned guns, dismantled tanks—how romantic! What a desecration to clean up! Unfortunately for sentiment, and art even, France has got to live. She is not able to survive on the picturesque alone.

French Rebuilding Quickly.

I may go even further. France is displaying a remarkable energy in this work of rehabilitation of the devastated regions. Tourists even of the present moment begin to feel they have come a trifle late to get an ocular impression of the world catastrophe. Those who wait until next year will probably see only such memories of four years of heroism as patriotism has decided to preserve for posterity.

France has more than once been accused of thoughtlessness as to the future; and, in truth, foresight is not a conspicuous French trait. In France as in all Latin countries, everything is postponed till tomorrow. She is habitually satisfied with the present, relying on her ability to improvise at the eleventh hour in case of emergency. No one can deny that as an improviser in times of stress France has few equals. As the old William, father of the woodchopper of Amerongen, used to say: "You've got to throw the Frenchman at the first grapple, or else you won't get him on his back at all. The moment he recovers from his surprise he gets his muscle up and wins in the end."

Changes in "Western Front."

This is just as true of reconstruction as it was of the war. I have just come back from a tour of the famous "Western front." You would be surprised at the dramatic changes two years have made in villages, in architecture, in landscape and even in people.

Enormous automobiles, packed with sightseers, stop at a specified station, and the barker begins his explanation of the great battle: "Here the artillery opened fire, hurling 150,000 tons of projectiles in the space of 30 minutes; think of it, ladies and gentlemen, in 30 minutes."

Well, you look, and you dig into your imagination to evoke the picture. For all you can actually see is a field like any other field, with a few oxen at work, perhaps, or a tractor more likely, getting the ground ready for the next crop.

Cemeteries Disappearing.

The barker orates on burning barns and tumbling houses. You look up and see before you an up-to-date farm establishment, with white-walled structures and red-painted roofs. Not a sign of the old trees, cut off short by artillery fire, with gnarled, charred stubs for branches. They have been chopped down and turned into firewood. So the fences and walls, but yesterday pierced with bullet and shell, have now been rebuilt along with the roads they line. Field cemeteries are becoming fewer and fewer. The identified bodies have been disinterred by the families. Only the graves of the unknown dead, along with a few Germans, remain. You find such tombs entirely surrounded by the growing wheat.

The French farmer respects the dead. On meeting a wooden cross he turns his plow a little to one side. That, however, is for the present. Next year or the year following the cross may have fallen. The cultivator will not spare the unmarked grave. The mound will be wiped out and the memory of it, just as the sleeping hero himself, will be absorbed in the earth forever.

Farmers Work Regularly.

Places may still be seen where the clash of opposing forces was so violent and so long sustained that the traces of battle will be slow in disappearing. You find landscapes that are still desolate, where months of artillery fire have churned the earth-crust to the depths of several yards, mixing loam and rock and hardpan as in a geological cataclysm. Thousands of human bodies have been lost in fragments in such deserts; and the ghosts of the dead seem to haunt the dreary wastes with a sense of weirdness and horror.

But the French farmer does not despair at anything. With limitless patience he has already driven his plow into the barren land which has hitherto yielded only a crop of human bones with pieces of rusty steel. He is bound that some day it shall produce again. The land is his. He inherited it from his father, or his grandfather. Or else he has bought it with hard-earned savings. He is determined to get his money back.

Town Had Been Rebuilt in 1915.

When I visited the Western front for the second time it was just six months after the first battle of the Marne. The year was 1915. A staff officer of the Fifth Army acted as my guide. He was anxious to show me a specimen of villages that had really suffered from the drive on Paris. I remember that our automobile ran along the country roads for the better part of a forenoon. The officer could not find the village he had in mind. His war maps were quite useless. All the old landmarks, buildings, walls, fields, had vanished. "We must find it," he said. "Only a mass of ruins, but picturesque ones; houses cracked in the middle, but, somehow, still standing; towers whittled sharp by bullets and pierced with shells like flutes. And a population of starving cats and dogs."

Finally we came to a pretty town, with excellent houses in good condition, a window broken here and there perhaps, and an occasional shell-torn wall. The officer thought he would ask the way. To our surprise, that was the very town we had been looking for. A half year had been sufficient to bring it back to life from its ruins. You had to look closely to find any traces of the storm that had passed—a ruin on some of the back streets, bullet holes plugged with plaster, shell holes newly filled. The fact was that the French peasants had come back again and taken up their life as usual, though the artillery could still be heard rumbling a few miles off, like distant thunder.

That was a miracle of six months of French energy. Imagine, then, the results of reconstruction over two years.

Much Removed by Souvenir Hunters.

Unfortunately the curiosity of the tourists who have recently been visiting the front sometimes takes a disquieting turn. It seems that many

Irrigation and Water-Power Promoters

WITH MOST PERIL FROM FORMER

Threaten Great Public Park Reservations

Danger That Playgrounds Will Be Defaced by Private Exploitation Is a Real One Which Can Be Turned Aside Only by Aroused Public Opinion.

The Argument of "Utility" Should Not Be Entertained by Congress John Barton Payne Secretary of the Interior Has Pointed Out in Answer.

From the Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON.

A CAMEL that wanted to get warm came up to a tent. It was a small tent, and the occupants drove the camel away. The camel persisted and finally they let him put his nose inside. Before they realized what was happening, the camel got his whole body in and became the sole occupant of the tent.

A witness at a congressional hearing told that story to illustrate what will happen if the camel's nose of commercialism is once permitted to insert itself among the scenic wonders of national parks.

The camel's nose is sniffing covetously at the tent.

The danger that the parks, the playgrounds of the people, will be defaced by private exploitation of their resources does not exist merely in the imagination of the public-spirited organizations and individuals who have lately been warning the country against the threatened encroachment. It is a real danger. Only the pressure of an aroused public opinion upon Congress—assuming that the American people who own the parks really want them kept in all their pristine grandeur of lake and mountain scenery and wild-animal life—can turn the danger aside. It comes from two sources—from irrigation interests and from water-power promoters.

Danger Still Threatens.

Most immediate is the peril from the irrigationists. Last spring a bill was put through the Senate granting certain irrigation "easements" in Yellowstone National Park. So quietly was it done that the American Civic Association, which from its Washington headquarters keeps an eye on legislation affecting the parks, knew nothing of the bill till after it had passed the Senate. The bill was introduced in the House by Congressman Addison T. Smith of Idaho and was favorably reported out by the Committee on the Public Lands. Smith twice failed to get unanimous consent to bring the measure to a vote in the House. He then introduced a resolution calling for immediate consideration of the bill. By this time the conservationists had marshaled their forces, so that when Smith's resolution came on for a hearing before the Rules Committee, a few days before the session closed, they were able to get their arguments into the record against the persuasive contentions of the irrigationists.

Though Congress adjourned without acting on Smith's bill, the danger to the parks was not averted. It was simply postponed. With the prestige of having passed the Senate, the bill is still pending before Congress.

The hearing before the Rules Committee developed fully the opposing cases of those who would use the parks for commercial purposes and those who would preserve them intact, as a rich heritage from nature intended for the whole people, for all time to come. Contemplated in the Smith bill is the creation of a reservoir covering 8000 acres in Falls River Basin, in the extreme southwestern corner of Yellowstone Park. The Yellowstone Lake would be raised by building a dam at the outlet of the lake where it flows into the Yellowstone River, and then the water would be brought over into Idaho for the benefit of the farmers of that section. Smith contended that the water was needed to insure maximum crops in an affected area of about 200,000 acres; that the proposed reservoir site was the only one that could be utilized; that the area intended to be covered was swampy, containing nothing whatever of interest.

Plea of "Utility."

In reply to the first contention, the conservationists made the point that the people who would benefit by the proposed dam (estimated by Smith at about 30,000) were no more entitled to special legislation to protect them against the natural hazards of their occupation than any other farming community, and that, moreover, the water would be needed only about once in every five years. Smith himself had stated that except during dry years the lands were fairly well supplied with water.

The answer to the argument that the water resources of the park are needed for industrial or farming development is best given in the words of John Barton Payne, Secretary of the Interior, who has taken an immovable stand against all efforts of commercial interests to break into the parks.

"The argument of utility should not be entertained," wrote the Secretary recently, "and, indeed, it can nearly always be answered by the plain statement that the water which is sought for reclamation and power purposes does not remain in the park, but may be utilized after it leaves the park. In the case of the proposition to dam the Yellowstone River at the mouth of Yellowstone Lake, this is strikingly true, because the volume of water at the mouth of the lake is less than half of the volume of water outside of the park, due to the fact that the Lamar River, Tower Creek and other streams meantime enter into the Yellowstone River. The only argument I have heard in favor of placing the dam within the park is that it will be cheaper—an argument which in my view should not for a moment be entertained."

THE Federal water-power bill, which passed Congress last spring, after years of controversy, gives the water-power people the right to file claims on falling water in any Federal reservation, whether it be park, monument, forest or cemetery. Quick to take advantage of its provisions, water-power interests have already applied to the Water-Power Commission set up by the bill, consisting of the secretaries of the departments of the Interior, Agriculture and War, for permission to enter the parks with various projects.

Secretary Payne visited the Yellowstone last summer and gave a hearing in the park to irrigation interests that desired to exploit its resources which they would get for practically nothing, rather than pay for water outside the park. He condemned their proposition both on the score of the damage it would do the park and on the practical ground set forth in the above quoted letter.

The statement of the irrigationists that the land which they were seeking is a worthless swamp, seldom visited by tourists, was warmly combated by the conservationists at the congressional hearing. They had the support of Stephen T. Mather, director of the National Park Service, who told the committee that the project would involve not only the damming of Yellowstone Lake itself, but the utilization of two or three other valuable lakes to the west, surrounded by heavy timber, would be largely "swamped out" by the reservoir, he said, and in addition it was possible that Geyser Basins, adjoining Shoshone Lake, would be flooded.

Broaching of the Idaho project, said Mather, had opened the way in other states to an agitation in favor of using Yellowstone Park for irrigation purposes. As an instance, he said that Montana people were arguing that if the waters of the Yellowstone Lake could be drawn across the Continental Divide as proposed in Idaho, there was no reason why the lake should not also be used as a reservoir to benefit the Montana country.

Greater Value to the Public.

"The Yellowstone Lake," said Mather, "is a body of water of 87,000 acres, and it has, no doubt, great possibilities from an irrigation standpoint, but our point is that its value is far greater from the standpoint of the scenic attractions and its recreation possibilities to the whole country, and that there are possibilities for securing these same waters outside."

Prominent in the fight for the parks is J. Horace McFarland, a large-scale printer, of Harrisburg, Pa., the head of the American Civic Association. According to Mr. McFarland, the Falls River Basin, which the Smith bill would convert into a reservoir, is not only not a "worthless swamp," but is in fact one of the most beautiful valleys of the park, with grassy meadows, surrounded in part by high lands from which spring several imposing waterfalls from 130 to 380 feet in height. He described is as a veritable "campers' paradise." McFarland said to the congressional committee that while the irrigationists claimed that only a comparatively small area—8000 acres—would be flooded, as a matter of fact the backwater necessary to form a reservoir of that extent would cover 30,000 to 40,000 acres.

McFarland declared that the Smith bill, if passed, would introduce, for the first time, the element of commercialism purely for private benefit into the national parks, after they had been held for all the people for 50 years. The bill would be, he said, an entering wedge for other projects; one slice of the park after another would be taken, till ultimately the whole park would be an agricultural reservoir. He pointed to Niagara Falls as an example of what follows when the entering wedge—the nose of the camel in the tent—is permitted.

Fourth of Water Gone.

"The first grist mill established along the river up there," said Mr. McFarland, "was just interesting, but now 27 per cent of the water is gone, and the whole of it will go."

Denying the contention of the irrigationists that no profit was sought from the enterprise, McFarland said:

"The farmers organized a corporation, and just as my firm prints for a profit, they farm for a profit. They have 25 subsidiary corporations which are related, and there may be more. It is absolutely for private grant."

The irrigationists assert that their project would not mar the beauty of the park. In answer to that the conservationists tell the story of Jackson Lake, Wyoming, just outside the park. Jackson Lake, with the Teton Mountains back of it, was rated one of the four or five finest scenic gems in the United States. Irrigationists dammed the lake. The result is that when the water, accumulated from the melting snows in the spring, is drawn off in the summer, Jackson Lake is left surrounded with unsightly mud flats half a mile in width. William C. Gregg of Hackensack, N. J., a manufacturer of railway equipment, was out there in the summer of 1919 and took some pictures, which he showed to the congressional committee to indicate what would be the fate of Yellowstone Lake if the Smith bill were allowed to go through. Gregg pointed out that the water is drawn off and the Jackson Lake slope covered with mud and debris at the very time that thousands of people go to the nation's great recreation grounds to enjoy their own.

"I could not see the Teton Mountains, although they rise to a height of 6000 feet, for the mud flats in front of me," said Gregg. "It was more repulsive than anything else. I am making this point to absolutely negative the statement that you can develop lakes (for irrigation purposes) so that during the tourist season the American people will enjoy seeing them."

Congressman Smith replied that the utilization of Jackson Lake had increased the population of Idaho by more than 100,000 and resulted in the development of towns and cities and great sections of country.

Would Establish Fair Balance.

"We must establish a fair balance between the interests of the whole people and the interests of that little section out there," retorted Gregg. "What is the money value of Jackson Lake? Fifty million dollars will not recompense the State of Wyoming for the damage that is done there. In Europe you can see the Jungfrau and the Matterhorn, while here you can see the Teton Mountains. Now, those people over there would just as soon think of committing suicide as to drain Lake Lucerne, so that when men got there in the summer time, bringing in lots of money, they would see mud flats instead of a beautiful lake."

The other danger to the parks arises from the desire of water-power interests for free sites.

The Federal water-power bill, which passed Congress last spring, after years of controversy, gives the water-power people the right to file claims on falling water in any Federal reservation, whether it be park, monument, forest or cemetery. Quick to take advantage of its provisions, water-power interests have already applied to the Water-Power Commission set up by the bill, consisting of the secretaries of the departments of the Interior, Agriculture and War, for permission to enter the parks with various projects.

As long as the personnel of the commission stands as at present—Secretaries Payne, Meredith and Baker—no such permission will be granted. What the conservationists fear is that the policy may be reversed under the incoming administration.

"You must not come into the parks," is the way Secretary Payne, in a talk with the writer, phrased his attitude toward all commercial interests seeking to turn the national playgrounds to their private gain.

"The whole purpose of the parks is to preserve forever the natural Western life of our country, with its scenery and its wild animals, that people may have a place where they can go and appreciate what generous nature grants," said Secretary Payne. "Encroachment upon the parks tending toward their commercialization must be resisted to the utmost."

The "inside" story of the President's delay in approving the water-power bill was told to the writer by Secretary Payne, and is here printed for the first time. At the time of the delay it was merely announced that the President was holding the bill "for further consideration."

Following the ordinary routine, the President sent the bill over to the department most concerned for its opinion. It went to Payne, who had become Secretary of the Interior, succeeding Franklin K. Lane, on March 15, and Payne wrote back to the President counseling him, not to sign it. To use Payne's own terms in telling the story, the bill contained a "joker;" otherwise it was all right. The "joker" was that part giving the Water-Power Commission jurisdiction over the national parks. The President accepted the Secretary's advice and gave the bill a pocket

City and School Officials Will Combine in Test at Ashland Institution—Ellis Case Cited as Indicating Need.

WHETHER the public school buildings of St. Louis are to become neighborhod centers where young and old may go several evenings a week to dance, see games and dramatic performances, hear good music, talk things over and otherwise enjoy themselves, may depend upon the success of an experiment which will be started within a few days at the Ashland School, Newstead and San Francisco avenues, under the joint supervision of the Park Department and the school authorities.

Various attempts have been made, with more or less success, to establish community centers at the school buildings, but this is the first officially conducted experiment. If it proves to be practicable, other centers will be started, and the schoolhouse may, in time, come to be regarded as the natural neighborhod meeting place for people of all ages. One of its advantages, it has been pointed out, is that a good time will be provided at no direct expense except that of maintaining the buildings.

The chief aim in establishing such centers is at once to furnish a place where young people may find amusement and recreation under wholesome conditions, and thus rescue them, as one educator put it, from cheap dance halls and poolrooms; and, also, to extend the influence of the school into the general life of the communities.

Ellis Case Is Quoted.

Percival Chubb, leader of the Ethical Society, chose the incident of the Ellis murder case to point a moral in this connection, remarking that "a social order that can offer nothing better than cheap dance halls for the diversion of its young people will continue to produce young men with razors in their pockets and murder in their hearts."

The same thought had occurred to others interested in education and social service, and the Post-Dispatch reporter who sought their views on the proposition of making community centers of the schools met with frequent allusions to the story of Albert Ellis, the 21-year-old confessed murderer, and its recurring theme of addiction to dance halls.

To return, however, to the contemplated center at Ashland School—William Walters, the principal; Rodowe Abeken, Director of Recreation in the Park Department, and T. E. Spencer, head of extension work in the public schools, are drawing up a plan which will be submitted to Superintendent of Instruction Withers, and set in operation, probably next week.

In general, the plan will conform to the following lines: The school building will be open three afternoons and evenings each week to the public. One night will be given over to dancing by persons of 16 years and over. In addition, there will be games of basketball, volley ball, handball and indoor baseball. Five classrooms will be fitted with chairs and tables for the accommodation of grown people, and here may be held meetings of political, social and other clubs and associations. Here also the neighbors may gather and swap yarns and opinions in neighborly fashion.

Games to Be Supervised.

The afternoon hours will be from 3:30 to 5 o'clock, and the evening period, from 7 to 10. Boys and girls alike will participate in the athletic games, and there will be three playrooms for each sex. If enough girls are interested, there will be a class in folk dancing as well as social dancing, where free instruction will be given. It is emphasized that all these activities are open to the public, and are not confined to students or former students. Good behavior is the only requirement for admittance.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

A Tribute to Wilson.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Now that the struggle is over, let us bury all our rancor and cease to fight President Wilson. Let both parties unite in doing him honor and giving him Godspeed from his high office. He is a very great American and did his best for his country and the world. He is a man of conviction and stern purpose. He is very honest and his intentions were the best. He is great but not perfect. Let us unite in making his last hours in the White House pleasant and agreeable, and send him on his way with the best wishes of the American people. He will go down in history among the greatest Americans. He will rank with Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln.

Let us cease our rancor. Let us begin to honor him. Let us remember his health was broken for us. I am a Republican but I respect him. I know greatness when I see it. I know good intentions and high ideals. Yes, he has faults and his mistakes may be evident after the event. I will always honor him. I would like to see him leave the White House amid the plaudits of both parties. Forget the petty errors of four years. Remember all the good he did. Remember he is honest and great and has a stainless character. Let him leave the White House honored and respected by friends and enemies.

Men and Women Voters

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I suggest in future elections separate voting places for the women, with women clerks and judges. This would solve the voting problem and also enable us to ascertain for whom and what they voted. Or else have two days of voting—one for the men and the other for the women.

SUGGESTION.

The Housing Problem.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

On the subject of "Renters' Home-Buying Association," offered by "A Renter," in your Nov. 3 issue, while the plan proposed for distributing homes by lot seems rather uncertain, your correspondent has hit upon the crux of the housing situation. More than 500 or 1000 renters are now putting $10 a month or its equivalent into the purchase of unimproved real estate in outlying undeveloped areas, hoping by so doing to some day acquire a home. The process is so long and the chances of ever realizing their desire so remote as to be negligible. If one-half the money now tied up in wasteful and useless land speculation, could be diverted into legitimate home building companies operating on modern efficient lines, such as other successful businesses, the home shortage would be at an end, and homes might be made available in some way even to the renter who can afford to pay $75 a month, but cannot corrall $750 all at the same time.

Incidentally the city would be relieved of a tremendous waste of half improved streets and premature extension of water, lights and other utilities.

Overworked Janitors.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

There is an ordinance compelling owners of apartments to keep same at a temperature of 70 degrees from 6 a. m. to 10 a. m., and 60 degrees from 10 a. m. to 6 a. m. A large majority of owners have but one man to attend to this. How can one man keep up this perpetual heat without the proper sleep? I think it is an outrage on the owners' part to endanger the lives of his tenants by expecting one man to carry on this duty of perpetually firing a boiler or furnace without the proper rest. Supposing a boiler explodes and some of the tenants get killed or injured while a janitor or fireman happens to fall asleep after overworking; whose fault is it—the janitor's or the owners'?

SAFETY FIRST.

Clean Up the City Hall.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Now that we have turned out the State House gang let us lay plans to turn out our City Hall gang in spring, 1921. A change in city administration is badly needed.

Candy Still Too High.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Sugar has been going lower and lower for several months, but not a sign of a lowering in the prices of candy, and it's plain the candy men hope to maintain the present high prices until after Christmas holidays, when they will have their coffers full, then they may condescend to come down off their high horse. Let's act now and show them the consumers are the great regulators of such things. We have a full month before the holidays to teach them the same lesson we taught others of their ilk. Let us all desist from eating candy until they decide to fix their prices where they belong. With an increase of 12 pounds per person in the annual consumption of candy there is earnings enough for them at a smaller profit.

We hope your good paper will help us make it possible for the poorer children to have candy for Christmas.

THE SECOND ANNIVERSARY.

Thursday, Nov. 11, was the second anniversary of Armistice Day, but except for a brief tribute of silence, St. Louis postponed observance until today, so that the ceremonies might be held without conflicting with the day's work. The country generally has adopted the plan of a Sunday memorial.

It is gratifying to note that our Board of Aldermen has declared Armistice Day a legal holiday for the municipality. The ordinance is supplemented with an excellent resolution reciting the profound interest and importance of the event, of the day and its significance to America and the world. The action of the Aldermen should be followed by similar action by Congress and the State Legislatures.

Today's ceremonies will bring together again men who met as final a test in as supreme an issue as history records. America's part in the world war was an epic part. In proud truth and simple justice it may be said that in all the calendar of human valor and stark endurance and knightly fortitude there is no parallel for the 47 Meuse-Argonne days between Sept. 26 and Nov. 11, 1918. There were other grim days and grim tests, too. The Marne, the Ourcq, the Vesle, St. Mihiel, Cantigny—they are all sanctified with the blood of our youth, all woven into the fabric of American memory, pride, gratitude and obligation. But in the Meuse-Argonne our American soldiers were called upon, as the modest Pershing has said, to "deliver the decisive blow."

Mostly those American soldiers were boys to whom but a little while before war had been a vague legend or a schoolroom lesson. Their lives had run along the bright ways and calm traditions of peace. Yet when the summons came they swung gallantly, even jauntily, into a more dreadful night than Dante's imagination ever traveled. As told in what has been called the best of American war books, they marched through "a bleak, cruel country of white clay and rock and blasted trees, gashed into innumerable trenches and scarred with rusted acres of wires, rising steeply into clawlike ridges and descending into haunted ravines, white as leprosy in the midst of that green forest—a country that had died long ago and in pain."

That was their service, and with that service the day's work was not permitted to interfere.

The Post-Dispatch believes that the day's work should not be permitted to interfere with the adequate and deserved commemoration of that service. Nov. 11, 1918, marked the triumph of this nation's idealistic crusade against war. In that crusade the whole nation was enlisted. If there is a day in the whole year with a perfect title to a national holiday, it is that day.

In reverence to those that have gone before, those that follow after should remember this day to keep it holy. It should be consecrated to the cause of peace.

A SOLDIER OF FORTUNE.

A man employed in a Montana smelter has quit his job. It seems that while serving in the army of Uncle Sam this hitherto unknown hero accumulated $300. Did he, when mustered out, squander his savings on a near-silk shirt and a couple of gaudy neckties? Not he. With the foresight that ever accompanies thrift, he invested the money in one of our most beguiling insecurities, namely, oil stock. He is now worth $150,000, and as his train thunders eastward Montana's glimmering landscape fades from view.

The incident, it is supposed, will stimulate activity in what was once Mr. Rockefeller's favorite pastime—the oil game. Certainly, the gentlemen determined to make us rich quick, unless they have entirely lost their cunning, will seize upon this vindication of their theories with right good will. They will find in it inspiration for new theses of persuasion, and many who have been hesitating will soon be lost.

But there is another facet to this experience which may be gazed at briefly. In the drums and tramplings of the late war about all the flags that float were represented. But in what army, other than our own, did any private soldier multiply $300 into $150,000? Indeed, in what other army did a private soldier, regardless of his luck at cards, or his mastery of the vacillating dice, ever acquire the original $300?

Until that question is answered, may we not assume that at least in one respect the Wilson administration's conduct of the war was not so colossally incompetent as some of our illustrious pacifists are wont to imply? That, we contend, is the query inserted into the campaign by this soldier of fortune.

LOBBYISTS WHO MENACE PEACE.

The charge of Robert Pesqueria, representing President Huerta, that Washington swarms with lobbyists who neglect no resource in misrepresentation and fabrication to cause friction between the United States and Mexico is entirely credible.

The technique of lobbying at the national capital has changed much since the old intriguing "third house" was broken up in the early part of Mr. Wilson's first administration. The former personnel has very largely been replaced with new men of fresh methods. None, of course, is a vulgar "lobbyist" any more. Few would confess to representing any particular company or interest. They are merely the officers of commercial associations and federations of high-sounding names.

For instance, it would be hard to find a lobbyist for any big oil company. But if such oil company had interests needing promotion at Washington, the promoting would be industriously attended to by the secretary or general manager of some national body of exporters or bureau of organized manufacturers or alliance of financiers or dealers. And these secret secretaries or general managers are just as energetic and insistent as the old lobbyists; also just as "insidious" and generally pestiferous.

A menace to the peace of the country is found in these men who try in ingenious ways to stir up trouble with Mexico. If they are as active and confident under this administration, whose friendly attitude toward Mexico is well understood, what would they be under an administration of different and less beneficent aims toward that country?

LEAGUED WITH THE G O. P. FOR WHAT?

The same causes that were operating in Missouri explain in part the 20,000 plurality obtained by Mr. Harding in Oklahoma, but there was another potent influence. The Republican party down there entered into a hard-and-fast fusion with the Socialist party. Chairman Campbell of the Democratic State Central Committee estimates that of the totals representing the full fusion vote, the Socialists furnished at least 75,000.

With progressives and standpatters, Leaguers and anti-Leaguers, liberals and reactionaries supporting the ticket, what a congeries of diverse and incongruous elements united to give the result which is called a glorious Republican victory! The platform and Mr. Harding declaimed against Government participation of any sort in utility service, but in North Dakota, its ticket captured by the Nonpartisan League, Republicanism meant not only advocacy but practice of the fullest sort of such participation.

In New York the Republicans kick out of the Legislature its Socialist members with insult and even incidental violation of all notions of popular government. In Oklahoma they fuse lovingly with the Socialists to elect a President and a United States Senator who may be depended on to complete the scrapping of the peace covenant.

The question is not how the Republican administration is going to satisfy all these elements of opposing views and aims. To satisfy them is impossible. Gratification for one means displeasure to another. The real question, with factions that agree only to disagree and opposing convictions that tend to neutralize one another, is how very much can be accomplished in the way of clear-cut action without continual compromises that satisfy nobody. How long after the victory will it be before these discordant elements, like the Balkan allies, will be fighting among themselves?

The fusion, of course, is going to make trouble for Republicanism. But what kind of Socialists are those in Oklahoma, who could unite with that same Republican party which in Wisconsin, in New York and elsewhere fused with the Democratic enemy for a purpose it regarded as transcending all others in importance and patriotism—the defeat of Socialist principles and candidates?

Perhaps they think that Mr. Harding will pardon Mr. Debs. How do they know that he has not given pledges not to pardon him to the great body of Republicans who think that Mr. Debs got just what he deserved and that he ought to remain where he is indefinitely?

LANDLORD RAPACITY AT WASHINGTON.

The condition at Washington that caused Senator Kenyon to suggest the removal of certain bureaus and departments to other localities is a continuing one. The rapacity of landlords who prey on Federal officers and employes reached its most intensive form during the congestion of the war, but is present at all times in some injurious degree and is now the cause of great hardship. Removal for a number of departments would be attended by advantages much more important even than escape from extortion.

Though it might be argued that a location midway between the two oceans would be helpful to the Navy Department, the superiority of such location would hardly seem to justify removal from Washington. The State Department should, of course, remain within convenient access of Congress and the executive and as long as the chief court sits in Washington, the Department of Justice should also be there. In Washington, also, the Labor and Commerce Departments will for a long time find fairly convenient headquarters not far removed from the industrial and business centers of the North and East.

But, as Mr. Kenyon says, the War Department would function as well in interior headquarters and it would, besides, escape the vitiating political atmosphere of the capital. Who can deny that the Postoffice Department, escaping also that political atmosphere, would not function more economically and better, say in St. Louis, where it would be only 1800 miles distant from the most remote postoffice, than in Washington, away off on one side of the continent? And would not the Agricultural Department find it profitable to change its location to the center of the great farming areas of the West, where the interests within its jurisdiction could be dealt with at close instead of long range?

The sound idea of locating different departments in a natural environment where congestion will be avoided, was first advanced during the war. Nothing came of it then, but its wisdom is growing on the people. Action on it may be delayed, but action will come some day.

WAITING AT THE PORCH.

JUST A MINUTE

Written for the POST-DISPATCH
by Clark McAdams

THE CRUCIFIXION OF WILSON.

A STATESMAN to conviction true—
Self-poised, upstanding in a fight
For that which seemed to him the right—
A Puritan to common view.

As master of the ship of state
His course was laid by Polar star,
Unmindful of the rocks that bar
Success in plans supremely great!

In treaty-making, wise or ill,
The Senate may deny consent
To measures not to its content
And thwart the presidential will.

Thersites there with venomed snarl
Attacked the covenant of peace,
The pact to cause armed strife to cease—
The means to end the nation's quarrel!

From every source malicious hate
Appeared, its calumnies to vent
On him whose energies were spent
In work war's horrors to abate.

Who saw the truth on high, afar,
With vision of new time to come
When every war-voice will be dumb,
And shines, at last, the Morning Star!

The factious rage, the open sneer,
Betraying every brutish phase
Of unenlightened human ways
Could not in him inspire fear.

He touched the highest note the world
Has ever heard from Nation's head,
His word through all the earth was spread
And evil from its seat was hurled.

Quite human, but serenely strong,
His fate is that of everyone
Who breasts the tide, as it has run,
To win the world away from wrong!

He lacked in suppleness and guile—
A rocky crag that holds the snow
Where lingers last the daylight glow,
Bends not to trick or threat or wile!

He sank beneath the blow on blow
From enemy and faithless friend
To whom his conscience could not bend—
And fought the fight to keep it so!

Mistaken views grief often brings,
In human life, but Time forgives
The foible of a mind that lives
To help the race to higher things.

The crucifixion of a soul
Through envy, ignorance or hate
Exceeds the body-anguish great
Of one who dies at such a goal!

Fit souls thus find their Calvary—
The Wilson fame shall not know death,
He stands with him of Nazareth,
The Prophet-soul of Galilee!

A beacon high on shore of Time
The light will flash far o'er the sea
To guide and bless humanity—
Great martyr to a cause sublime!

Recipes for cooking that 'possum sent to us by a friend in Mississippi continue to come in with every mail, but we have not cooked it yet. We want to know all that is known on the subject, and shall not move until the returns are all in. It looks at this time like a landslide for boiling the 'possum until it is tender and then baking it with sweet potatoes around it.

It is going to be flattering to be invited in by Mr. Harding as a best mind.

It would be interesting to know what Col. George Harvey thinks comparatively of the satisfaction of having made Mr. Wilson President and then being completely revenged upon him after they had quarreled. The Colonel has had these experiences in their fullness. He shared the undisputed credit for having brought Mr. Wilson out of obscurity into fame. He was, too, the bitterest of Mr. Wilson's enemies through the fight on the peace treaty. Exceeding in his bitterness even Senator Lodge, the Colonel must have got more satisfaction out of the election than anyone else. Which was the richer experience? The Colonel is something of a philosopher, and we dare say he can tell us. If so, then we can get at some comparative notion of whether we enjoyed more giving the world an ideal or subsequently renouncing the ideal. In other words, do we get more satisfaction out of base things than we get out of fine things? The Colonel had a good deal to say when he discovered Mr. Wilson. He must have enjoyed the part of Warwick. We doubt if he finds revenge as sweet. Possibly he does. If he does, then there isn't much hope for us. If we derive our greatest satisfaction from what is unworthy of us, then the same thing is the matter with us that has been the matter with us through the thousands of years in which we have been at each other's throats. It would encourage most human idealism to have the Colonel say that he enjoyed his first part best. However, we have not seen anything in his weekly indicating that he is very likely to say anything of the sort.

Neither party will want to be in power when we have another war. Mr. Bryan was the wisest of the Democrats. He saw war coming, and resigned. Had he not done so, he would have been kicked out at the polls. The war made an object of detestation out of every member of the Government, which we are disposed to regard as a sign that people are sick of war. If they are, they must first despise its heroics and then turn upon its beneficiaries before we can expect them to engage in any comprehensive scheme for peace. We must recall that nothing has been done to the profiteers. Only the Democrats, who ran the war for us, have been punished. Judging by the way they have been punished, too, there will be a thorough job done when the people get to the profiteers.

THE GHOST.

I SPEAK, and walk, and talk and smile,
I do my work, I go my way,
I even seem to laugh today,
But it is seeming, all the while.

To move and speak is not to live;
To eat and sleep is yet to die;
Like other ghosts, my phantom life
Is slipping by.
You live! You live, because you love,
Life pulses through you warm and red,
But I am dead.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by the leading publications, newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

THE HOME ASSISTANT.

From the Survey.

THE Young Women's Christian Association has elaborated a set of standards intended to aid in the development of the "home assistant." This is a part of the attempt which has been continued a number of years to put domestic service on a more rational basis. It is common observation that young women prefer industrial and commercial work to employment in homes even though better wages and more healthful and varied work may be obtained in domestic service. The reasons found by inquiry for this preference were the length of hours exacted and the undesirable social status of the home worker. During the war the old-fashioned servant more or less disappeared in many sections of the world, and accordingly it became urgent to discover a social equivalent. For that reason the Y. W. C. A. has given emphasis to its plan for the home assistant. The organization suggests that women be employed at domestic work on the eight-hour day and 44-hour week basis. This means one entire day and a second half day free each week. Legal holidays or the equivalent and a paid vacation are a part of the plan. The home assistant does any work required with the exception of heavy laundry but sleeps and eats away from her place of employment, pays her own carfare, uses the front door, does not wear a uniform, and is called by her last name and title. The association suggests that the minimum wage fixed by the District of Columbia Minimum Wage Commission October, 1919, at $16.50, be used as a current minimum wage standard.

OUR TRADE WITH THE FAR EAST.

From the Omaha World-Herald.

WHILE the international commerce of the far East doubled in value during the period 1914-1920, its trade with the United States increased sixfold in the same period. Its shipments during and since the war have increased greatly, not only in quantity but also greatly in price. The proportion of its total imports that are taken from the United States has been constantly increasing. In the year before the war its buyings from us were under $200,000,000; in the fiscal year 1920 they ran up close to a billion. And our buyings from the far East, which the year before the war were about a quarter of a billion, have now gone up to over a billion and a quarter. In no part of the world have American tradesmen made such a gain. With the rehabilitation of the European nations it is hardly to be expected that we can continue the same rate of gain, but there is every reason to suppose that the volume of business will continue growing and with the development of the Oriental nations no one can imagine what it will ultimately be. The Orient alone can furnish many of the commodities for which there is an increasing demand in this country—for food purposes, vegetable oils, tea, coffee, cocoa, sugar, spices, rice, tapioca, fruit and nuts; in raw materials, silk, hemp, India rubber, gums; in manufactures, silk, textile matting, jute bagging, laces and embroidery. In exchange we send manufactures and foodstuffs.

"THE LITTLE ENTENTE."

From the Living Age.

THE Little Entente continues to engage the nervous attention of Western Europe. According to a dispatch in the weekly edition of the Manchester Guardian, the three allied Powers, Czecho-Slovakia, Jugoslavia and Rumania, are courting the adhesion of Austria—and what is more important of Germany—to their agreement. Indeed, despite the reassuring color given to the drift of international relations in Europe by American correspondents and press dispatches, there seems to be a growing possibility that the line of fracture between the allies and their open or covert opponents will run west of Italy and Holland.

MOST WOMEN buy their first Madame Grace Corset because of its dainty appearance and the improved style lines apparent as soon as the corsetiere tries on the model adapted to her figure.
But they buy the second, and third, and all succeeding Madame Grace Corsets not only for style and daintiness, but because they have discovered a real wearing value that is built into every part from boning to supporters.
Prices range from $3.50 to $15. Front-lace or back-lace, whichever you prefer.
Sold by stores which emphasize Value.

When your feet ask for Arch Preserver Shoes!

AT NIGHT when you go to your room, hurrying to get off your shoes so that your poor, tired feet may get relief, then is when they are asking for ARCH PRESERVER SHOES. For when you wear these wonderful shoes your feet do not tire needlessly, and do not annoy you. You will realise a new foot vigor—more than mere comfort!

Yet ARCH PRESERVER SHOES are modish—offering you every desirable shape you wish. You are always well dressed in ARCH PRESERVER SHOES.

No Indian Maiden ever had greater foot comfort than You can have in these stylish Shoes.

THE Indian maiden walked with her feet on the ground. That is the way nature planned. But style demands heels, and heels mean the raising of the rear of the foot off the ground. By affording a firm "foot length" support the ARCH PRESERVER SHOE simply "raises the ground with the foot."

The height of the heel doesn't matter. With this support your foot will not complain against any style. The ARCH PRESERVER SHOE combines natural comfort with good appearance. And of course the ARCH PRESERVER SHOE offers relief to feet that are weak and troublesome.

Write us if you cannot be conveniently supplied and name of your nearest dealer will be sent you.

The Parliamentary Law Class has been continued this season under the instruction of Mrs. Zimmer, meeting on Thursday mornings.

A reception to the artists of St. Louis will be given by the Art Section of the Monday Club, Mrs. T. P. Hornsby, chairman, at the clubhouse Monday evening. Paul Berdanier will be the speaker.

The marriage of Miss Rebecca Tucker and Phil Silberstein of 4540 Newberry terrace took place Nov. 7 at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. I. Tucker, 1239 South Broadway. The ceremony was followed by a reception. The couple will reside at 4127 Lafayette avenue.

VALUE OF SCHOOLS AS RECREATION CENTERS TO BE DETERMINED

cessfully carried out a similar plan in New York schools.

He recenty visited new high school buildings in New York, which are fitted with complete little theaters, in which not only students, but former students who have shown marked dramatic ability, are encouraged to develop their talent. A similar arrangement is being carried on in Los Angeles.

Superintendent Withers said that all the high schools had auditoriums suited to such productions, particularly Soldan and Cleveland, where the seating capacity and the stages are especially large. He said the objection might be made that circuiting the plays would take too much of the pupils' time away from their school work, but thought some suitable arrangement might be made. He reiterated the point that the demand for such activity must come from the people themselves, perhaps through the patrons' organizations.

Cost Question Considered.

It will cost something to keep open the school buildings several nights a week, and the taxpayers are the ones to decide whether the desire is great enough to justify the expense. It costs about $50 extra to keep a high school open one evening, he said.

Principal Douglas of Central High also was doubtful as to the advisability of taking any more of the pupils' time away from their school work, although admitting that they no doubt do spend much time in social activities foreign to school that could better be spent under the school's influence. However, he was in no doubt as to the demand for community centers, and was satisfied that school buildings were the proper place for them. He was willing to give up some of his own time to making the proposition a reality.

Principal Miller of McKinley High felt the same way about it. He pointed out that most of the schools have moving picture projecting machines, and that the Board of Education can obtain, for nothing, interesting educational films from the Government educational bureaus at Washington.

"There are a lot of young people who have to quit school and go to work," he said. "In the community center they could get some of the instruction and some of the school pleasures which they are entitled to, but have been denied by circumstances."

Election Crowds Example.

The gatherings on election night strikingly demonstrated the real need of a neighborhood center, Principal Maddox of Cleveland High said. He was much impressed by the good effect of getting the adults of the community together in a school building. Young people in that vicinity already had taken advantage of the excellent auditorium at Cleveland, and frequent requests are received from clubs for permission to give plays there. Prof. Maddox had found that in such cases those in attendance were mindful of their obligation to take good care of the building, and little trouble of that kind had been experienced.

The two main questions raised by those who were asked for opinions were: First, who will supervise the community center activities; and, second, will the people take them seriously and attend in large enough numbers to justify their establishment?

As for the first of these points, those who made them instantly agreed that the joint supervision of the school authorities and the Park Department should meet all requirements. In case so many centers should be established as to outnumber the directors at the disposal of the Park Department, Mrs. Louis Brooks, head of the Board of Religious Organizations, said that the board has a class for training just such directors, and that 29 women now are enrolled in it. They would be available for that work, she said.

Assemblies Draw Well.

Mrs. Fertig of the Neighborhood Association and Prof. Maddox answered the other question. Mrs. Fertig said an experience of several years at the Franklin School center had shown that the center would attract as many young and old people as it could accommodate, the limit to the number being fixed only by the ability to take care of them. Prof. Maddox, who was in contact with the Wyman School entertainments, said they had proved that, if properly managed, community enterprises had virtually unlimited drawing power.

The experiment at Ashland School, therefore, will be watched with great interest by those who hope to see the schools soon become not only the cultural, but also the social centers in their respective spheres of influence. Furthermore, as one university teacher pointed out, the taxpayers likely would be more willing to spend money for school buildings if those buildings were a source of enjoyment and education to them, as well as to their children.

$50,000 Sought for Negro Orphanage.

A movement to raise $50,000 for an orphan home for negro children will be launched at 4 p. m. today at the Pine Street Y. M. C. A. Dr. W. H. Geistweit, pastor of the Third Baptist Church, will speak on "A Man's Job," and a chorus of girls will sing.

Frank L. Williams will direct the campaign, and Mrs. Annie M. Malone, who gave $10,000 toward the erection of the Pine Street "Y," will be president. It is proposed to raise the greater part of the funds among the negroes.

Bishop Nulsen to Preach Today.

John L. Nulsen of Zurich, Switzerland, Methodist Episcopal Bishop of Northern Europe, will preach this morning at 11 o'clock at the Memorial M. E. Church, Accomac street and Jefferson avenue.

It's Easy To Put On Flesh

All you have to do if you are too thin and want to put on several pounds of solid, "stay-there" flesh is to take a five-grain tablet of Blood-Iron Phosphate with each meal. This builds up the nervous system, enriches the blood and thus enables the vital organs to assimilate the flesh-building strength-making elements of your food which now largely go to waste. Folks who have tried it state they not only put on flesh, but that it also almost invariably increases their strength, energy and endurance. You can get enough Blood-Iron tablets for a three weeks' treatment of Judge & Dolph, Wolff-Wilson, Johnson Bros., or any other druggist for only $1.50, and it's so uniformly successful that your druggist, a man you know, is authorized to refund your money if you don't like it. Better get a package today and begin to get stronger and healthier, as well as better looking.

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed with Sulphur It Brings Back Its Beautiful Lustre at Once.

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks streaked, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully; besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural color is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

New Scalp Drill Helps Grow Hair

Try It Yourself in Your Own Home 15 Days at My Risk—It Must Prove Itself!

People who are worried sick about their hair falling out, who are getting bald, getting gray, who have itchy, scaly dandruff, will be glad to hear of a wonderful new idea for the hair and scalp by which a compound is drilled into the scalp until it vanishes, giving life and nourishment to the hair roots and follicles. It is an entirely new idea, simple, sane and scientific, and you do it all yourself in your own home.

It is none of the old-fashioned greases, no alcohol, massage machine, vibrator, suction cap, drug store tonics or X-Ray. The quickest way is to send your name and address to the Aymes Company, Dept. B-18, 1060 Washington Av., New York. Try it 15 days at my risk. Prove it in that short time. Hair can be stimulated to new and stronger growth. The scalp can be put into such a sanitary, healthy condition that hair will stop falling out. The itching will stop overnight, dandruff completely vanish.

There is no risk on your part, so write me at once to try it 15 days.

AMERICANS FINDING THEY ARE REACHING WAR ZONE TOO LATE

people, otherwise honest enough, cannot resist the temptation to steal when a collection of curios is to be filled out.

On my recent trip I passed through Verdun, where the war took on a specially harrowing and tragic aspect, and which for that reason is most frequented by visitors. I was everywhere met by officers quite willing to speak their minds on this matter of souvenir hunting. The result of such abuses, they told me, has been that the subterranean forts which held out so desperately against the Germans have ahd to be closed to the public. The early sightseers carried off everything that could be moved down to the electric light bulbs, which, in the first weeks, had to be replaced over and over again every day. It was useless to advertise the fact that the lamps had just been brought on from Paris. The curiosity-hunters were bound to have at least one authentic memento of the historic place.

The Field of the Bayonets.

But the worst plundering, which amounts to a criminal desecration, has been in the so-called "Field of the Bayonets," one of the strangest and most tragic curiosities left by the war. Doubtless many will remember the story: a company of 30 French soldiers holding a trench under a storm of German artillery fire. In expectation of a charge, the men had fixed bayonets to be ready for the hand-to-hand encounter. But suddenly a heavy shell struck the ground in front of them, burying the men alive and converting their trench into a tomb. The 30 bayonets, with the ends of the guns, were left protruding above the ground. Well, thousands of tourists have visited the place in recent months; and in spite of the vigilance of the guards, now one bayonet would be stolen, and now another. At present few, if any of them, are left. Only the mouths of the gun barrels are left to mark the spot of the pathetic tragedy. It is hard to picture a person so eager for a curio as to pull at the end of a gun, of which the stock is held in the hands of a corpse, a nameless hero who perished in a noble cause. But it seems that some human beings are capable of any meanness.

Needless to say the "Field of Bayonets" is no longer open to the promiscuous public.

Peasants Hit Hardest.

The French peasant suffered from the war more than any other class in the population. During the first year of the fighting the factory workers were at the front; but later they were sent home to man the shops. The country people, on the other hand, fought the war through. And yet the peasant seems to be the one who forgets it first. What memories he has may be painful enough, but they are growing vaguer and vaguer each day. The peasant is interested in the present in the life of the soil which he owns.

The French peasant in general works his own property. That is why revolutionary socialism, however successful its propaganda may be in the big cities, makes no headway with the masses in the fields, 90 per cent of whom own something. Ever since the Revolution put the French farmer in possession of his farm, he had been faithful to the republic and to democracy, ill disposed, also, to laugh at any jokes on the subject of private property. The land is almost an object of worship to the French peasant. The affectionate devotion with which he nurses his plot of ground is something hard for anyone else to understand. While this passion has a great social significance, for the country, it at times runs to absurd extremes.

Anecdote of Land Owner.

At the beginning of the war, so the story runs, the French were fighting a heavy battle against the Germans along the frontier of Lorraine. One division saw fit to occupy a granary, where it held out for a whole day. The farmer, however, refused to leave the building. It belonged to him, and, strong in his property right, he would not be ousted save by due process of law. All day long he watched the fight from the interior of his barn, seeing men fall on every hand, while the shells were plowing up his wheat fields and breaking down his hedges. His wild verbal protests did no good. In spite of his threats to have the law on the two riotous gangs that were spoiling his year's work, the show went on. At nightfall the French retired before superior numbers. But this also the peasant could not understand. He ran out into the rain of bullets to stop a man on horseback much as a hotel keeper would interfere with the departure of a guest trying to beat his bill. "Look here, sir," he exclaimed, "this is not the way to do business. Here you fellows have been doing just as you pleased around my farm, all day long. And now you think you are going to leave without saying even thank you, eh! No, sir! You've had your fun, and now you pay. To whom shall I send the bill for the damage you have done?"

The anecdote, true or false, is characteristic at least of the French peasant.

Battlefields will have small chance of surviving the persistent, matter-of-fact eagerness of such people to restore the land to their former cultivation. The best days of the Hindenburg Line, from the tourists' point of view, have already passed.

MENACE TO PUBLIC PARKS FROM WATER POWER INTERESTS

veto. Then Senators Jones of Washington and Walsh of Montana went to Payne and begged him to withdraw his objection, saying that the measure was essential to Western development. Jones promised that if the bill were allowed to become law he would introduce in the next session of Congress a bill to repeal the obnoxious provisions. Payne, moreover, received the assurances of congressional leaders on both sides, among them Congressman Mondell of Wyoming, the Republican floor leader of the House, that the repeal bill would be passed. He thereupon withdrew his objection and the President signed the bill.

"Until March 4 at least," said Payne, "there will be no water-power projects in the parks. I introduced a resolution in the commission to entertain no such projects, and it was passed unanimously."

Not long ago a delegation of Western Congressmen visited the Secretary and asked him to approve their plan for a survey of one of the national parks, looking to its utilization for irrigation purposes. Payne refused to assent.

"If I approved this survey," he told the delegation, "the project you have in mind would be brought out with the statement that I indorsed it."

"But," objected the delegation, "the acting Secretary who followed Secretary Lane approved the survey."

"Your argument is thoroughly convincing," said Payne. "It convinces me that I should have been here sooner."

To the interviewer, Secretary Payne spoke a good word for the American Civic Association, whose purposes, "to make American communities better places in which to live and to conserve natural scenery,' he heartily indorsed. The association has 2500 members, from all the states of the Union, and claims, through their affiliated organizations, to represent 5,000,000 people. Among the members of the Executive Board are Mrs. Philip N. Moore and George E. Kessler of St. Louis.

Secretary Payne has given his personal word to the association that neither will the Water Power Commission approve any power projects in the parks while he is a member, nor will he as Secretary of the Interior give his indorsement to any raids by irrigation promoters.

The association, however, will not rest content till Congress takes the "joker" out of the power bill and formulates a definite policy to protect the parks under all conditions against such incursions by irrigationists as that contemplated by the pending Smith bill.

Meantime, it is appealing to the public to help shoo away the camel.

NO POKER CHIPS FOUND IN RAID ON DENTIST'S HOME

Marion Yount and Seven Guests, Arrested Oct. 23, Were Discharged in Police Court.

Policemen at 10 o'clock Saturday night, Oct. 23, raided the home of Marion Yount, a dentist, 4209A Arco avenue, and arrested Yount and seven guests on a charge of gambling.

In police court Monday, Oct. 25, it developed that the raid was made by the gambling squad because of an anonymous letter and Judge Ittner declared that the writer of such a letter was "a contemptible puppy." The eight men were discharged, policemen being able to testify only that they found money and cards on a table.

The Post-Dispatch, in its issue of Sunday, Oct. 24, telling of the raid, erred in saying that poker chips were found. The written police report stated that a deck of cards and $1.50 were seized and held as evidence.

St. Louis Station Sets Record for Peace-Time Enlistments.

Eighty-four men were enlisted in the navy last week at the local recruiting station, Seventh and Chestnut streets. This is a record for peace-time enlistments. Former navy men who have been out of service less than a year may be reenlisted and rank as having been in continuous service.

A campaign is in effect at navy recruiting stations to complete the personnel by March 1, 1921. The Atlantic and Pacific fleets sail on a foreign cruise in June. The period of training at all training stations has been reduced from four months to three months in order to handle the increasing number of recruits.

"THE BELLS" TO BE GIVEN BY PAGEANT CHORAL SOCIETY

New Choral Symphony to be Presented Nov. 30 Is Based Upon Edgar Allan Poe's Poem.

The orchestral score of Rachmaninoff's choral symphony, "The Bells," which is to be given on Nov. 30 at the Odeon by the Pageant Choral Society, has just arrived in this city from Copenhagen. The composer made two copies of the score, one of which, at the outbreak of the war, was in the hands of a Leipsic publisher. The other was lost by Rachmaninoff in his flight from Petrograd, following the revolution. It was feared for a time that the work was lost altogether, but a copy turned up in the Danish capital.

"The Bells" is based upon Edgar Allan Poe's poem, and will be presented with the co-operation of the symphony Orchestra. Rossini's "Stabat Mater" will be the other work on the program.

REALTY ACTIVITIES SLOW ON DIVERSE VIEWS ON VALUES

Many Buyers for Apartments, Flats and Combination Buildings, but Price Agreements Are Difficult.

AGENTS AWAITING EASING OF MONEY

Real Estate Exchange Actively Promoting Cause of Law Revision to Remove Handicap From Business.

By Berry Moore.

While a confident feeling pervades real estate circles, the volume o transactions is at a comparatively low stage, due principally to diversity of opinion as to values.

There is no dearth of buyers for apartments and flats, nor for combination business buildings in th residential district, but it seems difficult for buyers and sellers to reach an understanding as to prices, which are predicated on rentals. Whil rentals have been increased from 50 to 75 per cent in the majority of instances during the last two years, the increase reflects, or exemplifies, only operation of the law of supply and demand, and the demand has been such that the supply has been well-nigh absorbed.

With construction more or less in abeyance, it is only fair to assume that the situation will not be altered materially in the near future. According to close observers, owners realize this fact and, obviously, are content to retain their holdings, especially with rentals at the maximum and with practically no vacancies to reduce annual earnings.

Supply and Demand Far Apart.

When it is suggested that sooner or later prices of building material and of construction are destined to come down, with the result that construction will be resumed on an unprecedented scale, the answer is that it will be a long time ere supply and demand have been counterbalanced. Meantime the advance in rentals is sufficient to absorb any inflation or advance in sale prices, it is pointed out, with special reference to apartment buildings and flats. Any building in the next two or three years, it is declared, will only provide for the normal growth of St. Louis, not taking into consideration the industrial expansion of the city, which recently has received great impetus, and which will add thousands of residents to the city.

According to Jack Dubinsky of Goldwasser & Dubinsky, the biggest handicap to the real estate business is the mortgage tax laws, involving as it does double taxation, in that it imposes a tax on the owner of the property for its full value, as well as on the holder of the mortgage or deed of trust thereon for the entire amount of the loan.

Movement for Sane Law.

Fred G. Ziebig of Cornet & Ziebig, is in the forefront of a movement to have this law replaced with one providing for a recording fee for mortgages or deeds of trust. It is sponsored by the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange.

With a loosening of money rates renewed activity is looked for in the real estate field, according to Edward L. Bakewell. As a matter of fact, the scarcity of funds for real estate at reasonable rates has retarded operations in this field of activities. Incidentally, Bakewell is offering $250,000 at 6½ and 7 per cent on first gilt-edged deeds of trust. Before the stringency set in there was an abundance of money available at 5 and 6 per cent for St. Louis real estate, and even at 4 and 4½ per cent on well situated downtown property.

Demands for Homes Well Met.

The demand for homes has been well met, and transactions in buildings of this character are beginning to lag. There are, however, comparatively few dwelling available or remaining for buyers, owing to the record absorption of the last two years, while not a few houses have been withdrawn from the market, the owners in these instances dodging remote chances of finding other places.

Substantial sales have been concluded by the Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co., Edward L. Bakewell, Cornet & Zeibig, Giraldin Bros. Real Estate Co., J. M. Levy & Co., J. I. Epstein, Benjamin Altheimer & Bro. Real Estate Co., Eugene Altheimer, and other leading real estate concerns, but filing of deeds has been delayed due to the fact that investigations of titles have been slow, due to an accumulation of such work.

The Mercantile Trust Co. is concluding two deals which involve the erection of large manufacturing plants in St. Louis, but until all details have been arranged particulars will be withheld.

A Big Land Deal.

A. R. Schollmeyer, in conjunction with Harry E. Prettyman, is concluding a deal for a large tract of land in the outskirts of University City, having plans for its subdivision into lots for immediate sale. The tract forms one of the attractive sites adjacent to the city for high-class homes.

CAR COMPANY BUYS TRACT FOR PLANT IN EAST ST. LOUIS

Site, Half Mile South of Free Bridge, Comprises 145 Acres—Locomotives and Cars to Be Rebuilt.

The East St. Louis Locomotive and Car Co., recently organized under the laws of Illinois, with a capital of $5,000,000, yesterday completed the purchase of the Pitzman-Kehr tract of land on the East Side, one-half mile south of the Free Bridge, on which to erect a plant in which to repair and rebuild locomotives and railroad cars.

Robert W. Crawford of Chicago, president of the company, said last night the plant will employ 5000 workmen. He said that the East St. Louis site was selected after a thorough investigation of locations offered in various sections of the territory bounded by New York, Chicago, New Orleans and Kansas City. The negotiations have been in progress for some time.

Crawford is a mechanical and civil engineer, and has given his attention for some time to building, rebuilding and repairing railroad equipment.

145 Acres in Site.

The site comprises 145 acres, and is one mile long. It ranges in width from 900 to 1600 feet. On one side is the Terminal Railroad Association's belt line, on another side is the Alton & Southern belt line, and the Mobile & Ohio Railroad tracks pass the property.

"The site is sufficiently large to meet the needs of the company for at least 50 years," Crawford said.

"We purachse such a large tract in order to be able to expand as necessity demands. Surveys are to be made immediately, and the construction work will begin soon. We expect to spend $1,000,000 during the next 12 months. The first unit built will be a plant for the repairing and rebuilding of wooden and composite freight cars. The second building will be for the rebuilding of steel underframes for wooden cars, the third will be for rebuilding and repairing all-steel cars, and the last plant will be for the rebuilding and repair of locomotives.

Contracts Already Accepted.

"We have ample contracts for the first class of work, rebuilding and repairing wooden and composit freight cars, to keep us busy for a long time. We have been offered contracts for the repair of locomotives, but have declined them. In making my investigation I found that the majority of locomotives in this district are now repaired at Houston, Tex., and that the freight alone on each locomotive is $1000. This will show what a saving can be made by a plant here."

The ground was purchased from Josephine E. Methudy and Julius Pitzman, the latter a civil engineer, as trustees, both of St. Louis. For the convenience of St. Louis and East St. Louis residents the company has entered into an agreement with the St. Louis, Columbia & Waterloo Railway Co., to extend its tracks to the plant, and operating direct from Third street and Washingon avenue, over Eads Bridge, through East St. Louis, for a 13-cent fare between the plant and St. Louis, and a 7-cent fare from the plant to any point in East St. Louis.

Crawford said the company will receive financial assistance from Chicago and the East, and a St. Louis firm will handle the company's securities. Electricity to operate the plant will be obtained from the Keokuk power plant.

REALTY EXCHANGE NEAR MEMBERSHIP GOAL

More Than 100 Added to Actives and Large Increase in Active-Associate Class.

The St. Louis Real Estate Exchange has almost reached its goal of 1000 associate members, and during the drive has obtained more than 100 active and a larger increase in the active-associate membership.

"The Real Estate Exchange is taking its place as the most important business organization in the city," said James P. Blake, president of the John S. Blake & Bro. Real Estate Co. "In Kansas City, Detroit, Chicago, and other large cities the Real Estate Exchange is the leader in all activities for the development and betterment of a city's wealth. The St. Louis exchange has always played an important part in the development of the city.

"The service of real estate agents to property owners and to tenants alike has never been of greater importance than at present, when the shortage of homes and dwellings calls for the adjusting differences between owners and tenants.

"The exchange was active in the municipal bond campaign, and also in the recent election, working for the $60,000,000 good roads bonds and the new State Constitution.

"Plans are being formulated to organize a State Real Estate Exchange for the interest of both city and rural property holders."

BAPTISTS BUY SITE FOR ITALIAN CHURCH

Mission Congregation to Have Ample Institutional Facilities at 10th and Carr Streets.

The St. Louis Baptist Mission Board has purchased the property at the southeast corner of Tenth and Carr streets. The Rosenbaum-Hauschulte Real Estate Co. represented the Northwestern Trust Co., the owners. The recorded consideration was $100. The lot is 50x132.6 feet, and contains a three-story building and a two-story residence.

The purchasers are to provide a building there for the First Italian Baptist Church, which was organized in 1913, but has occupied rented quarters at Ninth and Carr streets. The pastor is the Rev. A. Pascuita.

In addition to the Italian work, the Baptists will continue the day nursery, daily vacation Bible school and other institutional work. When the interior decorations are completed an afternoon Sunday school will be opened. At present the pastor and two women missionaries are employed for full time, but it is expected to greatly increase this force.

On the North Side an efficient mission is maintained at the Fourth Church, Thirteenth street and Sullivan avenue, and on the South Side at Tabernacle Church, Twelfth and Barton streets. This work is under direction of the St. Louis Baptist Mission Board, of which J. P. Graham is president and the Rev. S. E. Ewing secretary.

16 LOTS IN WEBSTER GROVES SOLD IN LESS THAN TWO WEEKS

James C. Morfit placed on sale 16 lots of 50 feet each and two lots of 100 feet each, on the south side of Woodlawn avenue, in Algonquin Park three weeks ago and sold all of them in less than two weeks.

Algonquin Park is between Helfenstein Park and Sherman Forest in Webster Groves. All improvements have been made. Some of the lots are to be improved by the purchasers without delay.

Morfit is also agent for the remaining unsold lots in Algonquin Park. He reports that there are only five unsold lots in Helfenstein Park.

EAST ST. LOUIS AUTOMOBILE BUILDING SOLD FOR $30,000

The two-story automobile building at the southwest corner of Seventh street and Division avenue, East St. Louis, was sold by David Bailey of Edward L. Bakewell's office, for Louis Cella of St. Louis, to E. J. Krause, represented by R. Vernon Clark. The reported consideration is $30,000.

The building will be occupied by the Callahan Motor Company as salesroom and warehouse for Dodge automobiles, for which the company has the district agency.

$100,000 CHURCH FOR WEST PARK BAPTISTS

Architect's Plans for Structure Approved, and Raising of Money Will Begin at Once.

The West Park Baptist Church has adopted plans for completion of its $100,000 building at 5944 Easton avenue, and will shortly undertake the financial campaign with a view to construction in the spring. This is preparation week to be marked by a series of conferences and prayer meetings.

The new building will be semi-classical, filling the 100 feet front of the lot. The present structure is to become part of the completed plant. The new rooms include an auditorium 50x60 feet, with balconies and side rooms giving seating capacity for nearly 1100 persons. Space is also planned for a chorus choir of 60 voices, and a large pipe organ.

Below the main auditorium there will be an assembly room with about 600 seats, with a stage on which to produce entertainments. It will also be used for banquets, and there will be attached a dining room for small groups, and social rooms, the latter especially fitted for boys and young men, and for girls and young women. Space for double bowling alleys is allowed, also for dressing rooms and showers convenient to the gymnasium.

On the main floor there will be reception parlors, clubrooms, church office and pastor's study, and large airy rooms for cradle-roll, beginners and primary. These rooms surround the auditorium and can be thrown into it when extra large audiences require. A similar plan makes the junior Sunday school rooms on the second floor become possible balconies on three sides of the auditorium, by opening sound-proof partitions. There are 30 classrooms, varying in size from 10 to 30 by 40 feet, and a rest room, equipped for emergency use as a hospital room, and a room for mothers and babies.

The auditorium will be finished in pressed ornamental brick with white stone trimmings and dark woodwork. The light will come entirely from above. The night lighting will also be indirect. The floor will have an adequate dip so that a speaker can be seen from any part of the room.

Harry W. Jones, the architect, has made a specialty of building churches for 25 years, having built hundreds of them and now is architect for the First Baptist Church of Canton, China. J. E. Hutchinson is chairman of the Building Committee. The pastor, the Rev. P. G. Van Zandt, came to the church in July, 1919, after a year in Y. M. C. A. service during the war. He is a graduate of Pomona College, Cal., Columbia University, New York, and the University of Chicago.

The West Park Baptist Church grew out of a Sunday school organized in Wellston in 1893, the founder being William B. Harris of 5864 Ridge avenue. The church was organized in January, 1904, with the Rev. Cecil V. Cook as pastor and 179 members. The membership now is nearly 600.

LEASES ON WASHINGTON AND LUCAS AVS. AND LOCUST ST.

A lease has been negotiated by the Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co. with Hykins, Friedman & Co., manufacturers of ladies' wearing apparel, for the fifth floor of 700 04 Washington avenue. The lease was for Henry Horwitz.

Martin-Breitt also leased 4000 square feet of space in the building at 2206 Locust street to the United Shoe Machinery Co. for the State Tire Co.

Another lease closed by Martin-Breitt was to Shucart Bros. Book and News Co. for 328 North Grand avenue, a part of the United Cigar Stores Co. corner. The Cigar Stores Co. leased the entire corner and divided it into five storerooms.

WORLD SOCIALIST MEETING

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 13.—The Socialist party of the United States will participate in an international conference at Berne, Switzerland, on Dec. 5, according to announcement from party headquarters here today. The conference was called by Socialist parties of England, Germany and Switzerland with a view to suggesting modifications of the Third (Moscow) Internationale organization.

At its convention here last year, the Socialist party of the United States voted to apply for admission to the Moscow Internationale, with certain reservations. The application to the Moscow executive committee has never been acknowledged. Delegates of the parties which called the conference and a delegate from America will confer with a Moscow representative at Berne in the hope of removing certain of the internationale provisions which these parties will not accept. The American delegate has not yet been named.

BETTER TONE IS NOTED IN BUILDING INDUSTRY

Marked Tendency Toward Better Labor Conditions Feature of Situation, Straus Says.

A somewhat better tone is indicated in the building industry by reason of tendencies toward a more stabilized labor situation. It is stated by S. W. Straus of S. W. Straus & Co. The people of the nation are becoming aroused to a consciousness of the widespread need of thrift, he says, and adds: "Not only have we reached a place where there is manifest unwillingness to tolerate increases in the cost of living, but there is an indicated appreciation of the fact that thrift of time, as well as thrift of money and of all other forms of material wealth, is essential. The tendency toward better labor conditions, which comprises one of the outstanding features of the building situation, may be taken as the manifestation of a growing appreciation of thrift as a stabilizing necessity.

"These conditions should not be accepted as indicating an immediate resumption of pronounced activity in construction work. There is no improvement of consequence to be noted in actual building operations, and at this season of the year it cannot be expected. However, there are reasonable expectations that the ensuing spring building season will open with considerable activity.

"Shifting conditions still prevail in the price of building materials, and it would seem to be the part of wisdom to maintain a cautious and careful policy with regard to cost tendencies. Basic economic conditions should not be lost sight of. Stocks of merchandise which are being sacrificed must be replenished, high taxation will continue for some time, the tremendous amount of financing that has been in recent months on a basis of high interest rates must have its effect on commodity costs, and there is a shortage of many commodities, particularly building of all descriptions Current tendencies, therefore, must be analyzed on a basis of these fundamental conditions, and too much emphasis should not be placed on conditions that may prove to be only temporary and from which there may be a reaction."

BUILDING OF THEATER HALTED TILL $318,000 LOAN IS REPAID

Agreement Formality Necessary Because of Extended Plans for Structure at Grand and Lucas.

Construction of the 15-story Missouri Theater apartment building at Grand and Lucas avenue has been temporarily halted as the result of an agreement signed by the Mercantile Trust Co. and the Missouri Theater Co. and filed with the Recorder of Deeds.

The agreement provides that no more work shall be done on the building until the theater company repays a loan of $318,000 which it negotiated with the trust company, June 25, 1919.

The first floor of the building, occupied by the Missouri Theater, was completed last week, and work on the upper section was begun when it was pointed out that the loan made by the trust company was based on a plan for the erection of a theater building only. Later the apartment building idea was conceived. One provision of the agreement made at the time of the loan was that no part of it was to be advanced until the trust company had satisfied itself the amount would complete the building.

Jerre B. Moberly, real estate loan officer of the Mercantile Trust Co., explained that the agreement was part of a plan to readjust the financing of the apartment building and that work on the building would be resumed probably next spring.

He said that such a formality as the agreement was necessary in the event that any litigation should result from the erection of the building. The agreement points out that $18,500 of the loan has matured and notes for that amount been canceled.

PASTORS TO STRESS WORK NOW AWAITING RED CROSS IN EUROPE

Dr. Farrand Says Problem of 11,000,000 Orphans Overshadows All Others.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—The uncompleted work of the American Red Cross in Europe will be emphasized in sermons that will be delivered in churches throughout the country tomorrow, which has been designated as Red Cross Sunday, Dr. Livingston Farrand, chairman of the Central Committee of the Red Cross, said today. Thousands of ministers are expected to discuss the organization's relief work and to urge the public to continue to support it.

Dr. Farrand, who recently returned from Europe, said he considered the problem of re-establishing the 11,000,000 orphans of the war-stricken nations on a basis that will assure their future usefulness toward Europe's economic welfare as overshadowing all others faced by European countries today.

BUSINESS PROPERTY FOR SALE

the investment of money in real estate—its safety.

Your January surplus funds can be wisely invested in real estate of the character of 214 Chestnut st.; substantial four-story business building, lot 32x117; this building is in the block east of the subtreasury site and has many advantageous developments in its zone for comparative valuations.

Two real bargains; N. W. cor. twenty-first and Washington, S. E. cor. Market and Eighth. Be pleased to discuss details with interested, responsible individuals or corporation. The development in the vicinity of the corner of Twenty-First and Washington av. make it a most attractive possibility.

Market street is due to make a forward step. 718 Market st., store and rooms above and tenant property in the rear, present income a taxpayer. See us about price and prospect.

This is a bargain for some small manufacturer. 1317-19-21 North Ninth; two-story brick building, 82.6x127; formerly occupied by Manley Carriage Co. Price cut to bed rock for quick sale.

Salisbury, N. W. corner 11th, is a busy spot; stores and buildings rent up to the limit. S. W. corner rents now very low. Lot 140x74, and improvements must be sold to close an estate. Priced $32,500, but make an offer. Pay about 11% net.

A good buy on South Broadway—2710-12 South Broadway. Stores and flats, always rented; a building good for twenty years; rents $2040. Investigate and invest.

Gasoline dealer, the N. E. corner of Hickory and 12th sts., at the cut-off, ought to be a good location for you. Lot 57x98; old building can be easily remodeled to suit your purpose.

Grand av. grows in value and especially in districts. New corners like Grand and Gravois. 3415 South Grand av. is a very substantial residence, with a large lot, 125x140. Its time for development is now. Priced reasonable. Will trade for other income property.

YOUR LAST OPPORTUNITY—In Central Alberta and Saskatchewan are rich park lands—open prairie ready for the plow, interspersed with trees, which afford excellent shelter for stock. Here grain growing, dairying and live stock raising are being carried on successfully. The country is ideal for mixed farming. The Canadian Pacific Railway is offering a large area of these fertile lands in Lloydminster and Battleford districts. This fertile land will become the home of thousands of prosperous farmers. A man can soon become independent on a farm in this district. These lands can be bought now at an average price of about $18 per acre. You pay down 10 per cent. If land is purchased under settlement conditions, no further payment of principal until end of fourth year, then 16 annual payments. Interest is 6 per cent. M. E. WASTE PAPER COLLECTIONS BY PUBLIC SCHOOL PUPILS 494,181 Pounds Taken in During First Quarter of This School Year.

Public school pupils collected and took to school 494,181 pounds of waste paper during the first quarter, which ended yesterday, according to Stephen M. Wagner, in charge of waste paper collections. This amount represents an average contribution of 4.94 pounds for each of the 100,000 children attending the schools. If the rate established during the first quarter is maintained for the rest of the year, approximately 2,000,000 tons of paper will have been salvaged. Last year the total amounted to 858 tons, from which a net profit of $17,308 was realized.

The plan of taking old newspapers and magazines to school was instituted several years ago. The proceeds are credited to the Teachers' Benevolent Annuity Association, which aids those who retire after long service and relieves members temporarily in need.

A five-ton automobile truck had been purchased by the association to take care of the increased paper collections. The new truck will be placed in service tomorrow.

'HELLO,' ST. LOUIS GIRL REPLIED TO MAN'S 'HELLO;' AND THEY WED

New York Police Sergeant and Bride, Former Miss Amy Lange, Living at Waldorf-Astoria.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Police Sergt. Charles A. Hill is back riding his horse in Central Park and is living at the Waldorf-Astoria with his young bride. He has found living at the Waldorf-Astoria cheaper than living in an apartment. Yesterday the Sergeant was riding along the bridal pahts of the park. A reporter hailed him: "Well, Sergeant, how does it seem to be living at the Waldorf-Astoria?"

"My wife and I hunted this town over for a place to live," he said, "and, not having a gold mine, decided it it would be cheaped to stay at the Waldorf. Even if it does cost us $10 a day, we do get our money's worth. Believe me, the money they ask for apartments these days makes the 'Charge of the Light Brigade' look like a walk."

"How long are you going to stay at the Waldorf?"

"Oh, I guess till about the fifteenth. We've found a place in Central Park West and it looks like we are going to take it."

Before the war Sergt. Hill was a Detective Sergeant, attached to the personal staff of former Mayor Mitchel. He served through the war as a Captain in aviation corps, in charge of student aviators. After the war he was sent to San Francisco for duty, and stopped off at Salt Lake City to see the sights. There he got into a bus to go about the city and sat by an attractive young women. She looked good to him, so he said: "Hello!"

"Hello!" she responded, and smiled. They swapped names and addresses, and the young woman turned out to be Miss Amy Lange of St. Louis. They corresponded and saw more of each other. The result was their marriage on Oct. 1, in St. Louis. Sergt. Hill was attached to President Wilson's retinue during his trip through the West in the interest of the League of Nations.

WIDOW AND SON OF MISSOURI FARMER ACCUSED OF MURDER

Indictments Said to Have Resulted From Alleged Indifference When Body Was Found in Well.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CASSVILLE, Mo., Nov. 13.—What was taken by officials to be indifference on the part of his family to the supposed murder of John McCormick, a farmer, led to the indictment and arrest yesterday of the widow, Mrs. Mary McCormick, 45 years old, and her son, Sheridan, 15, on a charge of murder. McCormick's body was found Nov. 3 in a well on his farm, two miles south of Monett. The accused are held in jail here in default of $10,000 bond each.

McCormick's head bore two long gashes when the body was found, and officials suspect he was killed by a blow on the head with a club. The skull was slightly fractured. An analysis of the viscera showed no trace of poisoning.

Domestic trouble, officials have learned, existed for some time.

Mrs. McCormick has been declared to have shown slight emotion when told of her husband's death and to have displayed, in the view of some persons, indifference at the funeral. Sheridan McCormick did not attend the funeral, spending the day working with a horse he was training. Two other sons, Amos and Raymond, attended the funeral.

The McCormick farm house burned last October, and the family had been residing in Monett while McCormick was preparing to rebuild the home. McCormick was 54 years old. He had been in ill health for some time. His property consisted of a 60-acre farm valued at about $12,000. It was willed to him by his father, Joe McCormick, and upon John McCormick's death was to go to the latter's children.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Admiral Coontz, chief of naval operations, will witness the first joint maneuvers of the Atlantic and Pacific fleets in Panama Bay and off the South American coast early in January, Secretary Daniels said today, adding that if possible he also would be with the fleets at that time.

More digestible, says the U. S. Children's Bureau about evaporated milk

Read the opinion of the U. S. Children's Bureau, recently given to the Mothers of America:

> "Evaporated milk (if used when the can is first opened) is a safe food, because it is free of all germ life. It resembles in this point boiled milk, and, like it, is superior in point of sterility and also in digestibility to pasteurized or raw milk, since the digestibility of both the fat and casein is probably increased by the exposure of the milk to high temperature in processing." Quoted from "Milk, The Indispensable Food for Children,"—published by the Children's Bureau of the U. S. Dept. of Labor in The Care of Children Series.

Libby's Evaporated Milk is a fine, pure milk that you can trust in the nutrition of your children. To begin with, it is simply rich, country milk. Then Libby evaporates half the moisture from it—but nothing is added, nothing else removed. Every step of the process is under the watchful eyes of Libby experts.

Futhermore, Libby's Evaporated Milk is safer than boiled milk, as it is commonly boiled, because boiling does not always insure a perfectly sterile milk while the Libby process does.

Order Libby's Milk from your grocer today. You will find it as pure and perfect a product as human intelligence can provide.

In sad but loving memory of our dear husband and father, Herman D. Abrahams, who departed this life one year ago, Nov. 13, 1919:
One year has passed since that sad day
When the one we loved was called away;
And oh, how sudden was the call!
If we had been with you at the last
And held your dying hand and heard the last sighs from your heart,
I would not feel so bad.
Sadness often comes o'er us, tears in silence often flow.
A smile on our face, still a heartache, aching and longing for you.
Sadly missed by his WIFE AND SON.

Dearest Charles, how we miss you,
Since from earth you passed away;
Sad our hearts, but sweet the memory
As we think of you each day.
When the sun is slowly sinking
And the evening shadows fall,
And we gather around the fireside,
Then we miss you most of all.
Sadly missed by parents, sisters, brothers and all who loved him.

In loving memory of my beloved daughter and our dear sister, Agnes Connolly, who departed this life 11 years ago, Nov. 12, 1909:
My heart in deep sorrow returns to the day
As memory recalls how death bore you away,
And left me in tears, in grief and in woe,
When I stood by your bed, 11 years ago.
Eleven years, with all its changes, since death strangely bade us part;
But, my child, all these changes cannot take you from my heart.
Gone in the best of your day, blighted in womanhood's blown,
Gone from a heart that loved you, to sleep in the silent tomb.
Sadly missed by
MOTHER, BROTHER AND RELATIVES.

In loving memory of our darling son, Julius Rutledge, who departed this life two years ago, Nov. 18, 1918:
Sadness often comes o'er us,
Tears in silence often flow
For memory keep you ever near us
Though you left us two years ago.
We know that you are happy now
In a mansion of the blest,
Those that think of you today
Are the ones that love you best.
Those that saw you in your casket,
Pure and white, an angel so fair,
Thought you were the like of heaven
As you lay so sweetly there.
Earth has lost its look of gladness,
A shadow on my life is cast,
For life without dear Julius
Is not the same as in the past.
My life is full of sadness,
My eyes are dimmed with tears,
You left me, dear Julius,
On the dark side of the sea.
But I am waiting God's summons,
Which will call me home to thee.
Sadly missed by
FATHER, MOTHER, BROTHER AND SISTER-IN-LAW AND ALL WHO LOVED HIM.
Written by his mother, Jennie Rutledge.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

As we have no information bureau, it is impossible to answer queries by mail or telephone. Query for Sunday must be mailed a week beforehand.

MACK.—President Wilson is not a Mason.

M. B. L.—Jack Dempsey and Fred Fulton never met in St. Louis in a boxing bout.

T. H.—The patronage at the disposal of the Governor of Missouri was given in full in the Post-Dispatch of Nov. 7.

A. C. R.—Names of the publishers may be obtained from books and sheet music. Address the Copyright Office, Library of Congress, Washington, D. C.

P. D.—You refer to the St. Albans Episcopal Church, 4315 North Grand avenue, of which the Rev. F. G. Williams is pastor. Services are held on Sundays, both morning and evening.

D. F.—Article 2 section 1, paragraph 6, of the Constitution of the United States provides: "In case of the removal of the President from office, or of his death, resignation or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the Vice President, and the Congress may by law provide for the case of removal, death, resignation or inability, both of the President and Vice President, declaring what officer shall then act as President, and such officer shall act accordingly until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

A. Z.—The following is an excellent recipe for chocolate fudge: 2 cups sugar, 1 cup milk, 4 tablespoons cocoa (or 2 squares of chocolate), 1 level tablespoon butter, ½ teaspoon vanilla. Mix the ingredients well in an aluminum pan or skillet and place on the fire, which should be a low steady heat, and allow it to cook until a drop forms a soft ball in cold water. Then remove from the fire, add vanilla, and beat constantly until it reaches a consistency which will readily harden when poured on a buttered platter. Let stand until cool and then cut into uniform squares.

J. B.—Thanksgiving day was a day first set apart by the Plymouth Pilgrims in 1621, in acknowledgement of their first harvest in America. This custom was perpetuated in many states by an annual festival appointed by the Governor. National celebration of the day in recognition of the year's blessings was first recommended by a proclamation issued from the city of New York, October, 1789, by George Washington, who set Thursday, Nov 26, of that year, for observance. It was first recommended as a recurring festival in October, 1863, by the proclamation of President Lincoln, who set the last Thursday in November as the day of thanksgiving, and that has been annually observed ever since.

L. N.—The quotation to which you refer is found in act 5, scene 5, of Shakspeare's "Macbeth," and is as follows:

"Tomorrow and tomorrow and tomorrow,
Creeps on this petty pace from day to day,
To the last syllable of recorded time;
And all our yesterdays have lighted fools
The way to dusty death. Out, out, brief candle!
Life's but a walking shadow; a poor player,
That struts and frets his hour upon the stage,
And then is heard no more: it is a tale
Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, Signifying nothing."

LEGAL INFORMATION.

(Prepared by a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

A. T. K.—Your present marriage is illegal.

ANXIOUS.—If the mother marries again the compensation for the child does not stop.

READER OF P.-D.—Sue them for trespass for stretching the wire across your property.

ELECTION.—Consult the Building Commissioner at the City Hall concerning the license.

P. W. J.—It is your duty to keep up one-half of the division fence on both sides of your property.

MIKE.—The marriage of a person divorced in Missouri, taking place eight months later, in Springfield, is legal.

M. C. A.—Your deed to the property is all right if you can prove the man had not been divorced from his first wife.

W. F. W.—If the party to whom you intrusted your property, which was lost, has any property, you can recover your loss.

GREEN.—The tenant can move upon paying the rent for the 30 days, if he gave notice of his intentions to move upon making the payment.

HELD UP.—A Justice of the Peace usually charges whatever you wish to pay for performing the marriage ceremony. Legally they can charge $1 and the cost of recording the license and return.

C. SMITH.—Under the circumstances you describe the husband would get one-half and her relatives one-half of all property in excess of $7500. If the estate is less than $7500, all of it would go to the husband.

CURIOUS.—To effect a common-law marriage there must be a present agreement between a man and woman, neither of whom is then married, to live together as husband and wife, and they must actually live together as such, under this agreement. No ceremony is necessary, and no license is required.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS.

(Answers prepared by a physician of authority. Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses or treatment of individual cases will not be given. Questions that cannot be publicly discussed, if showing evidences of sincerity, will be answered when accompanied by stamped envelope.)

MOTHER.—A person while unconscious cannot, of course, feel pain or discomfort.

H. M.—We do not know the standing of the Chicago School for Nurses. If you will write to Dr. John Dill Robertson, Health Commissioner of Chicago, you can, no doubt, get the information you seek.

MR. J. K.—Syrup of pepsin is harmless and may be used if it gives the desired effect. In such a condition as you describe it would be well to have an examination made. The description suggests the possibility of an ulcer.

EARL.—Whether or not your prostatic trouble could be cured depends on the condition, that is, whether it could be cured without removal. The gland can be safely removed. You do not state your age. In old men trouble of this kind is very frequent.

R. W. BADEN.—Unless the hair is falling as the result of some scalp disease, which can be corrected, there is not much hope of saving the hair, although it may be delayed in falling. If there is a scalp disease it should be treated. Keep the hair clean by washing and brushing. Massage the scalp for 5 minutes night and morning, moving the skin freely over the skull, and end by rubbing with the finger tips moistened with vaseline. Sage and sulphur would do no damage. Your ear trouble needs examination and treatment by an aurist. Such conditions cannot be self-treated.

"LAMP US" (not vamp). Ours is the "Way Down Street" of way-down prices. If this "means anything to your young life," where you can "doll up" and look prosperous at "little or no cost to you," "play our way today." We are working on all our "six cylinders for you now." Everyone in life must have some "incentive," some "goal to reach," something to look "forward" for, to go ahead, to rise, to be prosperous. You can reach it all if you don't go around looking "down and out." For 10 years we have "helped the under dog" to "keep his head above water and looking prosperous" at "all times" we have driven "home" that "saving and prosperous looking habit," to thousands of people, "dressing them up" at little or no cost to them. Buy our uncalled for clothes; "start anew;" we are "calling you." What you save when you spend your dough is your profit. Install the "Abrams System" of clothes buying and save. We have in "store" for you high-class suits; you can afford to wear two or three suits a season for the price of the customary one by purchasing our uncalled-for garments from our cleaning department; garments are tailor-made and from the best manufacturers; $10 to $20. Can you wear 34, 36, 40, 46 to 50 sizes? Also English and plain models. Vests, 50c; pants, $2 to $3.95; coats, $5 to $10; uncalled for Stetson hats, 95c to $1.50. Open Sundays until 6 p. m. Society Wardrobe Exchange

Announces its weekly sale of men's and women's slightly worn garments, Monday and Saturdays, from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. 3109 S. Grand av. (c7)

"OH, BOY," talk about that high cost of living. "there's no longer any danger of handling soiled money; not even a germ can live on it now." It now "Becomes our duty" to inform you that the "crash to high prices has come." All these "high-price merchants" will certainly have to come off their high horse ("Man-o'-War"). You can't pull that $65, $75 and $100 stuff and "get across with it" at all. "We are with you" for 10 years, have led the way fighting for low prices, assisting thousands to "help keep up that prosperous appearance," which "means everything today," by dressing them up at little or no cost. In cloth and wool suits, 20 to 40 per cent savings on our drummers' samples, suits and overcoats, $19.98, $24.98, $27.98, $29.98. Mackinaw coat, $9.98, $11.98, $12.98, $14.98. "We claim $5 is all we need on any suit." We have saved thousands of dollars for the clothes-buying public. "We're out of the high-rent district." "What the Drummers' Sample Clothes Shop means to you." These fine garments are made by the manufacturers for display or modeling purposes for traveling salesmen; they are made much better than the regular goods; after they show them off we buy them at a big discount; we give you the benefit of our immense buying capacity; this policy enables us to save you money. All we ask you is to "go shopping around" first and come here last, and we will certainly get your "dough." "Buy more, pay less." Vandeventer, Market, Sarah, Manchester, Chouteau and all other lines transfer to our door. We again announce our "Trade-In Sale" Department. We will make you a liberal allowance on your old clothes for new ones. "Abrams," "The Place to Buy Clothes." 926 S. Vandeventer av., near Chouteau. (c)

Oily skin and shiny nose—
How to correct them

WHEN you want to look your best—to make the best possible impression—how it embarrasses you to know that your nose just will get shiny. If you only knew the cause of this condition! Then you could relieve it!

A certain amount of oil in your skin is necessary to keep it smooth, velvety, supple. This oil is constantly being produced by the glands of the skin. On the nose, especially, there are more of these glands than in any other part of the skin. When the oil from these glands is too abundant, the result is an oily skin and a shiny nose. You can relieve this embarrassing condition by using the following treatment for it as frequently as is necessary:

> With warm water work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap in your hands. Apply it to your face and rub it into the pores thoroughly—always with an upward and outward motion. Rinse with warm water, then with cold—the colder the better. If possible, rub your face for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

This treatment will make your skin firmer and drier the very first time you try it. Use it as often as your skin requires, nightly if necessary, and before long you will see a marked improvement.

Get a cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap and have your first treatment tonight. You will find Woodbury's on sale at any drug store or toilet goods counter in the United States or Canada. A 25-cent cake will last a month or six weeks.

"Your treatment for one week"

A beautiful little set of Woodbury's skin preparations sent to you for 25 cents

Send 25 cents for this dainty miniature set of Woodbury's skin preparations, containing your complete Woodbury treatment for one week.

You will find, first, the little booklet, "A Skin You Love to Touch," telling you the special treatment your skin needs; then a trial size cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap—enough for seven nights of any treatment; a sample tube of the new Woodbury's Facial Cream; and samples of Woodbury's Cold Cream and Facial Powder, with directions telling you just how they should be used. Write today for this special new Woodbury outfit. Address The Andrew Jergens Co., Spring Grove Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.

If you live in Canada, address The Andrew Jergens Co., Limited, Sherbrooke St., Perth, Ontario.

For the commoner skin troubles

You will find complete treatments in the booklet, "A Skin You Love to Touch." This booklet is wrapped around every cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap. It gives treatments for Blackheads; Coarsened Skin; Oily Skin and Shiny Nose; Blemishes; Conspicuous Nose Pores; Sluggish Skin; Tender Skin; Sallow Skin, etc.

The Book of Knowledge

The Children's Encyclopedia

A Lifetime of Delightful Educational Reading for Every Child Every Day

Citizens of Tomorrow

Such are the children of today. Just what sort of citizens they are to be depends upon the education with which you provide them. The Book of Knowledge will help you to determine whether the natural bent of the child be towards science, art, literature, trade or mechanics.

Plan for the Future

In a few years the school bell will ring for your child, then high, then college—and then? Have you ever had moments of fear that he may grow up inefficient to cope with conditions of this age of stress and high pressure?

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE in the few years of its unprecedented experience has proved so valuable a tutor in the home and so capable of assistance in the schools, that it has become one of the indispensable factors in the education of the child of today.

The Natural Method of Acquiring Knowledge

The Answers to the Children's Thousand and One Questions

Curiosity—The Great Teacher

CURIOSITY is the beginning of all knowledge. Do you know any subject about which your child has not asked you a dozen questions? Let him ask as many as he likes, and be sure to answer them correctly. That is the parent's most important and most easily neglected duty. If you discourage your child's curiosity you will injure his mind, and the bright boy or girl becomes stupid or indifferent. Through curiosity Columbus discovered America. THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE is the simplest and most natural method of helping the child to educate himself. It answers every question a child can ask in plain and simple language. So captivating is this great original work to the mind of a child that he absorbs with little effort the profound truths and great facts of the world of knowledge, while reading its delightful pages and looking at the thousands of striking educational pictures.

Pen portrait of an Argentine lady

WARMTH of temperament—graciousness and grace—the proud traditions of aristocratic Spain.

Born to adorn and animate a distinguished circle—to entertain with ease and lavishness ambassadors, diplomats, litterateurs, celebrities of all the world—a connoisseur of beauty, and in her own relation to it—a high disdain of anything less choice than the choicest.

That she, in matters of costume supreme in elegance, in richness and refinement, should choose of all that the world offers her in silken underwear, the exquisite loveliness that is Kayser's, sets the seal of distinction on this house.

There are in the Agentine alone fifty-two important houses through which is distributed the Kayser "Italian" Silk Underwear which the gentlewomen of Argentina demand.

Accidentally dropped from an 8th-story window

—it did not break

"IT very often happens that myself and a couple of other girls do not get time to go out for lunch, so we hit on the plan of bringing a vacuum bottle full of hot beverage to drink with a luncheon brought from home. The vacuum bottle in question was standing on the sill of an open window in the rest room of the First National Exhibitors Circuit, 6 West 48th St. (8th floor), by which firm we are employed, when one of the girls, without noticing it, leaned against the window, thereby throwing the bottle out. In its fall the bottle hit an extension one story high and from there bounced into a court which was one story below the street level—therefore, the fall really consisted of nine stories instead of eight.

"When the bottle was recovered and returned to us, although it seemed none the worse for the fall except for a slight dent in the body of the bottle and another in the cover, we expected, of course, that the inside was shattered to pieces. To test it we filled it the next day with hot chocolate, and found to our surprise that the chocolate was still hot in the middle of the day when the bottle was opened. I might mention that the bottle referred to had been in service a matter of nine months previous to its eventful fall." Miss Sadie McIntosh, 510 West 147th St., N. Y. City.

It was a Stanley Vacuum Bottle. Not even the terrific impact of a fall from an 8th-story window could break its walls of steel!

The Stanley Bottle is made entirely of steel. It eliminates for all time the expense and inconvenience of broken glass. It can never break.

Naturally the Stanley is more expensive than the ordinary vacuum bottle, but there are no expenses for repairs or replacements. The first cost is the last cost.

Every Stanley Bottle is lined with blue Amalite, a pure mineral coating which is fused into the steel—making a surface like porcelain.

Sold in one and two-quart sizes at all the better stores. An attractive gift for man or woman. Prices (East of the Rocky Mountains), black standard finish: quart size, $10.00—2-quart size, $15.00.

"Your Men Have the Devil's Own Punch," Said Foch to Pershing. "GO TO IT!"

When that great final offensive was being planned—the offensive that brought the Germans to their knees and put an end to the War—General Pershing picked the strongest, most vital part of the German line and hit it with everything he had. "You'll get away with it," said Foch, and "get away with it" they certainly did. They went through that supposedly impregnable Argonne Forest, fortified twenty miles deep, as though such things as barbed wire, machine guns and shells did not exist; they stormed the heights of the Meuse; they won through to Sedan, cut that vital line of railway, and bottled up the German Army in Belgium. As Marshal Foch put it, "They were simply superb!"

Who Was There That You Knew?

Was your "Boy" in that bitter Argonne fight? Was he one of the gallant lads that charged the Meuse heights? Or was he one of those who smashed through the Hindenburg line?

Wherever he was, you will want the record of his gallant fight, for yourself, for him, and for his children. You will want the whole history of the war. He will want the historic record of the great battles he was in. He will want to know about the fights that went on around him. The whole truth, the whole splendid history, has never been published in any newspaper, magazine or book, but it is yours at last, from the beginning, many years ago, to the victorious end.

You can have it all in

History of the World War

Five Great Volumes, Size 10¼x7¼x1¾ inches---1000 Illustrations

Once in a generation—perhaps—there appears one man with a gift for writing history in a way to make it interesting to everyone—to make it vital, compelling. Such was Ridpath; such, in a larger degree, were Macaulay and Plutarch. Such a genius combines a natural gift for language, a natural gift for history, a natural gift for facts, with great vision and the ability to make you see and be thrilled by his vision. This greatest war has brought Simonds. His tale is simple and direct enough to captivate children, yet so profoundly true as to hold scholars.

Roosevelt Said:

"Frank H. Simonds' History of the Great War is a very remarkable work. It is not too much to say that no other man in this or any other country can quite parallel the work that Mr. Simonds has done. It is hard to say what most to admire—the really extraordinary grasp of the essential facts of the war which is shown, or the transparent clearness with which the facts are brought out or the entire fairness and impartiality of the conclusions."

> Great Causes bring forth Great Men. This War has brought out many brilliant writers—and one great historian—Frank H. Simonds. The French Revolution had its Carlyle—the British Macaulay—the World War has Frank H. Simonds.

How They Saved the Regiment!

There is one British regiment that believes that St. George appeared in the moonlight riding a white horse and showed them how to escape from an overwhelming force of Germans. And all that myth grew out of the glorious deed of a dog, and a little six-year old baby. But the story is more exciting than any St. George story could possibly be.

Once more this war has proved that truth doesn't have to stick to probabilities. Read the story of this French baby and his adoring British regiment in

It happens that we have left over from a huge edition about 800 copies of a wonderful set of books—the real experiences of real people.

800 sets are not enough to sell in our usual way, so we have decided that to the first 800 who send this coupon we will give, entirely free of charge, one of these sets.

In Frank H. Simonds' History you get the larger aspects of the war. In this set of books you get the intimate, personal aspects. Each and every one of these two hundred tales is a story of romance almost beyond belief. Here are unexpected endings. Here is suspense—here terror and despair—here glad tidings—here happy endings. Sometimes the escaped spy tells his own story. Now the woman who fell into the hands of the Turks tells her story. Now a man in the Foreign Legion tells unbelievable tales of those glorious blackguards—those heroic rascals; there is the story of Thrassels, V. C., that would stir the blood of a man as cold as a fish; the story of the disgraced clergyman who fought his way back.

There are only a few of these sets to be given away—just a remnant of a huge edition that was snapped up by eager readers.

CATCHING THE WHIRL OF THE DANCE ON AN ETCHER'S PLATE

HERE is an etching by an artist whose ambition it is to make a hard, obdurate line whirl, skip, bound, pirouette. He desires to do for the dancer, in a way, what the phonograph has done for the singer. He is Troy Kinney, a noted illustrator, and the example printed on this page is reproduced from one of the drawings which will be placed on exhibition tomorrow in the Kennedy Galleries on Fifth Avenue, New York.

Of course, the line cannot actually move—Kinney's aspiration is to give so vivid a suggestion of mobility that it will seem to. "I hope," says he, "to advance to the point where my line will give the beholder the same emotion as the dance itself does."

Inside Facts of the Writing Game

By RING W. LARDNER.

TO THE EDITOR:

The folling letter recd. from 1 of my admirers in Brazil, Ind., exclaims itself.

"Dear sir, I been reading your letters in these cols. for a good many mos. and find them very interesting a specially the letters advertising that you was to start a school of photo play writeing and in those letters you give your readers a good many hints in regards to how photo plays should be wrote as well as a sample of a 1 reel comedy and a 5 reel photo drama. Now no doubt they's a great many people that considered themself capable of writeing photo plays but couldn't afford to take none of the high price correspondents coarses in same and would of always remained a drug in their office or somewheres had you not of came to bat with your low price school.

"Now what I ask is why won't you be as thoughtfull of the people that wants to write short stories like you was to the ones that wanted to write for pictures. I have always felt like I had a gift for writeing short fictions but don't know nothing about technics, length of stories and etc. and couldn't dig up the price witch is demanded by the correspondents schools for tuition and etc. It seems to me like you are well qualified to learn people the art of story writeing even better than other kinds of writeing because I once read a story of yours in a magazine witch you must of been the editor's brother in law but still and all it was printed and you probably got payed for same witch is more than you can say in regards to your efforts at photo plays. So will you be so kind and open up a coarse in short story writeing and give us a idear in these cols. what the secrets and principals is that makes a successful short story fiction writer and I am only 1 of thousands that will be interested and maybe subscribe to your school."

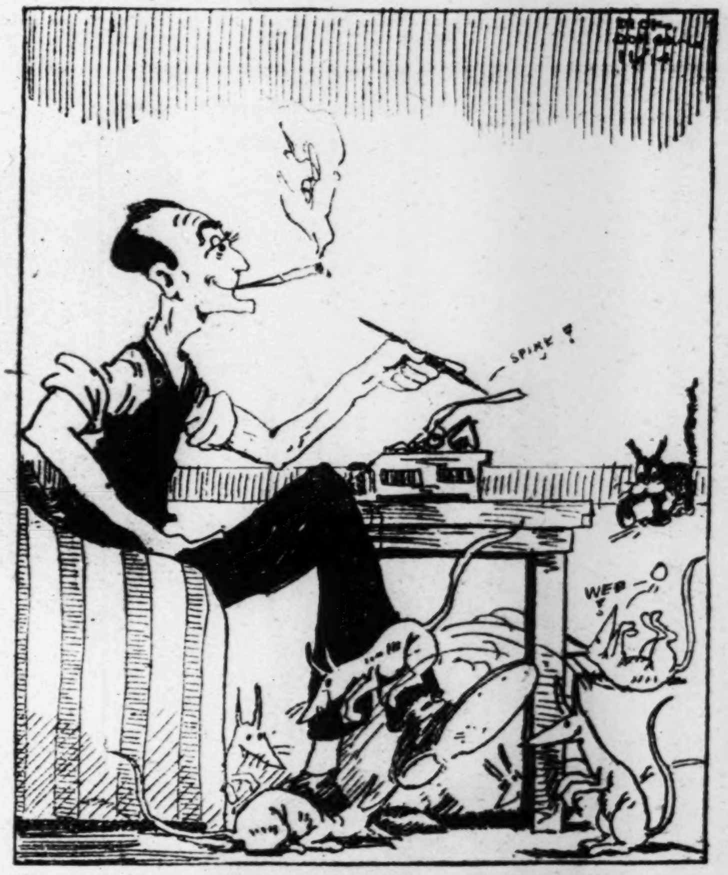
The writer of the above is not the only party that has came to me with requests along the same lines, and it begins to look like I would be doing a public service was I to comply with their requests along these lines. But these kind of schools costs money to start them and people can't throw away their money on experiments when coal costs $16.00 per ton, try and get it, so it seems like the best scheme would be for me to try and write a few words about story writeing witch would give the public my idears of same and weather or not I am capable of learning them and if they's a sufficient No. of replys accompanyed by the writers promise to take up my coarses and a small check to guarantee same, why I will try and add a fiction writeing school to my all ready large list of edution institutes.

In the first place the average party has got a magazine editor all wrong witch they usually are. They think he is a man that will give everybody a square deal where as the most of them lets their personal feelings and temperament get the best of them. For inst. a new beginner is libel to be discouraged because their manuscript comes back on them and they think to themself that the story couldn't of been no good or the editor would of eat it up, and they may as well give up writeing and try something else.

Well the U. S. is probably dirty with these kind of people that would of made grand authors if they hadn't of became discouraged on acct. of their ignorants of editors and how to handle them. The best rule for a new beginner to follow is to 1st. get a idear for a story and then forget the idear and go ahead and write the story out or dictate it to somebody that has got a good hand writeing or better yet one of these new fangle machines called a typewriter that makes it look all most like print.

Then put a good suggestive title on the story like for inst. "Clara's Calves" and then give it to your family to read and if they say it reads good why it must be good and the next question is how to get it before a magazine editor and get a square deal. The most magazine editors don't want good stories as it crowds out the ads and in the 2d. place the most editors won't read manuscripts themself because it keeps them away from hocky so they give them to the wife and kiddies and leave them pass judgement or if they do read them themself, why the chances are they have got a secret gruge vs. you for something that maybe 1 of your relatives done to them, or you got the same name as somebody they don't like and that is enough to knock your chances for a gool from field.

But 1 of the biggest mistakes a new beginner makes is to send return stamps along with their manuscript as most of the editors is air tight and the minute they see stamps that somebody else has boughten why they can't wait a minute till they use them, and whist, back comes your manuscript. I remember once before I become a wise cracker that I sent a stamped self address envelope along with a good story I wrote and the old skin flint shot it back at me pro tem all because he couldn't do nothing else with a addressed envelope with the stamps stuck to it and couldn't bear to see it wasted. Both my sisters read this story I speak of and said it was a pip, and I wished the old Shylock could of heard what they said about him for sending it back.



"Personly I never feel comfortable at my desk unlest they's a dozen large rats parked at my ft."

Well then the only way to get a square deal from the editor is to scrap up a acquaintance with somebody that is all ready in the writeing game and the editor knows who he is and got respects for him and then have this bird write a letter for you to send along with the manuscript and have him say in the letter that your story is O. K. and the editor is a sap if he don't accept because you have got a lot of friends that will stop their subscription if that story comes back. These kind of letters makes a editor think twice and they tell me that even a author like Irving R. Cobb don't never think or sending in a mss. without getting somebody down in Washington to write and tell the editor where he will head in at if they's any monkey business.

So much for how to get a square deal after your story is wrote. As for the writeing itself a good many new beginners falls down because they try and write their story without the right atmosphere to work in. I can't give no advice on this subject as different authors demands different working conditions. For inst. they say Rupert M. Hughes can't write a line unlest the water is running in the bath tub and Fannie Hurst won't attempt to work without the room is full of sardine cans where as when the editor wants a story out of Mrs. Rinehart they get somebody to stand and snap a rubber band at her neck. Personly I never feel comfortable at my desk unlest they's a dozen large rats parked on my ft. These inst. will give you a idear of how different tempermunts effects different writers but, as I say, each writer has to chose for themself what tempermunt to have and I might advise you to try writeing in a public garage whereas you might do your best work setting in a eel trap.

Next wk. I will try and write a outline of a model short story showing the technics and etc. and we will see if they's enough interest in my methods to warwant my opening up a new school.

FIXING THE FURNACE

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

ONE way to fix a furnace is to hire somebody to do it. That is the best way, even if you hire the wrong man.

The other way is to fix it yourself. That was my way—once. It isn't my way any more.

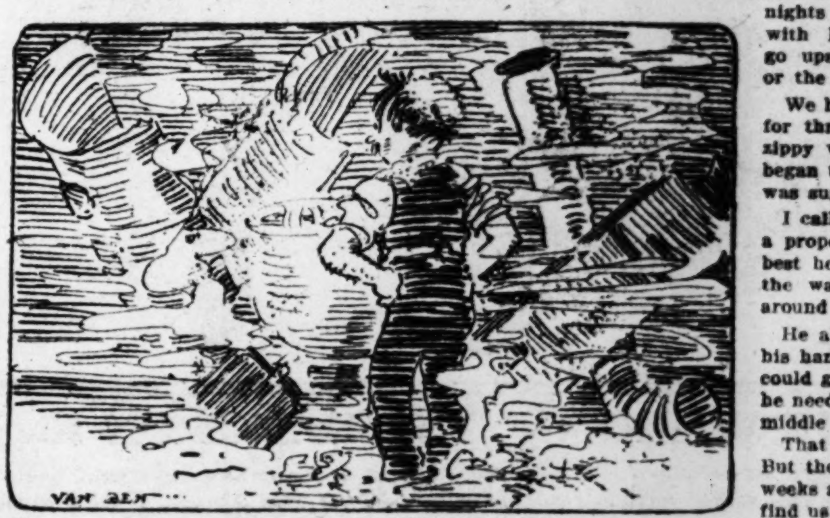
In the northern and eastern parts of this country, furnaces must be fed with coal, because the country has been deforested and wood costs anywhere from $30 to $50 a cord. That is more expensive than coal, even now, when the coal dealer, if he consents to sell you any at all, charges $17 a ton for it.

The trouble with coal, aside from its price, is that it contains all sorts of material besides fuel, including soot, coal tar, analine dyes, iodine, corrosive sublimate and probably cyanide of potassium—though I have made no chemical test for the latter.

Anyway, after a furnace has burned coal all winter it gets filled up with fireproof chemicals that clog the drafts, insulate the pipes and make the furnace useless as a heater, although it burns merrily away within itself and consumes just as much $16 coal as it ever did.

One fixes a furnace in the autumn just after the first frost announces that winter is on the way.

The job requires a talented furnace man a couple of days. It occupies four or five days of the time of an ordinary Sicilian, who dabbles in furnaces in the winter after gardening in the summer.



As the last one jingled on the floor the main body of the furnace gave a dismal groan and separated like the one-hoss shay.

A householder can do it in a week, by working nights and Sundays, and taking his lunch with him to the cellar, and refusing to go upstairs to answer the front door bell or the telephone bell.

We had neglected to have our furnace fixed for three or four years, so when a spell of zippy weather came along, and the children began to shiver as they ate their breakfast, it was suggested that the task be undertaken.

I called up the furnace man and made him a proposition, but he wasn't interested. The best he could do, he said, was to put me on the waiting list, numbering me somewhere around 350.

He allowed that if I would be patient, and his hands didn't strike on him again, and he could get the railroads to deliver the material he needed, he might reach my job around the middle of January.

That wouldn't do, so I tried the gardener. But the gardener was booked solid for seven weeks ahead, and seven weeks, I knew, would find us in the middle of zero weather. There was nothing for it but to tackle it myself.

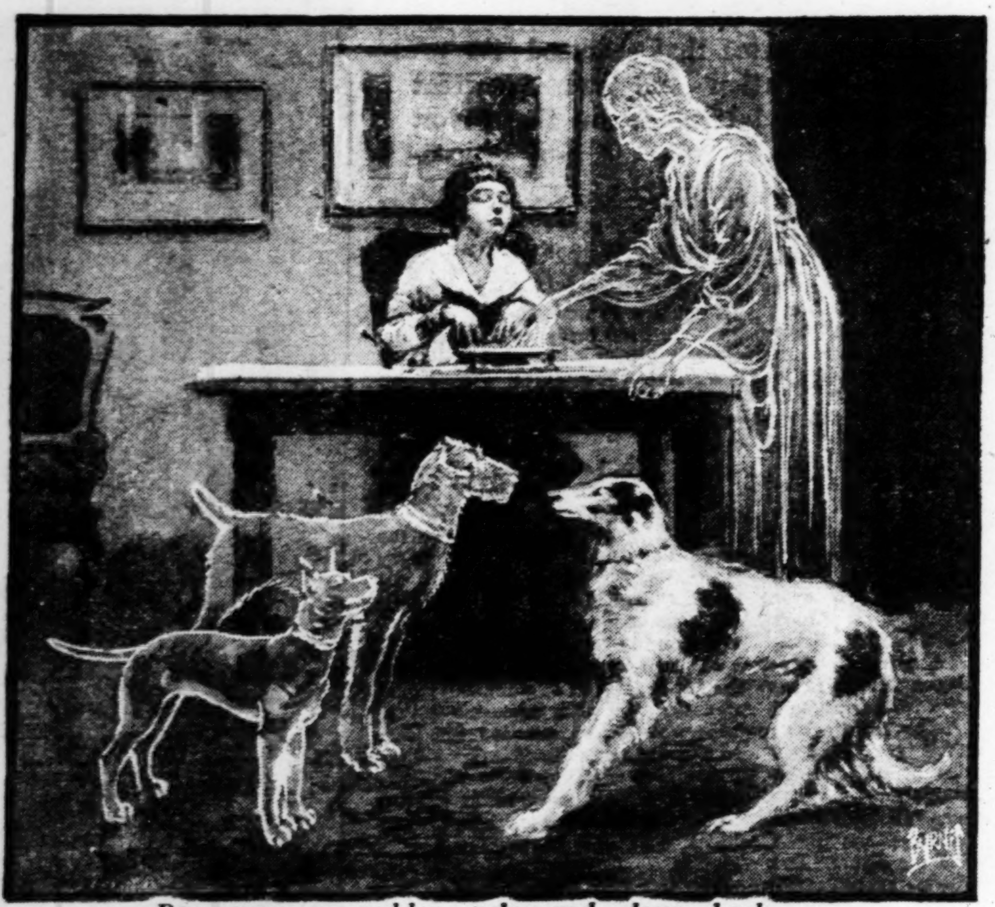
- "Spirit Land" Amazingly Reported by - 13-Year-Old Girl, Ignorant of Her Psychic Power

Case so sensational, says author of "Louise," that as many as 5000 phantoms sometimes rushed back from the "Beyond" to attend seances — Unwitting medium a child of whose existence principals in book were unaware until informed by "spirits"— Volume tells most remarkable story yet published concerning communications with unseen world :-:



Rex gave a sudden yelp and drew back——.

TO THE reviewer's table comes a volume quaintly bound. The covers are sky-blue; around the edges of the front runs a white margin; and the title, "Revelations of Louise," is printed in letters of gold. The frontispiece is a portrait of an attractive young woman in evening dress; and in the text is a snapshot of the same girl in street clothes.

It is not strange if the blue covers, the white margin, the gold letters and the two pictures cause an impression of something out of the ordinary. For, if one may believe the testimony of the author, all of these details were dictated by the spirit of a young woman who died Nov. 8, 1918.

"The Revelations of Louise," by Albert S. Crockett (Stokes), is one of the most arresting of the books that are now constantly appearing as records of purported communications with the dead. One circumstance of the narrative is declared to be absolutely unique. This is, that the channel of communication was a girl of 13 who was totally unaware that she was acting as a medium. The situation was so sensational, according to the author, as to amaze even the spirit world, so that as many as 5000 phantoms gathered at a time to witness and marvel at the seances.

Relatives and friends of the family, we are told, had "reserved seats" at these affairs; that is, they were permitted to pack themselves, "like sardines," in the room itself. The others were described as being assembled outside the house—the walls being transparent to their eyes—in an arrangement of three tiers, like "subway, surface and elevated lines."

The author, Albert S. Crockett, is a veteran newspaper man, having served 16 years as reporter and correspondent in many countries. He worked in Philadelphia for the Times and Inquirer, and in New York for the Herald, Sun and Times. The responsible heads of several of these newspapers give unreserved testimony as to the writer's reliability and veracity. He says himself that "a long experience in assisting to expose frauds should serve to make such a one at least skeptical." A thorough skeptic he professes himself to have been, "until finally I was furnished with actual manifestations of power I believe to be extra-human, and which satisfied my vision, my sense of touch and my reason."

A sketch of Crockett's domestic affairs must precede an account of the alleged revelations. He was the stepfather of the dead girl, Louise, whose father had been divorced from Crockett's wife. Louise seems to have been a very charming and human young woman, whose serious interest was in vocal music. Just as she was about to be graduated from a famous music school, she developed a cough, and was hurried away for a course of open-air treatment. She seemed to recover, and became engaged to marry. The wedding date was set, the trousseau was prepared; then her lover, a graduate of one of the officers' training camps, was peremptorily ordered to France. Following came the shock of the news that her brother had been seriously wounded at Chateau-Thierry; the double blow caused a relapse which ended in her death.

Under the inspiration of Sir Oliver Lodge's "Raymond," the heartbroken mother resorted to a professional medium in New York, and was astounded to receive a message from her former husband, who had passed so completely out of her life that she did not even know he was dead. She had heard many years before that he had married again, and a vague rumor that there were children. He pleaded with Mrs. Crockett to aid a daughter of his by his second marriage, who, he declared, was living under frightful hardships.

It required five weeks of inquiry to find the child, who was with maternal relatives in the Far West. An exchange of letters resulted in an arrangement that the girl should spend the summer of 1919 with the Crocketts at their home in Connecticut. Her name was Violet. She was 13 years old, and she was, of course, a half-sister of Louise.

Louise, who died two years ago and whose purported messages from the other world are subject of new book.

When in Stamford one day, Violet saw a ouija board in a toy shop, and thought she would like to have it as a plaything. Violet's first trial with the board was an electrifying success, though it refused to move for any others of the family. From this discovery developed other powers, until, before the end of the summer, the child was acting as a trance medium — without the slightest knowledge of the fact, we are assured. Various means of communication were used, ranging from the ouija board, table tilting, rapping and the planchette to the trance. At the direction of "Louise," Crockett kept a written record, and a transcript of some of the striking passages will be given here. The words in parenthesis are the author's explanations.

"Tell mother (a message from Louise) that the chances are better here than on earth for genius to work itself out. Oh, the symphonies I am privileged to hear! The great musicians are all here. I have seen the old masters in the Forum. It is like going to the Metropolitan. Their music is caught by ears on the earth plane which are attuned to it. That is inspiration. Look at Mozart in his childhood, receiving it, bring forth his great genius at the age of 5."

Q. "How long after you passed over did you realize you were in another world?"

A. "Five minutes."

Q. "How long was it before you saw Archie?" (This was an uncle who was killed when a boy by being thrown from a horse.)

A. "About one-half hour."

Q. "Had he grown to be a man?"

A. "Yes."

Q. "Do you sing a great deal?"

A. "Yes."

Q. "What great composer's works are you familiar with there?"

A. "Mendelssohn."

Q. "Are Christianity and Judaism reconciled on the other side?"

A. "To a certain extent. There are many Jewish people who have received more light than Christians."

Q. "About the divinity of Christ: Christianity says He is the Son of God. Can you say whether this belief is true?"

A. "Yes. That belief is correct."

Q. "Do you mean by that Christ was godlike?"

A. "No; He was really the Son of God."

Q. "Then the Immaculate Conception is not merely a religious tenet?"

A. "No, an absolute fact." * * *

Q. "Don't you take little trips round the earth sometimes?"

A. "Yes, but that doesn't take much time."

Q. "Have you gone to Italy yet?"

A. "Yes, I was in Rome. I like the art galleries and St. Peter's." * * *

Q. "You said the other day you wear white and blue. Why is it?"

A. "They are the most beautiful colors. Almost everybody here wears blue and white. White is symbolic of purity; blue, the endless sky, symbolic of eternity." * * *

Q. "Don't you think the war opened up our vision with regard to the great beyond?"

A. "Yes. The war was, in a way, a blessing." (Louise spoke of visiting the peace conference and discussed in a humorous way one or two personalities there; but what she said it might be inadvisable to repeat.)

Q. "Were you glad to see the Germans defeated?"

A. "No. They are all human beings."

Q. "I thought you were all for the allies?"

A. "No; their spirits (the Germans) are just as good as, and better than some of, the allies."

Q. "Do you think the allies were as much to blame as the Germans?"

A. "It wasn't the Germans' fault. It was Anti-Christ's."

Q. "Whom do you mean—the Kaiser?"

General Obregon, President-Elect of Mexico - Had Plain Mike O'Brien as Ancestor -

Next ruler of Southern Republic has name that assumed its present form through Spanish pronunciation and had as great grandfather an adventurer who joined Iturbide in the revolt against Spain a century ago -o- -o- -o- -o-

By HARRY H. DUNN

(Formerly Editor of La Prensa and The Daily Mexican of Mexico City.)

General and Senora Obregon. The bride was formerly Senorita Maria Tapia. Obregon's arm was blown off by a shrapnel shell from Villa's army at the battle of Celaya.

EAMONN DE VALERA may never rule in Dublin, but 15,000,000 inhabitants of the largest of the Latin-American republics have elected and are about to inaugurate an Irishman to direct their destinies for the next four years. In December, 1920, just 400 years after the conquest of Mexico by the Spaniards, the shades of Barney O'Higgins, Pat O'Hara, Felix O'Donohue, Andy Oheda, Tom MacGregor, and of a baker's dozen of other Celt and Celt-Iberian heroes in the Latin-American hall of fame, will have to move over a niche to make room for "Gin'ral O'Brien," master of modern Mexico.

Approximately 100 years ago an Irishman was sent by the then King of Spain to rule as Viceroy over Mexico. His name was John O'Donahue, or "Juan Odonoju," as the more musically-minded Mexicans translated it. His closest friend and constant bodyguard was one Michael O'Brien, renamed "Miguel Obregon" by his adopted Iberian brother adventurers, and it was to him that Juan Odonoju turned when Iturbide and his army, flying the banner of the "first empire," decreed an end to the 300-year rule of the Spanish Viceroys.

Up the mountain wall from Vera Cruz went these two sons of Ireland to where Cordoba clings like a swallow's nest to the seaward side of the Sierra. And there Jack O'Donahue and Micky O'Brien agreed to repudiate their Emperor, back in Madrid, and to allow Iturbide, the Morelian Indian, to rule until a King of Mexico could be chosen. Then Mickey O'Brien rode with the Indian into Mexico City to ascertain if it were safe for the Viceroy of Old Spain to enter the capital of New Spain. So well did Micky forget the Viceroy, so well did he serve the first empire of Mexico, that he became "Gen. Miguel Obregon," and was placed in control of the western coast of the Land of Montezuma, where, with his wife, who came from the land of his fathers, he left sons to lay him to rest when his last days came.

A few weeks ago, the electorate of Mexico chose a great-grandson of that same Micky O'Brien to sit in the great teakwood chair of Hidalgo and Juarez and Diaz in the national palace at Mexico City. His name is Alvaro Obregon.

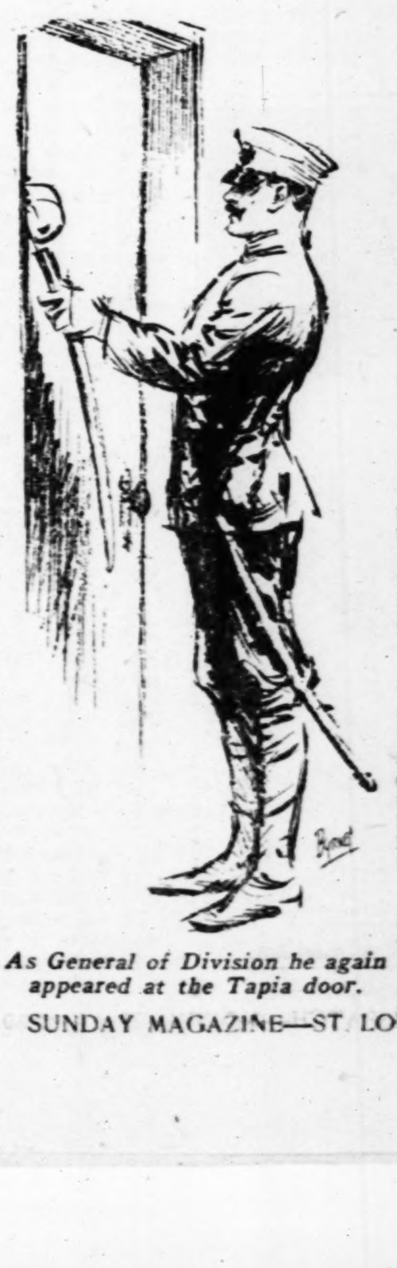
The Latin-American is a considerable diplomat. If one doubt this, he may with propriety and results consult William Jennings Bryan, erstwhile Secretary of State in Washington, or the almost-forgotten John Lind, formerly a special and confidential agent in Mexico. But the Irishman, using the diplomatic tools of the Latin-American, including his own language, leaves the Latin-American diplomat at the typewriter, so to speak. Read here the history of the great-grandson of Micky O'Brien.

When Iturbide's magnificent dream of a Mexican empire ended, scarcely a year after he and his beautiful wife were crowned in the Cathedral in Mexico City, he left Miguel Obregon—otherwise Micky O'Brien—to his own devices in the distant west coast territory, now the State of Sinaloa. Like most Irishmen, Miguel was a good mixer. He had more friends than dollars, but through these friends he was able to resign from the army and escape the death the National Junta of revolutionists against the empire had prepared for him. Obregon became an hacendado, a farmer of large estates, akin to the cotton kings of the old South and the cattle kings of the old West in our own country. To him and the Sonora Catalina Obregon were born several sons, to one of whom, mindful of other days beyond the rolling Atlantic, they gave the name of Patrick—the Patricio of their neighbors in the New World.

To this young Patsy the tongue of his fathers became useless, and, to him, with his bride, taken from the cream-skinned, doe-eyed beauties of the tierra caliente, came sons and daughters to whom "Irlandia" and "los Irlandeses" were merely words culled from the speech of their aged grandsire, as he puttered among the flowers in the patio or gabbled with his cronies in the village cantina.

One of these sons inherited the name of "Miguel." Lake Namgay Doola, Patricio Obregon still remembered, though for the life of him he could not have identified the memory, some of the words of his childhood days with his Irish father and mother, but even this rememberance was lost in the Mexican "Micky" when he grew to manhood, and gave to Sinaloa the present Alvaro Obregon, whose Irish spirit, albeit he recognized it not, was to carry him through scraps worse than Donnybrook ever saw to the mastery of Mexico.

For this Alvaro Obregon is more of a master of Mexico today than any one of the 10 "Presidents" she has had since Porfirio Diaz. From a small hacendado he has become Minister of War, successful leader of a national revolution, and, lastly, President-elect, to be inaugurated in December. From the head of a band of Yaqui Indians, he has risen to command an army of approximately 200,000 men, in which he has been just Irish enough to incorporate all the bandits and rebels who opposed him, distributing the title of "General" with a largesse which only a politician trained by Tammany could hope to rival. He has the best and largest army any Latin-American republic ever has raised. From an underling in the Madero and Carranza armies he first made himself chief string-puller of the marionettes which dance in Mexico City for this or that leader, and now he is about to pull those strings from the presidential chair. His career puts one in mind of that of Barney O'Higgins in Chile, some decades ago, yet he has had a more difficult problem than O'Higgins, since he has had to control 15,000,000 people of 85 dialects, the while he eliminated, one by one, the men who had put themselves into high places in Mexico.



As General of Division he again appeared at the Tapia door.

Porfirio Diaz, when he was President of Mexico, once said to the writer: "It is far better that a little bad blood be shed intentionally than that a great deal of good blood flow through allowing the bad blood to continue." This is the doctrine of Obregon, to which he seems to have added Nietszche's slogan of the superman, "Be hard." Obregon swore to drive Victoriano Huerta from the country, after the latter had overthrown Madero, yet when the United States landed 11,000 men at Vera Cruz to enforce a salute—which, by the way, has not been given yet—Obregon made common cause with Huerta, demanded that the invader be attacked, and moved his troops as close to Vera Cruz as he could, awaiting orders from Huerta in Mexico City.

Obregon endeared himself to the people by demanding, after he had defeated Francisco Villa and seated Venustiano Carranza safely in the presidency, that the aged "First Chief" make good his all but impossible promise to give the people of Sinaloa free distribution of lands, and then saw to it that the stubborn old man did exactly as he had promised. He married Maria Tapia, one of the most beautiful girls in the State of Sonora, and carried her on a honeymoon to the American border, after her wealthy father had literally thrown him out of the Tapia family home. Added to this, he made that same father give them a nine-day marriage feast, within the walls of that same family home. When his bride told him that he should be Minister of War, he traveled 1200 miles, straightway and alone, to Mexico City and got the appointment.

At this time the befuddled Carranza, having discovered that he could not control Mexico, was devoting his time to trying to control Washington and had given no thought to Ministers of War. At 10 o'clock one velvet night Obregon arrived in the Mexican capital. At 10:15 he was on one side of the long, marble-topped table in the President's private room in the palace. The much-perturbed "Don Venus" sat opposite, with the peon leader, Pablo Gonzales, head of the Government armies, at one end. The spirit of the redoubtable Micky O'Brien must have stood at the shoulder of his great-grandson that night, for when Obregon left the national palace, about an hour after his entry, he carried with him his commission as Minister of War. Behind him sat the President, "Don Venus," nursing a ruffled dignity, and Pablo Gonzales, petting what would have been known to the original Micky as a "shade on one lamp."

Obregon first appeared largely on the Mexican map when, in the revolution of Francisco Y. Madero, he raised 3000 soldiers, largely Yaqui Indians, and defeated the Federals of Porfirio Diaz, under Gen. Pedro Ojeda, another descendant of Irish adventurers, in a nine-day battle near Naco, Sonora. Turning southward, after this battle, in the spring of 1911, Obregon fought the main Federal army, under Gen. Luis Medina-Barron, for 32 days at Santa Maria. This is the longest battle ever fought in the New World, and probably the longest recorded by history in any part of the world. Other and smaller battles followed, until all Northwestern Mexico was held for Madero, and the Coahuila Dreamer became President.

Then, like Cincinnatus, Alvaro Obregon returned to the neglected plow on his Sinaloa hacienda, but, before he had time to feed the mules one morning, the news came that the man he had helped to put into the presidency had been slain. Calling together his army,

New Building in St. Louis Being "Shot" From a Cement Gun

Novel device, requiring only a small crew and simple wooden forms, renders greater speed and more economy possible in putting up walls of reinforced concrete — English builders have used it in coping with the house shortage :: ::

THE first building of its kind in St. Louis, as far as methods of construction are concerned, is nearing completion near Macklind and Manchester avenues.

It is being erected with a "cement gun."

The gun did not receive its name because it is made of cement, but because it "shoots" a thoroughly mixed stream of liquid cement into the place prepared for it, forming walls which are said to be remarkable for their solidity and strength.

Upon the score of a threefold economy claimed for the gun—in time, labor and material—the work is being watched with considerable interest by builders.

Practically the same method of construction has been quite extensively used in England, in the building of cottages to relieve the housing shortage, which was quite acute there after the war. In this country, the cement gun rendered satisfactory service at Norfolk, Va., in building concrete barges.

The finished material is called "gunnite."

A crew of five men is sufficient to operate the gun, and with fair efficiency should put on between 2500 and 3000 square feet in eight hours, according to Kendall Creecy, general superintendent for the Graner Contracting Co. The new local building is one of medium size which the National Lead Co. will use for a pottery factory.

The finished wall has an average thickness of two inches, including the reinforcement of wire inside the wall and about midway between the two surfaces. For the general features of gunnite are about the same as of the usual reinforced concrete wall, except that the advocates of gunnite say it is better. The differences which make this a novelty in the building line are more in the methods than in the type of wall built.

Contrary to the expectation of a person who watches this process for the first time, the word "gun" is not applied to the brass nozzle out of which the liquid cement is discharged, but instead to a two-wheeled machine connected by hose on one side with an air-compressing plant, and by another hose on the other side with the nozzle.

In this gun, or lock machine, which can be pulled from place to place as the progress of the work requires, the mixture of cement and sand is fed into a current of compressed air which flies continuously, via the gun, from the compressed air tank to the nozzle, leaving the nozzle under an average pressure of 40 pounds.

The gun consists of two large locks, one above the other, and connected by a large, close-fitting valve. The mixture of sand and cement is put into the upper lock, which also has a top valve, and this latter valve is closed. A system of aircocks makes it possible to produce the same air pressure in the upper lock as in the lower, whenever the connecting valve is opened to permit the downward flow of material.

As soon as the material has all passed from the upper lock to the lower one, the connecting valve is closed, and held fast by the steady pressure of the air in the lower lock, while the upper lock is again loaded from the outside.

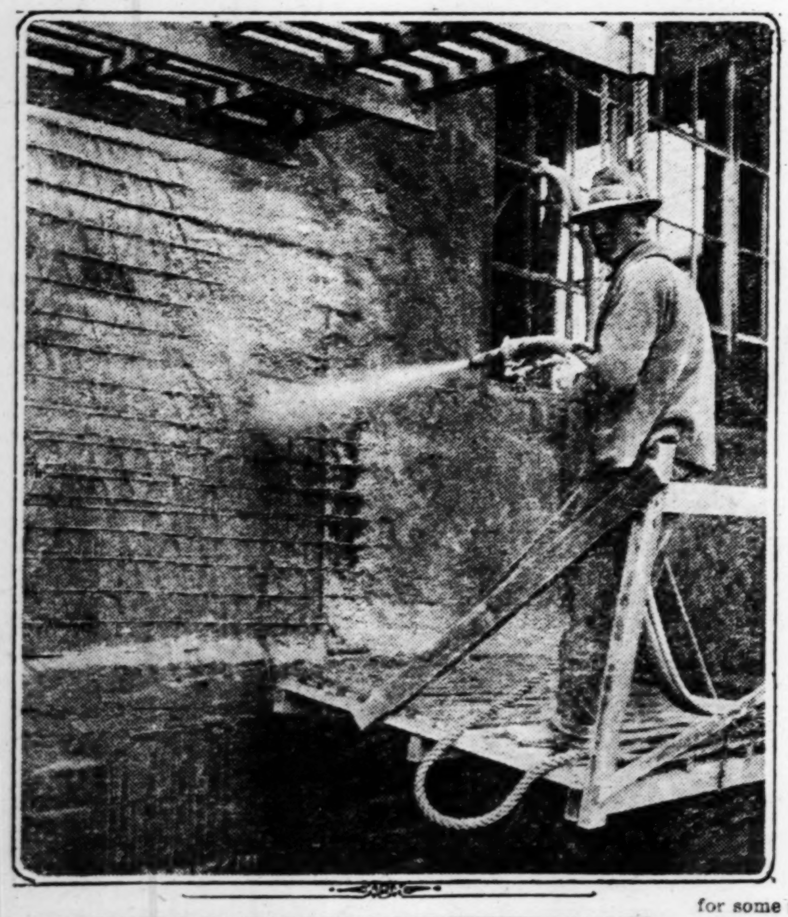
"Shooting" the concrete for portion of wall. The single form, with wire reinforcement, shows at left.



In the lower lock, meanwhile, an air motor ceaselessly revolves a circular plate which just fits the bottom of the lower lock, and which is arranged so as to deliver an unvarying amount of the cement and sand mixture at the exit into the second hose, which leads to the nozzle. This mixture is still dry and remains so as it flies through the hose and until within some five or six inches of the nozzle.

Attached to the outside of this hose is a smaller one which conducts water, under the ordinary city pressure, to the nozzle. A few inches from the tip of the nozzle the two hoses are connected, and through eight small holes the water, in a cone shape pointed outwards, enters the large hose and mixes with the cement and sand.

Due to the 40-pound pressure behind the stream of material, it is thoroughly hydrated before spouting out of the nozzle. Indeed, because no gravel is used for gunnite, but only screened sand, and because of the hydration and application under pressure, its advocates say the resulting fabric is more closely knit than ordinary concrete, and entirely eliminates "voids."

Another advantage claimed, besides the economy in labor and material, is in the item of wooden forms. In a gunnite building, forms are used only on one side of the work, and after the reinforcing material has been put in place, the liquid material is shot against that one form and the stream continues to play, until the desired thickness has been attained. When, for some reason, it is desirable to return to one portion of the wall and "shoot" some more, the new material forms a perfect bond with that to which it is added, say the gunnite advocates.

The forms can be removed in 24 hours, as compared with the six to 10 days which is usual for ordinary reinforced concrete construction. In fact, during hot weather, it sometimes is necessary to sprinkle water on gunnite to prevent it from drying out too quickly.

A regular steel-beam construction is used for the framework of the building, and the wire netting is attached to the steel by lock washers, or "pig tails," as the workmen call them. This eliminates the necessity of boring any holes to anchor the wire netting. Common poultry netting may be used with success, according to men familiar with gunnite. The density of gunnite is greater than that of stucco.

"The cement gun has wonderful possibilities," said Creecy. "Take the case of old, shabby-looking brick buildings, which need a lot of pointing. Just shoot half an inch of gunnite on their outside walls, and you have a neat-looking stucco building and one which is strengthened and made fit for use.

"Use of the cement gun in new work enables a builder to save one-half of the labor and four-fifths of the material, besides completing the job in a much shorter time. It is not suitable for foundation work, but can be used for the walls of tall buildings, because the

THE DANCING GIRLS

By EDNA FERBER

CHUG SCARITT was, and is, the proprietor and sole owner of the Elite Garage, and he pronounced it with a long i. A medium-size young fellow in the early twenties with a serious mouth, laughing eyes and a muscular grace pretty well concealed by the grease-grimed grotesquerie of overalls.

The Scaritts lived the other side of the tracks. If you know Chippewa, or its equivalent, you get the significance of that. Nobodys. Not only did they live the other side of the tracks; they lived so close to them that the rush and rumble of the passing trains shook the two-story frame cottage and rattled the crockery on the pantry shelves.

He was a natural mechanic. He couldn't spend a day with a piece of mechanism without having speeded it up, or in some way done something to its belt, gears, wheels, motor. He was almost never separated from a monkey-wrench or pliers, and he was always turning a nut or bolt or screw in his grease-grimed fingers.

At 17 he went to work in the Elite Garage. He hadn't been there a month before the owner was saying, "Say, Chug, take a look at this here bus, will you? She don't run right, but I can't find out what's got into her."

Chug would put his ear to the heart of the car, and tap its vitals, and count its pulse beats as a doctor sounds you with his stethoscope. The look on his face was that of a violinist who tries his G string.

For the rest, he filled gas tanks, changed and pumped up tires, tested batteries, oiled tappets. But the thing that fascinated him was the engine. An oily, blue-eyed boy, in spattered overalls, he was always just emerging from beneath a car, or crawling under it. When a new car came in, en route—a proud, glittering affair—he always managed to get a chance at it somehow, though the owner or chauffeur guarded it ever so jealously.

At home Chug was forever rigging up labor-saving devices for his mother. The Scaritts' window shades always rolled; their doorbell always rang with a satisfactory ring; their suction pump never stuck. By the time he was 20 Chug was manager of the garage, and his mother was saying, "You're around that garage 16 hours a day. When you're home you're everlastingly reading those engineering papers and things. Your pa at your age had a girl for every night in the week and two on Sundays."

"Another year or so and I can buy out old Behnke and own the place."

Chug was a natural born dancer. There are young men who, after the music has struck up, can start out incredibly enough by saying: "What is this, anyway—waltz or fox-trot?" This was inconceivable to Chug. He had never had a dancing lesson in his life, but he had a sense of rhythm that was infallible. He could no more have danced out of time than he could have started a car on high, or confused a flivver with a twelve. He didn't look particularly swanlike as he danced, having large, sensible feet, but they were expert at not being where someone else's feet happened to be, and he could time a beat to the fraction of a second.

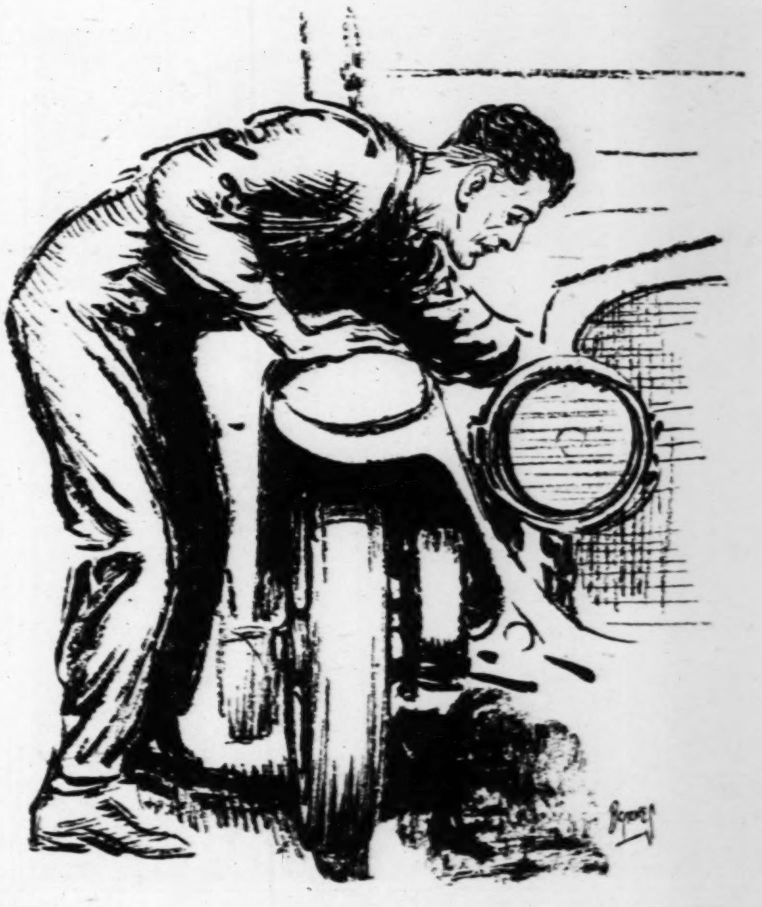
Boiled down, Chug Scaritt's crying need was girls. At 22 or 23 you must have girls in your life if you're normal. Chug was, but Chippewa wasn't. It had too many millionaires at one end and too many laborers at the other for a town of 30,000.

The mill hands and their families were well-paid, thrifty, clannish Swedes, most of them, with a liberal sprinkling of Belgians and Slavs. They belonged to all sorts of societies and lodges to which they paid infinitesimal dues and swore lifelong allegiance.

Chug Scaritt and boys of his kind were left high and dry. So, then, when Chug went out with a girl it was likely to be by way of someone's kitchen; or with one of those who worked in the ragroom at the paper and pulp mill. They were the very girls who switched up and down in front of the garage evenings and Saturday afternoons. Many of them had been farm girls in Michigan or Northern Wisconsin or Minnesota. In Chippewa they did housework. Big, robust girls they were, miraculously well dressed, in good shoes and suits and hats. They had bad teeth, for the most part, with a scum over them; overfond of coffee; and were rather dull company. But they were good-natured, and hearty, and generous.

The paper-mill girls were quite another type. Theirs was a grayish pallor, due to lungs dust-choked from work in the ragroom. That same pallor promised ill for future generations in Chippewa. But they had a rather appealing wistful fragility. Their eyes generally looked too big for their faces. They possessed, though, a certain vivacity and diablerie that the big, slower-witted Swede girls lacked.

When Chug felt the need of a dash of red in the evening he had little choice. In the winter he often went up to Woodmen's Hall. The dances at Woodmen's Hall were of the kind advertised at 50 cents a couple. Extra lady 25 cents. Ladies without gents, 35 cents. Bergstrom's two-piece orchestra. Chug usually went alone, but he escorted home one of the ladies-without-gents. It was not that he begrudged the 50 cents. Chug was free enough with his money. He went to these dances on a last-minute impulse, almost against his will, and out of sheer boredom. Once there, he danced every dance and all the encores. The girls fought for him. Their manner of dancing was cheek to cheek, in wordless rhythm. His arm about the ample waist of one of the Swedish girls, or clasping close the frail form of one of the mill hands, Chug would dance on and on, indefatigably, until the music played "Home, Sweet Home." The conversation, if any, varied little.



When a new car came in, en route—he always managed to get a chance at it somehow.

"The music's swell tonight," from the girl.

"Yeh."

"You're some little dancer, Chug, I'll say. Honest, I could dance with you forever." This with a pressure of the girl's arm, and spoken with a little accent, whether Swedish, Belgian or Slavic.

"They all say that."

"Crazy about yourself, ain't you!"

"Not as crazy as I am about you," with tardy gallantry.

He was very little stirred, really.

"Yeh, you are. I wish you was. It makes no never minds to you who you're dancing with, s'long's you're dancing."

This last came one evening as a variant in the usual formula. It startled Chug a little, so that he held the girl off the better to look at her. She was Wanda something or other, and anybody but Chug would have been alive to the fact that she had been stalking him for weeks with a stolid persisence.

"Danced with you three times tonight, haven't I?" he demanded. He was rather surprised to find that this was so.

"Wisht it was thirty."

That was Wanda. Her very eagerness foiled her. She cheapened herself. When Chug said, "Can I see you home?" he knew the answer before he put the question. Too easy to get along with Wanda.

Mrs. Scaritt suspected in a vague sort of way that Chug was "running with the hired girls." The thought distressed her. She was too smart a woman to nag him about it. She tried diplomacy.

"Why don't you bring some young folks home to eat, Chug? I like to fuss around for company." She was a wonderful cook, Mrs. Scaritt, and liked to display her skill.

"Who is there to bring?"

"The boys and girls you go around with. Who is it you're always fixing up for, evenings?"

"Nobody."

Mrs. Scaritt tried another tack.

"I s'pose this house isn't good enough for 'em? Is that it?"

"Good enough!" Chug laughed rather grimly. "I'd like to know what's the matter with it!"

There was, as a matter of fact, nothing the matter with it. It was as spick and span as paint and polish could make it.

He took to driving in the evening; long drives along the country roads, his cap pulled low over his eyes, the wind blowing fresh in his face. He used to cover mile on mile, sitting slumped low on his spine, his eyes on the road, the engine running sweet and true. Sometimes he took Wanda along, or one of the mill girls. But not often. They were disappointed if you didn't drive with one arm around them. He liked being alone. It soothed him.

It was thus that he first met the Weld girl. The Weld girl was the plain daughter of Widow Weld. The Widow Weld was a musical-comedy sort of widow in French-heeled, patent leather slippers and girlish gowns. When you met her together with her daughter Elizabeth, you were supposed to say, "Not mother and daughter! Surely not! Sisters, of course." Elizabeth was 24 and not a success. At the golf-club dances on Saturday night she would sit, unsought, against the wall while her skittish mother tripped it with the doggish bachelors. Sometimes a man would cross the floor toward her and her heart would give a little leap, but he always asked the girl seated two chairs away. Elizabeth danced much better than her mother—much better than most girls, for that matter. But she was small, and dark, and rather shy, and wore thick glasses that disguised the fineness of her black-lashed gray eyes. Now and then her mother, flushed and laughing, would come up and say, "Is my little girl having a good time?" The Welds had no money, but they belonged to Chippewa's fashionable set. Elizabeth had no illusions about her mother, but she was stubbornly loyal to her. Her manner toward her kittenish parent was rather sternly maternal. But she was the honest sort that congenitally hates sham and pretense. Her strange friendship with Angie Hatton, the lovely and millioned, was the one thing in Elizabeth's life of which her Machivelian mother approved.

"Betty, you practically stuck out your tongue at Mr. Oakley!" This after a dance at which Elizabeth had been paired off, as usual, with the puffy and red-eyed old widower of that name.

"I don't care. His hands are fat and he creaks when he breathes."

"Next to Hatton, he's the richest man in Chippewa. And he likes you."

"He'd better not!" She spat it out, and the gray eyes blazed behind the glasses. "I'd rather be plastered up against the wall all my life than dance with him. Fat!"

When Chug Scaritt first met the Weld girl she was standing out in the middle of the country road at 10:30 p. m., her arms outstretched and the blood running down one cheek. He had been purring along the road toward home, drowsy and lulled by the motion of the April air.

"Honest, I could dance with you all night."

Jammed down the footbreak. Jerked back the emergency. A girl standing in the road. A dark mass in the ditch by the roadside. He was out of his car. He recognized her as the Weld girl.

"S'matter?"

"In the ditch. She's hurt. Quick!"

"Whose car?" Chug was scrambling down the banks.

"Hatton's. Angie Hatton's."

"Gosh!"

Over by the fence, where she had been flung, Angie Hatton was found sitting up, dizzily, and saying, "Betty! Betty!" in what she supposed was a loud cry, but which was really a whisper.

"I'm all right, dear. I'm all right. Oh, Angie, are you"——

She was cut and bruised, and her wrist had been broken. The two girls clung to each other, wordlessly. The thing was miraculous, in view of the car that lay perilously tipped on its fender.

"You're a lucky bunch," said Chug. "Who was driving?"

"I was," said Angie Hatton.

"It wasn't her fault," the Weld girl put in, quickly. "We were coming from Winnebago. She's a wonderful driver. We met a farm wagon coming toward us. One of those big ones. The middle of the road. Perhaps he was asleep. He didn't turn out. We thought he would, of course. At the last minute we had to try for the ditch. It was too steep."

"Anyway, you're nervy kids, both of you. I'll have you home in 20 minutes. We'll have to leave $5000 worth of car in the road till morning. It'll be all right."

He did get them home in 20 minutes and the $5000 worth of car was still lying repentantly in the ditch when morning came. Old Man Hatton himself came into the garage to thank Chug the following day. Chug met him in overalls, smudge-faced as he was. Old Man Hatton put out his hand. Chug grinned and looked at his own grease-grimed paw.

"That's all right," said Old Man Hatton, and grasped it firmly. "Want to thank you."

"That's all right," said Chug. "Didn't do a thing."

"No business driving alone that hour of the night. Girls nowadays"—— He looked around the garage. "Work here, I suppose?"

"Yes, sir."

"If there's anything I can do for you? Over at the mill."

"Guess not," said Chug.

"Treat you right here, do they?"

"Fine."

"Let's see. Who owns this place?"

"I do."

Old Man Hatton's face broke into a sunburst of laugh wrinkles. He threw back his head and went the scale from roar to chuckle. "One on me. Pretty good. Have to tell Angie that one."

Chug walked to the street with him. "Your daughter, she's got a lot of nerve, all right. And that girl with her—Weld. Say, not a whimper out of her, and the blood running down her face. She all right?"

"Cut her head a little. They're both all right. Angie wouldn't even stay in bed. Well, as I say, if there's anything"——

Chug flushed a little. "Tell you what, Mr. Hatton. I'm working on a thing that'll take the whine out of the Daker."

Old Man Hatton owned the Daker motor plant, among other things. The Daker is the best car for the money in the world. Not much for looks, but everything in the engine. And everyone who has ever owned one knows that its only fault is the way its engine moans. Daker owners hate that moan. When you're going right it sounds a pass between a peanut roaster and a banshee with bronchitis. Every engineer in the Daker plant had worked over it.

"Can't be done," said Old Man Hatton.

"Another three months and I'll show you."

"Hope you do, son. Hope you do."

But in another three months Chug Scaritt was one of a million boys destined to take off a pink-striped shirt, a nobby belted suit and a long-visored cap to don a rather bob-tailed brown outfit. It was some 18 months later before he resumed the chromatic clothes with an ardor out of all proportion to their style and cut. But in the interval between doffing pink-striped shirt and donning pink-striped shirt——

No need to describe Camp Sibley, two miles outside Chippewa, and the way it grew miraculously, overnight, into a khaki city. No going into detail concerning the effective combination formed by Chug and a machine gun. These things were important and interesting. But perhaps not more interesting than the seemingly unimportant fact that in July following that April, Chug was dancing blithely and rhythmically with Elizabeth Weld, and saying, "Angie Hatton's a smooth little dancer, all right, but she isn't in it with you."

For Chippewa, somehow, had fused. Chippewa had forgotten sets, sections, cliques, factions and parties, and formed a community. It had, figuratively, wiped out the railroad tracks, together with all artificial social boundaries. Chug Scaritt, in uniform, must be kept happy. He must be furnished with wholesome recreation, fun, amusement, entertainment.

Betty Weld was so popular now that the hostess used to have to say to her, in a tactful aside: "My dear, you've danced three times this evening with the Scaritt boy. You know that's against the rules."

Betty knew it. So did Chug. Betty danced so lightly that Chug could hardly feel her in his arms. He told her that she ran sweet and true like the engine of a high-powered car, and with as little apparent effort. She liked that, and understood.

It was wonderful how she understood. Chug had never known that girls could understand like that. She talked to you straight. Looked at you straight. Was interested in the things that interested you. No waist-squeezing here. No cheap banter. You even forgot she wore glasses.

"I'm going to try to get over."

"Say, you don't want to do that."

"I certainly do. Why not?"

"You're—why, you're too young. You're a girl. You're"——

"I'm as old as you, or almost. They're sending heaps of girls over to work in the canteens, and entertain the boys. If they'll take me. I'll have to lie six months about my age."

Rudie was in charge of the garage now. "That part of it's all right," Chug confided to the Weld girl. "Only thing that worries me is ma. She hasn't peeped, hardly, but I can see she's pretty glum, all right."

"I don't know your mother," said the Weld girl.

"Thasso," absent-mindedly, from Chug.

"I'd—like to."

Chug woke up. "Why, say, that'd be fine! Listen, why don't you come for Sunday dinner? I've got a hunch we'll shove off next week, and this'll be my last meal away from camp. They haven't said so, but I don't know—maybe you wouldn't want to, though. Maybe you—we live the other side of the tracks"——

"I'd love to," said the Weld girl. "If you think your mother would like to have me."

"Would she! And cook! Say!"

The Widow Weld made a frightful fuss. Said that patriotism was all right, but that there were limits. Betty put on her organdie and went.

It began with cream soup and ended with shortcake. Even Chug realized that his mother had outdone herself. After his second helping of shortcake he leaned back and said, "Death, where is thy sting?" But his mother refused to laugh at that. She couldn't resist telling Miss Weld that it was plain food, but that she hoped she'd enjoyed it.

Elizabeth Weld leaned forward. "Mrs. Scaritt, it's the best dinner I've ever eaten."

Mrs. Scaritt flushed a little, but protested, politely: "Oh, now! You folks up in the East End"——

"Not the Welds. Mother and I are as poor as can be. Everybody knows that. We have lots of doilies and silverware on the table, but very little to eat. We never could afford a meal like this. We're sort of crackers-and-tea codfish, really."

"Oh, now, Miss Weld!" Chug's mother was aghast at such frankness. But Chug looked at the girl. She looked at him. They smiled understandingly at each other.

An hour or so later, after Elizabeth had admired the vegetable garden, the hanging flower baskets, the new parlor curtains ("I used to do 'em up for folks in town," said Mrs. Scaritt, "so's Chug could go to high school." And, "I know it. That's what I call splendid," from the girl), she went home, escorted by Chug.

Chug's hunch proved a good one. In a week he was gone. Thirteen months passed before he saw Elizabeth Weld again. When he did, Chippewa had swung back to normal. The railroad tracks were once more boundary lines.

Chug Scaritt went to France to fight. Three months later Elizabeth Weld went to France to dance. They worked hard at their jobs, these two. Perhaps Elizabeth's task was the more trying. She danced indefatigably, tirelessly, magnificently. Miles and miles and miles of dancing. She danced on rough plank floors with cracks an inch wide between the boards. She danced in hospitals, chateaux, canteens, huts; at Bordeaux, Verdun, Tours, Paris. Five girls, often, to 500 boys. Every two weeks she danced out a pair of shoes. Her feet, when she went to bed at night, were throbbing, burning, aching, swollen. No hot water. You let them throb and burn and ache and swell until you fell asleep. She danced with big blond bucks, and with little swarthy doughboys from New York's East Side. She danced with privates, Lieutenants, Captains, and once with a General. But never a dance with Chug.

Once or twice she remembered those far-away Chippewa golf-club dances. She was the girl who used to sit there against the wall! She used to look away with pretended indifference when a man crossed the floor toward her—her heart leaping a little. He would always go to the girl next to her. She would sit there with a set smile on her face, and the taste of ashes in her mouth. And those shoddy tulle evening dresses her mother had made her wear! Girlish, she had called them. A girl in thick-lensed glasses should not wear tulle evening frocks with a girlish note. Elizabeth had always felt comic in them. Yet there she had sat, shrinking lest the odious Oakley, of the fat, white fingers and the wheezy breath, should ask her to dance.

She reflected, humorously, that if the miles of dancing she had done in the past year were placed end to end, as they do it in the almanac's fascinating facts, they must surely reach to Mars and return.

Whenever the hut door opened to admit a tall, graceful, lean, brown figure, her heart would give a little leap and a skip. As the door did this on an average of a thousand times daily her cardiac processes might be said to have been alarmingly accelerated.

Sometimes—though they did not know it—she and Chug were within a half-hour's ride of each other. In all those months they never once met.

Elizabeth Weld came back to Chippewa in June. The First National Bank Building seemed to have shrunk; and she thought her mother looked old in that youthful hat. But she was glad to be home, and said so.

"It has been awful here," said the Widow Weld. "Nothing to do but sew at the Red Cross shop; and no sugar or white bread."

"It must have been," agreed Elizabeth.

"They're giving a dance for you—and dinner—a week from Saturday, at the golf club. In your honor."

"Dance!" Elizabeth closed her eyes faintly. Then: "Who is?"

"Well, Mr. Oakley's really giving it—that is, it was his idea. But the club wanted to tender some fitting"——

"I won't go."

"Oh, yes, you will."

Elizabeth did not argue the point. She had two questions to ask.

"Have the boys come back?"

"What boys?"

"The—the boys."

"Some of them. You know about dear Harry Hatton, of course. Croix de"——

"What have they done with the Khaki Club, where they used to give the dances?"

"Closed, long ago. There was some talk of keeping it open for a community center, or something, but it fell through. Now, Betty, you'll have to have a dress for Saturday night. I wonder if that old chiffon, with a new"——

* * * * * * * * *

Chug Scaritt came home in September. The First National Bank Building seemed, somehow, to have shrunk. And his mother hadn't had all that gray hair when he left. He put eager questions about the ga-

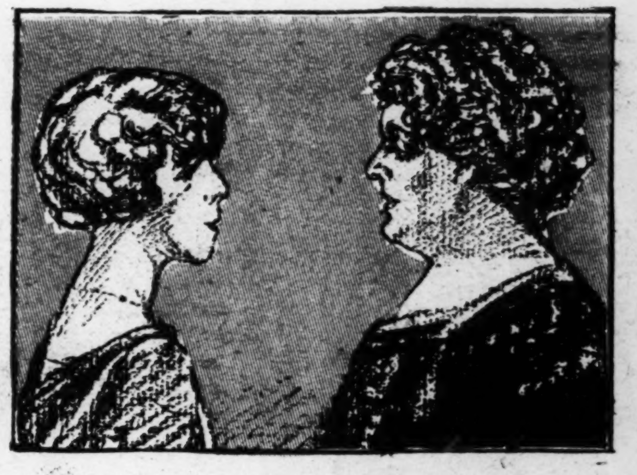
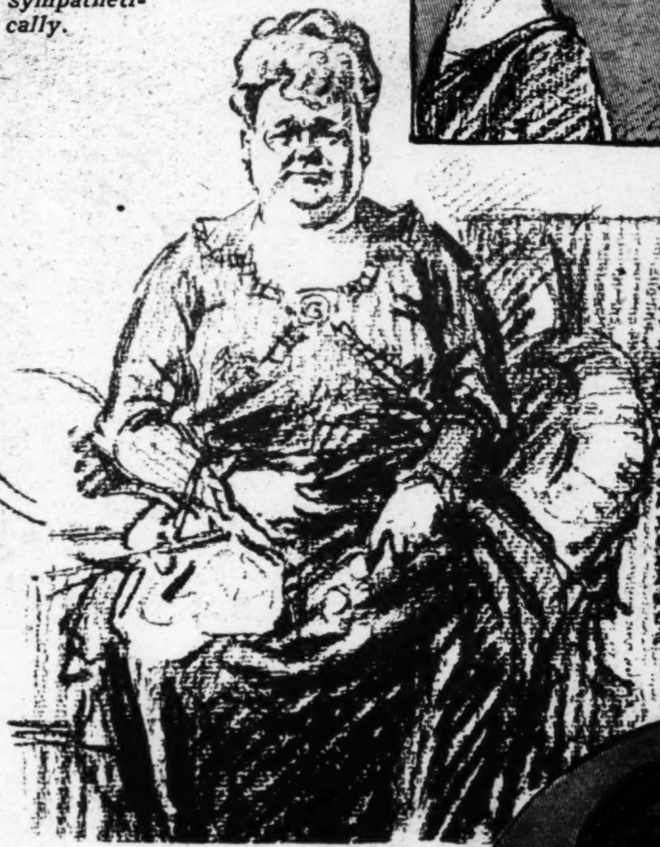
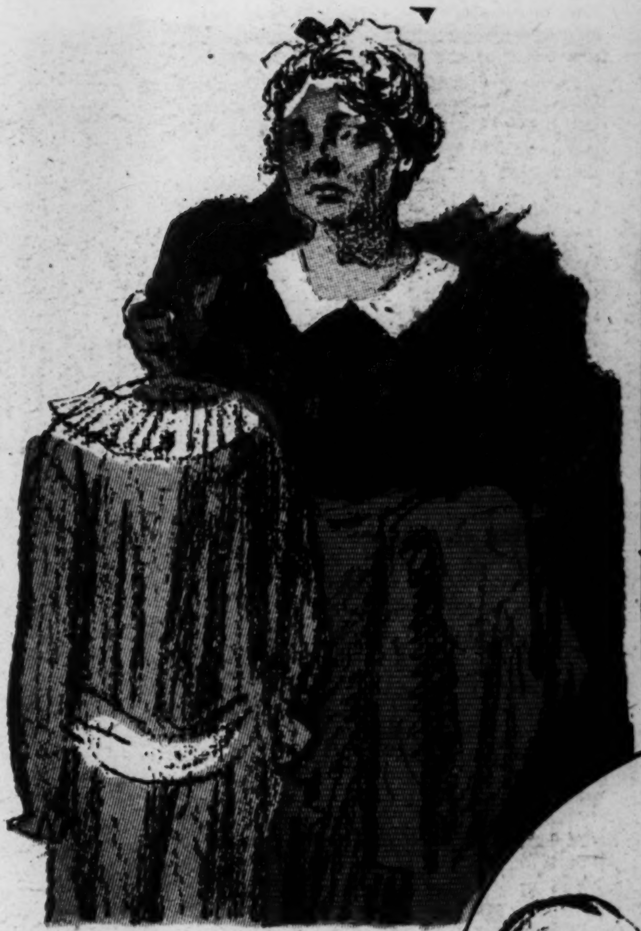
WEEK-ENDING WITH THE VERY

Mrs. de Long is discussing the ever-fresh topic of the rising cost of living. "Why, even the barest necessities, my dear, are almost prohibitive! Take this simple little dress I have on—five hundred dollars, my dear. The cheapest I could get—and I had to have it!" And Mrs. de Long's guest, who makes her own clothes, murmurs sympathetically.



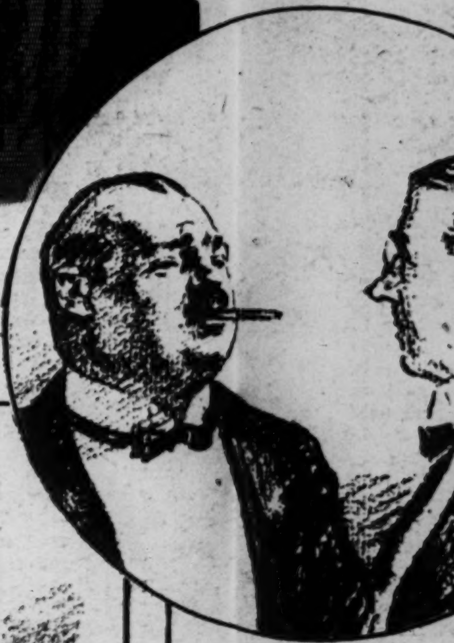


Week-end guests are to be had for the asking, ..rgues Mrs. Harry Ver Plank Plunk, but a high geared car has to be humored. The roads around Chateau Plunk are too frightfully muddy for the Rolls Boyce, and anybody who wants an airing will have to go on foot. Much better to stay indoors, and Mrs. Plunk will treat them to a private view of the Plunk lares and penates, including the latest addition to the picture gallery (it must be a good one if it cost that much money)—and the new set of Chinese porcelains. And maybe as a great treat she will show you the new drainage system that cost even more than the old masters. Nothing delights Mrs. Plunk so much as a household of week-enders going from one room to another with little cries of joy and wonderment as she graciously shows her belongings.

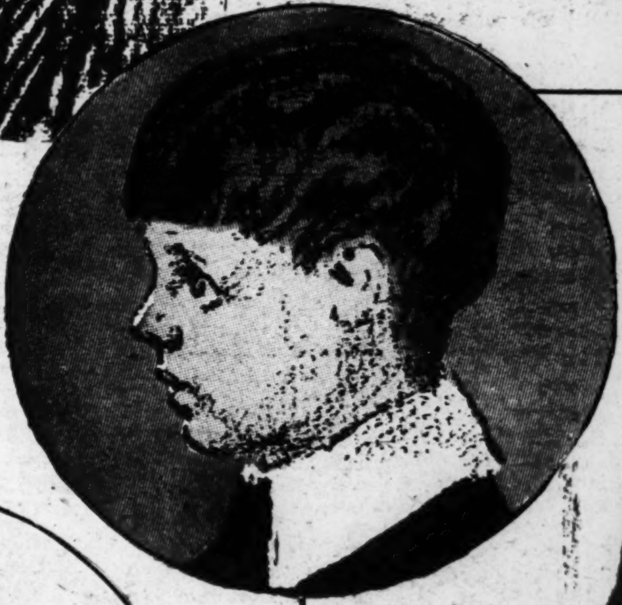


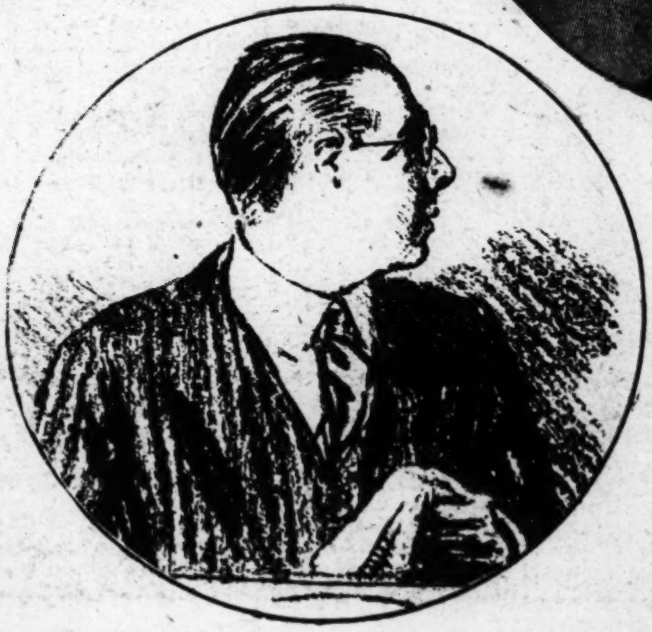
Susan, the ladies' maid, unpacking a "home-made" frock and judging the owner accordingly.

"Yes, sir, what you want to get is a Rolls Boyce; it's by far the most economical car in the long run. And the cheapest, too, you'll find." Mr. Cathel, who has saved up enough to purchase a flivver, if the price will go down a little more, asked his host if he could recommend a cheap car, with doubtful results.

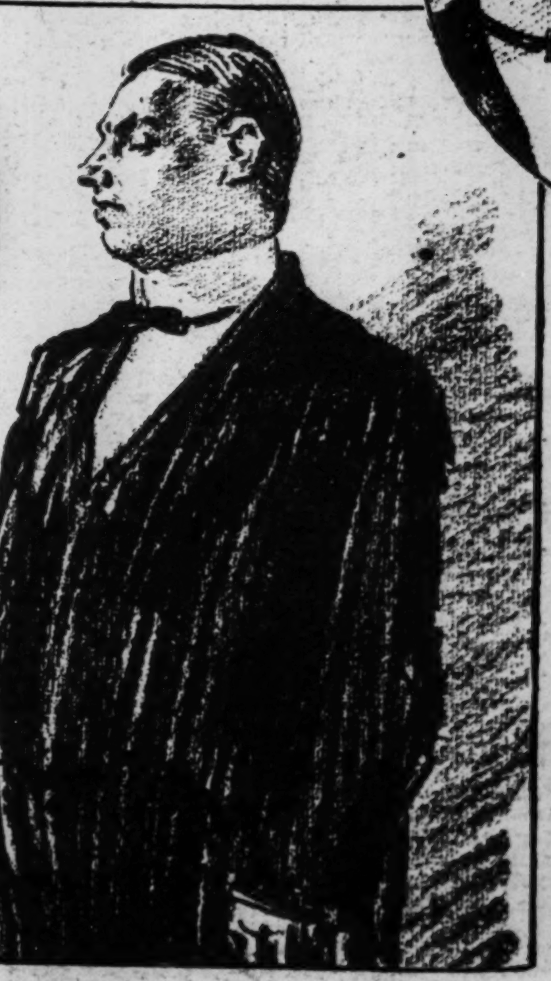


Just as you were going to ask Everett, the son of the household, whether he'd rather be a motorman or a milkman when he grows up, he asks you pointblank if you have any Steel Preferred, and how you liked this year's "Follies." Everett is looked upon with great disfavor by elderly week-end guests.

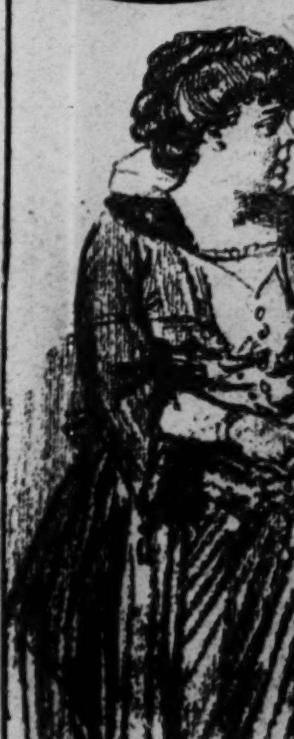




"I'd like to know how much that cost!" The "breakfast any hour you want it" household, showing an early rising guest making the most of a solitary breakfast—he is busy taking in everything in sight.



"Your barth is ready, sir." Now Mr. Smollet is up and part dressed, having taken one perfectly good bath last night, but being a timid soul and very much afraid of Edgar, the second man, he calls out a cheery "Very good, Edgar," and undresses promptly. Mr. Smollet has come from home with a pink pajama coat, blue and white pajama pants, and Edgar has seen. Mr. Smollet doesn't want the estrangement between himself and Edgar to grow.



"Oh, you mustn't think minute!" Nevertheless late for Mr. and Mrs. Fl such a good humor, you

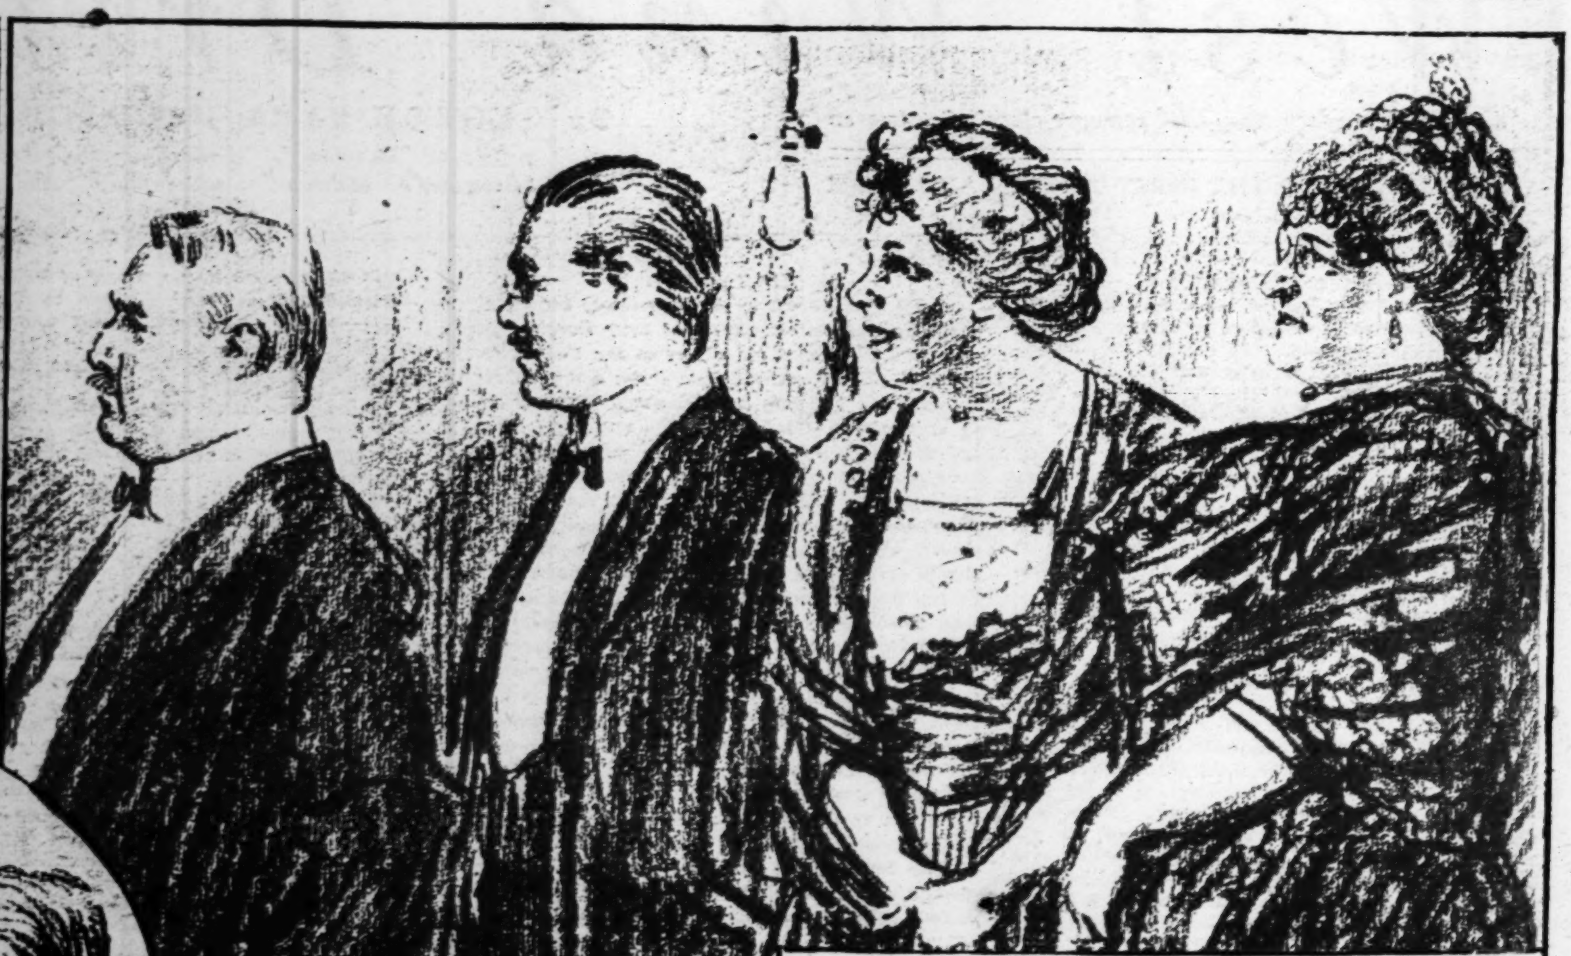
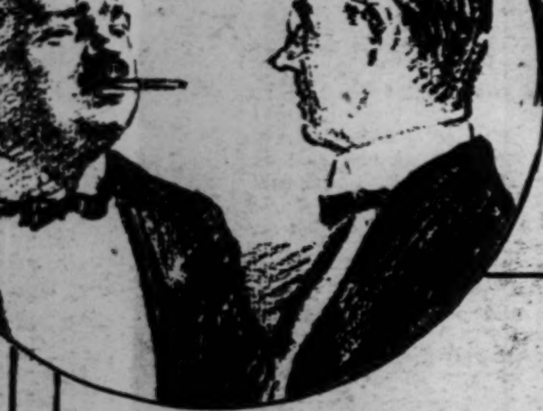
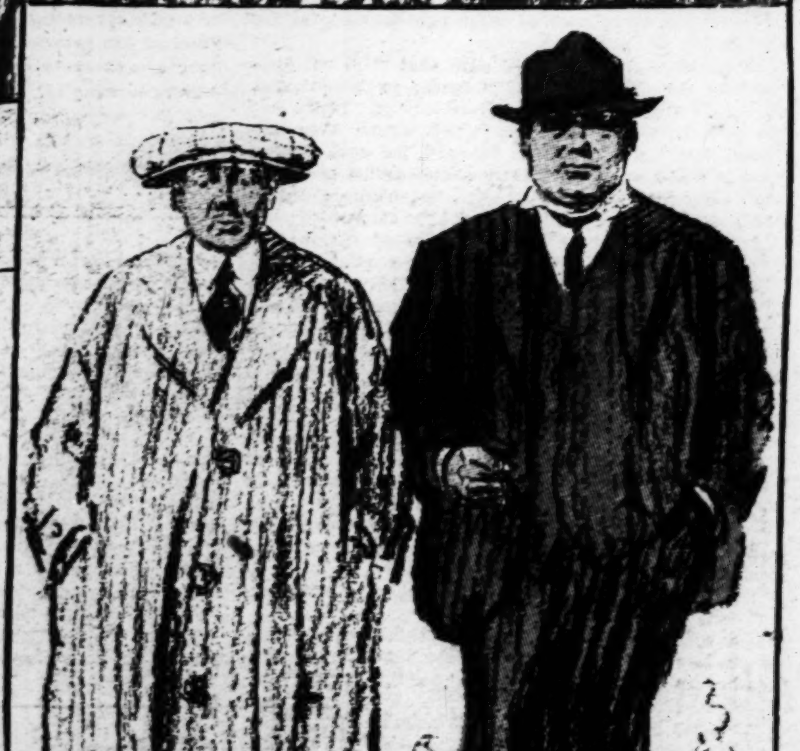
Mr. Cathel, who has saved up enough to purchase a flivver, if the price will go down a little more, asked his host if he could recommend a cheap car, with doubtful results.

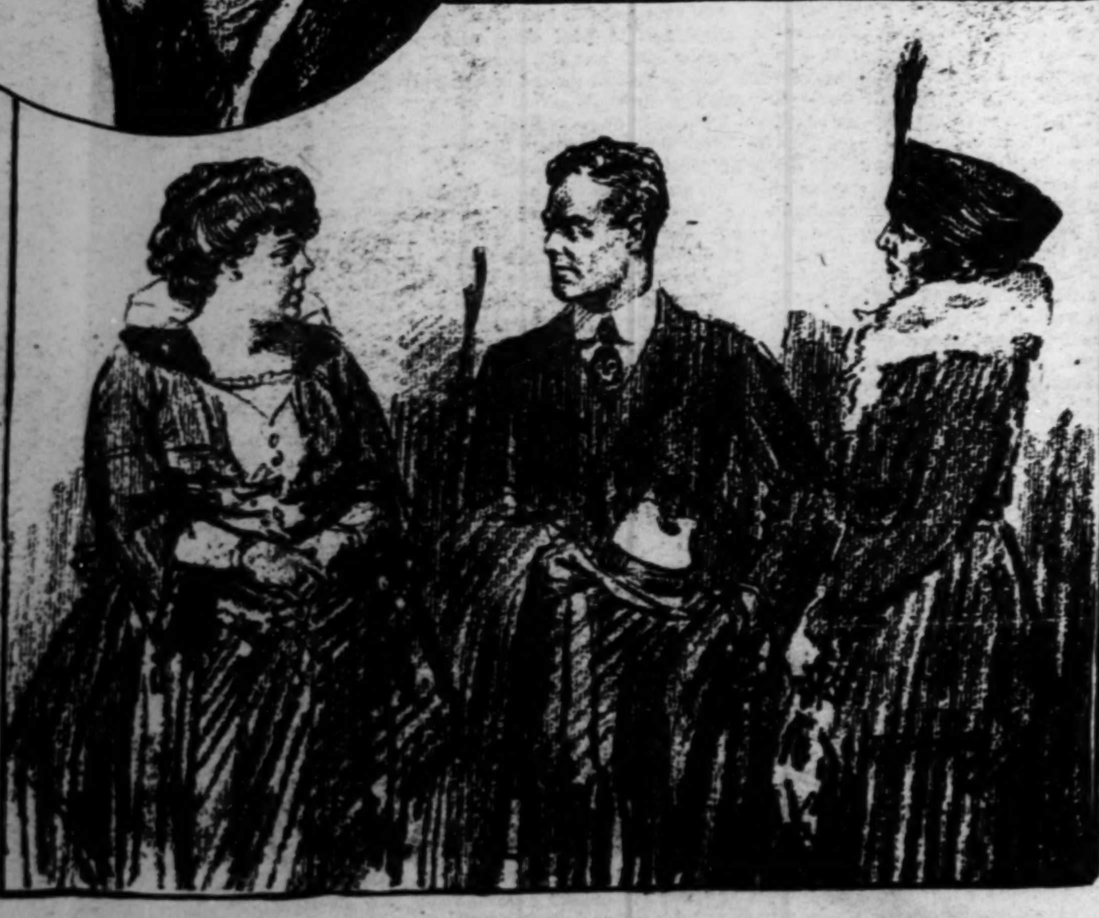


And here a trio of happy guests, headed by Mr. Plunk, are being offered a private inspection of the new heating plant. They are rising to the occasion magnificently, and are giving the little Oh's and Ah's of pleasure as Mr. P. dilates on the self-regulator.





Teddy Wilks made a special effort to procure the proper attire for a week-end visit, and feels slightly disconcerted at the unconventional costume of his host.



"Oh, you mustn't think of giving him anything; no, really, you mustn't think of it for a minute!" Nevertheless Mrs. Jenks' remonstrance trails off into silence before it is too late for Mr. and Mrs. Flashby to hand the servants a little something. "It puts them in such a good humor, you know." And if the servants like the Flashbys, they may be asked out to Jenks Haven again.

THE STORY.

Set helplessly adrift by an explosion of bombs, planted by German agents, the great liner Doraine, bound from South America for a port in the United States, has been all but wrecked by a storm and then driven by wind and tide into a basin which is the center of an uninhabited island. Here the ship runs aground, and the survivors of the disaster set about planning for a future in which the hope of rescue seems hopelessly remote. The dominant figure among them is Algernon Adonis Percival, an American mining engineer, who started the voyage as a stowaway, his money having been stolen at the port of embarkation. In the general bewilderment over the strange situation, Percival's natural qualities of leadership have asserted themselves, bringing him a position of some authority, and, incidentally, the interested regard of two women—Ruth Clinton, an American girl, traveling with her aunt, Mrs. Spofford, and Olga Obosky, a Russian dancer. In directing the work of building huts and exploring the island, Percival clashes with Abel Landover, a famous capitalist, who refuses to submit to discipline and is worsted in a hand-to-hand encounter with the young engineer. This proceeding Ruth resents as needlessly brutal. Being displeased with Percival's conduct, she is the more ready to take sides in a dispute which presently arises over the naming of a baby born to Betty Cruise, the widow of a wireless operator who was killed in the explosion. Percival has proposed the name Doraine, and the men have unanimously approved. The women of the ship declare naming the baby is none of the men's business, and the good-natured argument is threatening to develop into serious friction when the controversy is ended abruptly by the death of Betty Cruise.

ELEVENTH INSTALLMENT.

INSIDE of a fortnight after the events just chronicled the women came ashore to occupy the practically completed huts. The Doraine was deserted except for Capt. Trigger and the half-dozen sailors who remained with him. These sailors were ancient tars whose lives had been spent at sea. They were grizzled, weazened old chaps. One of them, Joe Sands, had been an able seaman for 46 years, and, despite a perpetual crick in the back, he insisted that he was still an abler seaman than 95 per cent of the 30-year-olds who followed the sea for a living. When Capt. Trigger announced his resolve to stay on board, where he belonged, these vainglorious old sea-dogs elected to remain with him to the end.

The exodus of the women was hastened somewhat by the further listing of the Doraine. This was due primarily to the removal of the thousands of tons from the holds, the galley, and the engine room. A more sinister cause for alarm, however, was the action of the greatly lightened vessel when a tidal wave swept into the basin from the north. This came at the fag end of the storm, on the third day, in fact. The Doraine seemed actually to be afloat for a few seconds, heaving, shuddering, groaning. Her bottom, after scraping and grinding and giving up the most unearthly sounds, suddenly appeared to have freed itself completely from the rocks on which it was jammed. She seemed on the point of righting herself. Then she started to roll over on her side! Almost as abruptly she stopped, shivered and then lay still again. But she was lying over at least two degrees farther than before the upheaval.

As the days went by—long days that were not governed by any daylight saving law—the settlement took on the air and life of a sequestered village. There was the general warehouse, from which stores were dispensed sparingly by agents selected for such duties. Women and men went to market and carried home the provender. A fish market was established; woodyards, fruit and vegetable booths, a dispensary and a general store, where leather, cloths of various description, and furs were to be had by requisition.

In speaking of the dispensary, Dr. Cullen complacently announced that the supply of medicine was limited, but that it was nothing to worry about. He declared bluntly, and with a twinkle in his eyes, that people took too much medicine, anyhow.

"Medicine is a luxury," he said. "The more we stuff into people the more they want, and the less they take the sooner they forget they're sick. As your doctor, from this time on, I shall be delighted to set your broken bones, sew up your gashes and all that sort of thing, but it is precious little medicine I'll give you. So don't get sick. The only epidemic we can have here, according to my judgment, is an epidemic of good health. Am I right, gentlemen?"

The two young American doctors put aside their dignity and grinned.

The wines and liquors from the Doraine were brought ashore and locked away in the cellar beneath the warehouse. They could be had only on the doctor's orders.

"It won't hurt any of us to drink nothing but water for a while," said Percival, in discussing the matter; "and the chances are we'll be less likely to hurt each other if we let the grog alone. There'll be no drinking on this island if I can help it. I understand some of you men are planning to put the pulp of the algochicha through a process of fermentation and make chicha by the barrel. Well, if I have anything to say about it, you'll do nothing of the sort. I know that stuff. It's got more murder in it than anything I've ever tackled.

"We'll find it harder to do without tobacco than without booze, and unless we discover something to take its place we'll be smokeless in a few weeks. Prof. Knapcudyke is experimenting with a shrub he has discovered here. He says it may be a fairly good substitute if properly cured. But it won't be tobacco, so I guess we may as well make up our minds to swear off smoking as well as drinking. I hope there's nothing in the saying that the good die young. Because if there is, we're in for an epidemic that will wipe out four-fifths of our population in no time at all. We're going to be so good we'll die like flies."

The weeks wore on and the fields of grain were harvested. The yield was not a heavy one, but it was sufficient to justify the rather haphazard experiments. The 50-odd acres of wheat produced a little over a thousand bushels. The 20-acre oat field had averaged 40 bushels.

Primitive means for grinding the grain had been devised. This first crop was being laboriously crushed between roughly made millstones, but before another harvest came along a mill would be in operation on the banks of Leap Frog River.

Christmas and New Year's day, long since past, had been celebrated in a mild, half-hearted way on board the Doraine. Easter was drawing near, and Ruth Clinton took upon herself the task of arranging special services for the children. She was going ahead with her plans when her aunt, with some bitterness, advised her to consult the "King of Babylon"—(a title surreptitiously accorded Percival by the unforgiving lady)—before committing herself too deeply to the enterprise.

"It would be just like him to cut Easter out of the calendar altogether," said she.

"He cannot possibly have any objection to an Easter service," protested Ruth, her brow puckering.

"There's no telling what he will object to," said Mrs. Spofford.

"He is really quite tenderhearted, and awfully fond of children, you know. I am sure he will be very much pleased with the—besides," she broke off to say, with considerable heat, "Mr. Percival is not as high and mighty as he imagines himself to be. Other people have something to say about the management of this camp. You forget, and so does he, perhaps, that we have a council of 10. I rather fancy"——

"Pooh!" sniffed her aunt. "He is worse than all the Tammany bosses put together. The other men on the council of 10 eat out of his hand, as Abel Landover says. His word is law, or, I should say, his smile is law. All he has to do is to grin, and the argument is over. I've never seen anything like the way people give in when he smiles. It is disgusting."

"Please don't forget, auntie, that he did not smile on Saturday, when Manuel Crust stopped him in front of the meeting house and said he was going to take Sunday off from work up in the woods. He didn't smile then, did he? And there were a dozen men planning to take the day off with Manuel Crust, too."

"I confess I was frightened," admitted Mrs. Spofford, with a slight shudder. "That Manuel Crust is a—a dangerous man. He carries a knife. I saw it."

"Were your sympathies with Manuel Crust or Mr. Percival? Answer, please."

"Naturally, my dear, I—why, of course, they were with Percival. He was one man against a dozen. Besides, he does represent law and order. I have never questioned that, have I?"

"Weren't you a weeny, teeny bit proud of him yesterday, Aunt Julia?"

"Weren't you?" countered the other.

"I could have hugged him," exclaimed Ruth, her eyes sparkling. "I hate him, mind you, but I could have hugged him, just the same."

Mrs. Spofford looked searchingly into the girl's clear, shining eyes.

"I wish I knew just how much you hate him, Ruth."

"Be honest, auntie. What you mean is, how little I hate him, isn't that so?"

"I don't believe you hate him at all."

"Well, the first chance you get, ask him how much I hate him. He will tell you. Now let's talk about Easter Sunday. I don't in the least see why I should go down on my knees to Mr. Percival in order to"——

"Manuel Crust went down on his knees, didn't he?"

"Don't be silly! Manuel Crust was leading a strike. I am arranging a sacred entertainment."

"Still, if I were you, my dear, I would ask him what he thinks about it."

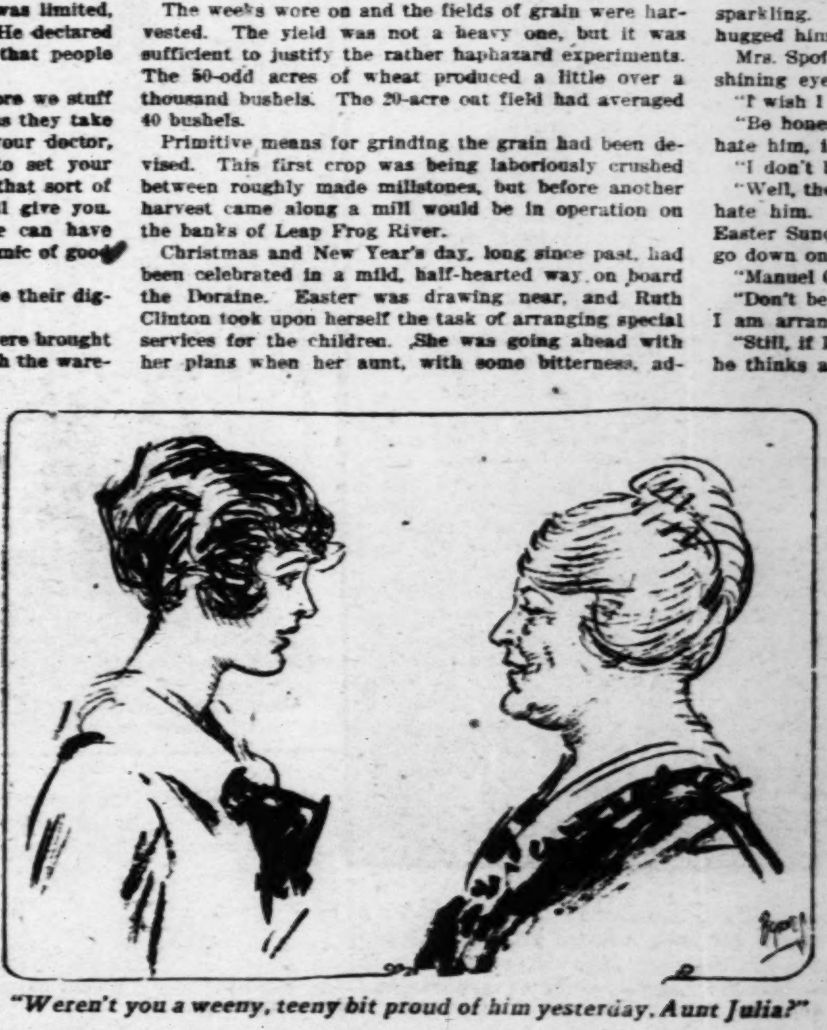
"All right," cried Ruth, "I'll ask him. And, what's more, I shall ask him to sing in the choir. He will love it."

Not only did Percival promise to sing in the choir, but he eagerly offered to help her with the decorations. But when she announced that she was going up into the hills in quest of the little red winter berries that grew in profusion, he flatly put his foot down on the project.

"I don't feel any too sure of Manuel Crust and his gang," said he. "They're in an ugly mood, and they are brutes, Miss Clinton. Don't be alarmed. They're not likely to molest you or anyone else, but I don't believe in taking chances. Just at present they're pretty sore at me, and they're doing all they can to stir up discord. It will work out all right in the end, of course. They may be beasts, but they are not fools."

"Is it true that Manuel Crust claims that every man should have his woman?" she asked steadily.

He was surprised by the frank, unembarrassed question. "Crust is about as vile as they make them, Miss Clinton. Most of these fellows are decent, however"



"Weren't you a weeny, teeny bit proud of him yesterday, Aunt Julia?"

"You may have stood still, Miss Clinton, but I have progressed."

"But you have not answered my question."

"I will answer it by saying that if he has any such notion as that in his mind he will have it taken out of him in short order if he attempts to put it into practice. The women of this island will be protected, Miss Clinton, if we have to kill Manuel Crust and his followers. It is true he has been preaching that sort of gospel among the vicious and ignorant Portuguese and half-castes, but it's all talk. Don't pay any attention to it."

"We can't help being worried. Suppose his following is much larger than you think. They are a rough, lawless crowd, and"——

"Ninety-five per cent of the men here are decent. That's the only comfort I can give you." He smiled his whimsical smile. "I think you will find that you will be courted in the regular, old-fashioned way, and proposed to with as much solemnity and uncertainty as if you were back at home, and it will be left for you to choose your own husband. We have two ministers of the gospel here, you know. I predict some rather violent courtships, and perhaps a few ill-advised marriages, but you may rest assured that no man is going to claim you until you claim him."

He was looking straight into her eyes. She felt the blood mounting to her cheek, and was conscious of a strange, delicious sensation as of peril stealing over her.

"You are most reassuring," she managed to say, scarcely above a whisper, and then paused, expectant.

Afterwards she was shamed by the exquisite pain of anticipation that had coursed through her in that moment of waiting. She never could quite account for the temporary weakness that assailed her and left her mute and helpless under the spell of his eyes. She only knew that she waited, expectant—for something that never came! What she might have said in response, what she might have done if he had uttered the words she was prepared to hear, she did not care to contemplate, even in the privacy of her own thoughts. She only knew that she was ashamed of the thrill that went over her and strangely bitter toward him for being the cause of it. She would not admit to herself that disappointment had anything to do with it, for, she found herself arguing, nothing could have been more distressing than to rebuff him when he seemed so eager to help her in her plans for Easter Sunday.

The fact remains, however, that Percival held his tongue, and she never quite understood why he did.

The time and place of this encounter invited confession. There was a full moon in the heavens, the night was still, the air crisp with the tang of October in the north—and they were alone in the shadow of the "tabernacle." Lights gleamed in the little windows that stretched to the right and left of them. Far off somewhere in the dark an unseen musician was gently thrumming a fandango on his Spanish guitar. She had been on her way home from Careni-Amori's cabin, where she had gained the prima donna's promise to sing, when she saw him, walking slowly across the green. His hands were clasped behind his back, his head was bent. She experienced a sudden rush of pity for him; she knew not why, except that he looked lonely and forgotten. It was she who turned aside from her course and went out across the green to join him.

"You are most reassuring," she had said. The dusky light of the moon fell full upon her upturned face; her shadowy, limpid eyes were looking straight into his; enchantment charged the air with its soft and languorous breath—and yet he looked away!

After a moment he spoke. His voice was steady, and, to her, almost sardonic.

"The day of the cave man is past. Likewise the cannibal. I think I can promise that you will not be beaten nor eaten, but you do run a little risk in being abroad on such a night as this, and alone."

She stiffened. "I don't think there is the slightest danger, Mr. Percival."

"I wasn't thinking of danger," he said. "There is a lot of difference between danger and consequences. You see, you might have been mistaken in your man. I might have turned out to be Manuel Crust."

"I—I—I was sure it was you," she stammered, and wished she had not said it. It was a confession that she knew his figure so well that she could recognize it in the gloom of the night and at a distance that should have rendered him almost invisible.

"Even so, I am Manuel's brother under the skin," he said. "Like Judy O'Grady and the Colonel's lady, you know. However, all's well that ends well, so what's the use of magnifying the peril that stalks through the land?"

"You were brought up on the good, old-fashioned novels, I see. That's the language of heroes, and heroes live only in novels, where they are perfectly safe from harm, thanks to the benevolent author."

"You're right. I was brought up among the old-fashioned heroes. I lived through every adventure they had, I longed for every girl they loved, I envied everything they did, and I dreamed the most beautiful dreams about prowess and virtue and love. I rather fancy I'm a better man for having been a swashbuckling boy. I acquired the generous habit of falling in love with every heroine I read about, and in my thoughts I performed even more prodigious deeds of valor in her behalf than the hero to whom she inevitably plighted her troth in the final chapter. In real life, however, I've never been in a position to do anything more heroic than give up my seat in trolley cars to ladies of all ages—by the way, have you never longed desperately to be a heroine?"

"Of course I have," she cried, smiling in spite of herself. Her eyes were sparkling again, for the danger was past. "And I have loved a hundred heroes, madly." She hesitated and then went on impulsively: "We haven't been very friendly, Mr. Percival. Perhaps I am to blame. In any case, you have been very generous and forbearing. That is more than I have been. I never thought I could bring myself to the point of saying this to you. Can't we be friends again?"

He was silent for a moment.

"Do you mean to go back to where we were before—well, before we clashed?"

"Yes, if you will put it in that way."

"I can't go back to that stage," he said, shaking his head. "You may have stood still, Miss Clinton, but I have progressed."

"I don't know what you mean."

"You will, after you reflect a while," he said.

She drew back, in a sudden panic.

"I—at least, Mr. Percival, I have done my part. If you do not care to be friends, I—I have nothing more to say. We must go on just as we were, and I am sorry. I have done my part."

"I do not want to distress you," he said, huskily. "If I were to tell you why it is best for us to go on as we are, you would lose what little faith you may still have in me. I have not always been able to conceal my feelings. You do not care as I do, and I have been pretty much of a rotter in showing you just how I feel from time to time, an ordinary bounder, and God knows I hate the word, so there's nothing more I can say without distressing and offending you. I want you to feel perfectly secure so far as I am concerned. We are out here alone in the night. If I were to let go of myself now and say what I want to say to you—well, you would be frightened and hurt, and God knows I wouldn't hurt you for the world. I hope you understand, Miss Clinton."

She had had time to fortify herself.

"Yes, I understand," she said, but not without a strange wonder filling her mind.

He was fair, and yet he was baffling. She had not expected this rare trait in him. Men she had known were not like this. The men who loved her—and they had been many—were impetuous and insistent, demanding much and offering everything—vainglorious warriors, who counted confidently on easy conquest. She had come in contact with but one class of men—the spoiled, cocksure sons of the rich, who love in haste and have it over with while there is yet time to love again. She caught herself guiltily wondering how many men of her acquaintance would have allowed this engaging opportunity to pass without making the most of it! And why should this man be different from the others? She experienced a sharp feeling of irritation, and out of that sprang a willful desire to hurt him because he was different. So she lifted her chin, and looking straight into his eyes, said: "I understand perfectly. You prefer that I should not put you in the class with Manuel Crust."

"I'm not quite certain that Manuel's way of handling women isn't the best, after all," he said, musingly. "Ride over 'em rough shod, trample them under foot, kick them to one side and then ask them whether they love you or not. If they say they don't, all you have to do is to behave like a gentleman and leave them alone."

She laughed. "But suppose they were to say they did love you, what then?"

"That, I understand, is what they generally do say—and it causes a great deal of trouble for the unfortunate gentleman."

"Are you never in earnest, Mr. Percival?"

"I was very much in earnest a moment ago. You knew how much in earnest I was or you wouldn't have said that nasty thing about Manuel Crust."

"I am sorry I said it," she cried. "It was uncalled for, and I was deliberately trying to be mean."

"I knew it," he said quietly. "I don't think any the worse of you for it. A woman plays fair until you get her in a corner, and then she plays fairer than ever to make up for what she did when cornered. Am I not right?"

She did not reply. She was staring past him, down the line of huts. The door of Olga Obosky's cabin had opened and closed, projecting for an instant an oblong block of light into the darkness. The figure of a woman, emerging into the full light of the moon, had caught Ruth's attention. Percival turned quickly. Together they watched the figure move quickly across the green toward them. Suddenly it stopped, and then after a moment, whirled and made off down the line of cabins, soon to be swallowed up by the gloom.

"Were you expecting someone?" inquired Ruth, icily.

He was still looking intently into the far-reaching gloom. Neither had spoken for many seconds. He started, and looked searchingly into her eyes.

"That was Madam Obosky," he said.

"I know. I recognized her," said she evenly.

"And you believe she was coming out here to meet me—isn't that so?"

She drew herself up. "I shall have to say good-night, Mr. Percival. No! It is not necessary for you to walk home with me."

He placed himself in front of her. "Would you mind answering my question?"

"Yes," she flashed, "I think she was coming out here to meet you. Permit me to pass, please."

He stood aside. "Good-night, Miss Clinton."

He watched her until the door of her cabin swung open, and he smiled as she stood revealed for an instant in the square of light, for she had obeyed the impulse to glance over her shoulder.

She was angry, hurt, disgusted, as she slammed the door behind her.

"Where have you been?" cried out an accusing voice, and Ruth's gaze fell upon the figure in one of the deck chairs beside the fire. "I have been waiting for you for"——

"How long have you been here?" cried the girl, stock-still and staring.

"If Mrs. Spofford had not been so entertaining, I should say for hours and hours," said Mme. Obosky.

"As a matter of fact," said Mrs. Spofford from her side of the fireplace, "it hasn't been more than an hour. Mme. Obosky came soon after you went out, dear."

"But—but I saw you just now coming out of your cabin," cried Ruth, blankly. She had a queer sensation as of the floor giving way beneath her.

"You saw—oh, now I understand," cried the Russian, with a laugh. "Zose girls of mine! Zey—they are like so many grandmothers. They will not go to bed until zey know I am safely tucked in myself. Alas, Mrs. Spofford, zose girls do not trust me, I fear. If I go out at night alone zey instantly put their heads

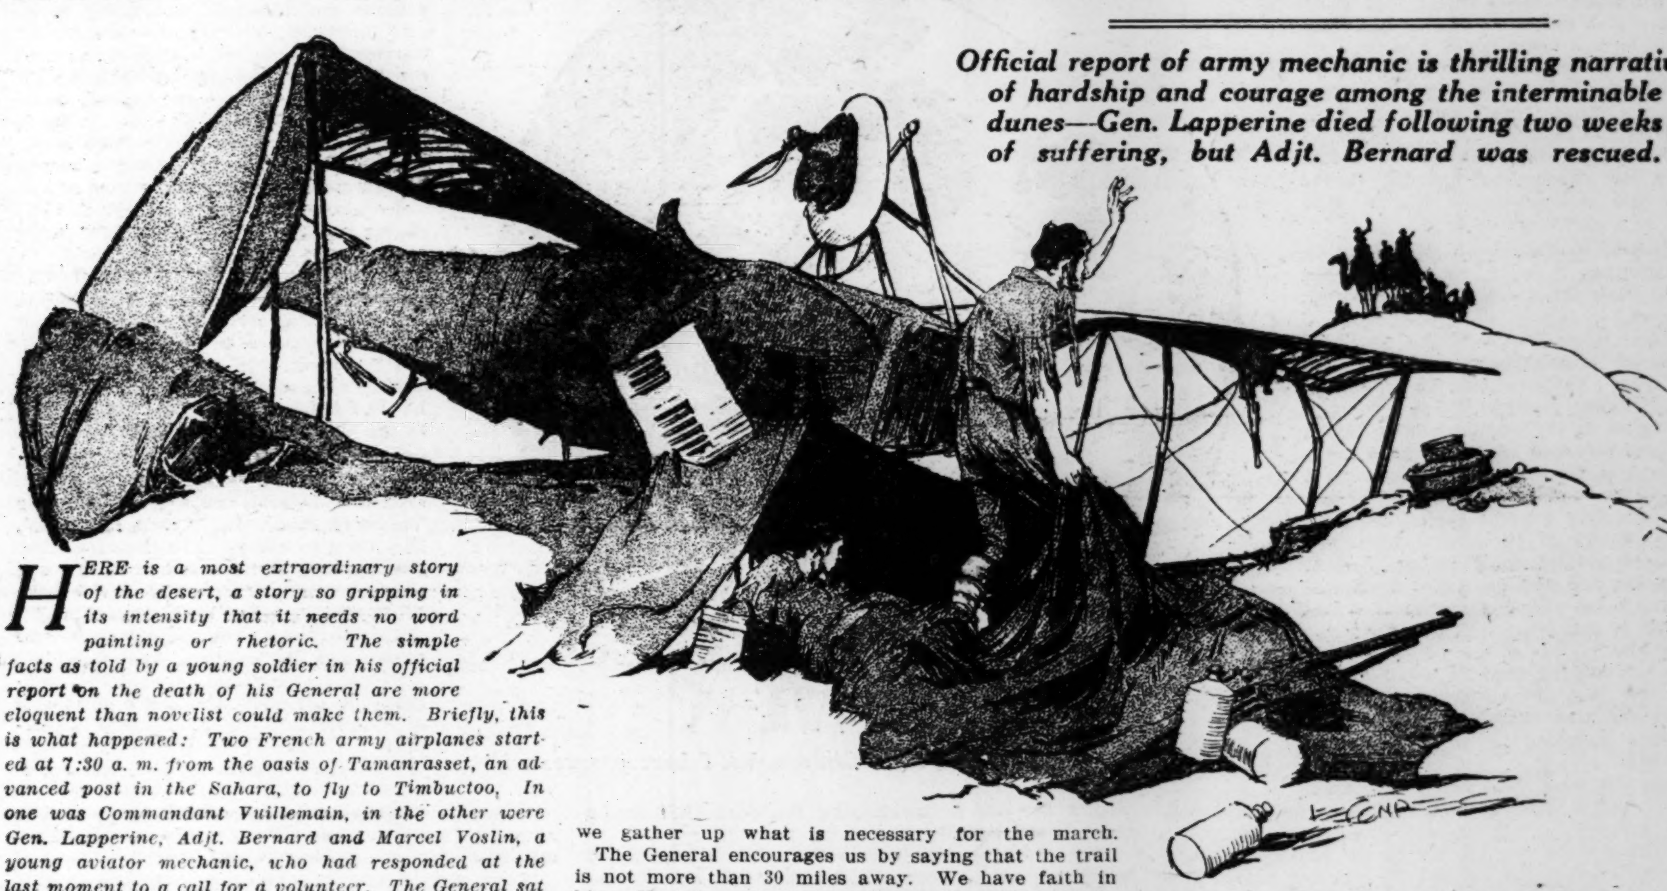
Facing Death on the Desert For 24 Days After French Plane Crashed Over Sahara

Official report of army mechanic is thrilling narrative of hardship and courage among the interminable dunes—Gen. Lapperine died following two weeks of suffering, but Adjt. Bernard was rescued.



HERE is a most extraordinary story of the desert, a story so gripping in its intensity that it needs no word painting or rhetoric. The simple facts as told by a young soldier in his official report on the death of his General are more eloquent than novelist could make them. Briefly, this is what happened: Two French army airplanes started at 7:30 a. m. from the oasis of Tamanrasset, an advanced post in the Sahara, to fly to Timbuctoo. In one was Commandant Vuillemain, in the other were Gen. Lapperine, Adjt. Bernard and Marcel Voslin, a young aviator mechanic, who had responded at the last moment to a call for a volunteer. The General sat on Voslin's knees, while Bernard piloted the machine. The Touaregs, led by their grand chief, Moussa ag Amastane, gave them a great sendoff. Vuillemain's machine reached Timbuctoo in safety, but for 24 days nothing was heard of the other and its three passengers. It was not until March 14 that Bernard and Voslin were found by accident, at death's door, from hunger, thirst and heat, alone in the desert beside the wreck of their airplane and near the shallow grave in which they had buried the General. Voslin's official report is here translated from L'Illustration, very slightly abridged.

By Marcel Voslin.

FOR several minutes we fly over Tamanrasset and the Hoggar region. Then we fly off to the south-southwest, following as well as possible the camel route towards Tin Rharo. After about 12 miles the trail is no longer visible, so we follow a valley that seems to lead in the right direction. Commandant Vuillemain leads, but at a lower altitude. Adjt. Bernard follows, as had been agreed.

As Tin Zaubaten is not in sight at 11:30, and we have gas for only 20 minutes more of flight, we decided to send out a wireless signal of distress and to make a landing. The ground is a vast plain, very soft, and there are sand dunes to the north. At more than 6000 feet altitude the wind is ahead; Bernard steers to the south and descends. When not more than 75 feet above the ground a sudden puff of wind turns the machine on its left wing, and, to make matters worse, the surface wind is from the north, which makes us capsize violently.

The General, not being tied, is caught between me and the wind shield and wounded; his left collarbone is broken, one side is crushed, and he feels internal contusions. Bernard crawls out unscathed from under the machine; as for me, my head is in the sand, but I get out only slightly bruised.

After the first shock we are disagreeably amazed to observe that Vuillemain's machine has vanished. Our first care is to gather up the flasks of reserve water; they are mixed up with the boxes of preserved foods, tools, etc., all half-buried in the sand.

It is about noon and as the temperature is about 113 degrees Fahrenheit, we lie down in the shade of the wings of the overturned airplane. Gen. Lapperine says to us: "My sons, we will try to eat; then we will rest until tomorrow morning, when we will consult as to what to do."

About 4 o'clock the temperature is more bearable; we undress and lie on the sand, which is beginning to get cool. In the night breeze we sleep very lightly and our rest is broken by long intervals of meditation.

In the morning (Feb. 19), before dawn, the General decides that we must start in a northwesterly direction in the hope of finding the Adrar Mountains. So we gather up what is necessary for the march.

The General encourages us by saying that the trail is not more than 30 miles away. We have faith in him. He tells us to make a fire to draw attention to us. We find some dry herbage with which we make a tiny flame for 10 minutes. In the night we fire three shots, but in vain, for no one hears.

Very early on the twentieth we resume our march in the same direction; we hope that before the day is over we shall see the Adrar Mountains. The soft sand makes walking painful; our feet sink several inches at every step. From time to time the General peers ahead through his field glasses; but he discovers nothing, always the immensity!

About 11 o'clock we camp as before until 4 p. m. The straps of the bottles and boxes have made our shoulders sore, walking has tired us out, and we go on with difficulty.

At sunset we reach a little hill, when we had hoped to see the longed-for mountains, but there is nothing except a region of sand dunes stretching for many miles ahead. We feel our morale distinctly lowered. Gen. Lapperine tries by consulting his map to find out just where we are. We watch him closely and read in his face that we are lost. He says we shall return tomorrow morning to our airplane and it is important that we reach it quickly. At the foot of the dune we lie waiting for daylight.

On Feb. 21, at the usual hour, we retrace our steps in the direction of the airplane we had left two days ago. The General is very feeble. We make brief marches of one hour.

At 11 o'clock the usual halt. Our throats are so dry we cannot eat, so we wait till evening. We start again at 4 and walk till 7, when we can go no further, as we cannot see our footprints. After eating our daily box of food, we arrange our flasks in a line to mark the direction for the morrow, for we shall start before dawn.

On the twenty-second, about 4 a. m. we have difficulty in rising; the General cannot get up by himself, so we help him and are off. We rest every half hour. We see the airplane and are happy, although we know that safety does not await us there. It seems near, but we walk a long time. When 400 yards away, our chief can go no further.

"My lads," he says, "go ahead and arrange your affairs, you can come back for me later." But Bernard supports him and at 9:30 we reach our goal. It has not moved; the upper planes, which are on the ground, are already buried in sand. We look to see if the radiator has leaked and are happy to find that it is still nearly full.

On the twenty-third nothing new. On the twenty-fourth I fire nine shots at a gazelle, but miss. Clouds give us false hope, making us imagine we see people. On the twenty-fifth we see another gazelle. Bernard tries vainly to shoot it.

In the night of Feb. 25-26 the General calls Bernard several times to know if he is asleep. Nothing new on the twenty-sixth, but we still hope to be found. On the twenty-seventh a great sandstorm compels us to hide under cover. The General's condition worries us. In the night I dream we are saved.

March 1.—For 12 days we have seen no one, friend or enemy. Deep despair is marked on our faces. We spend our time dismounting the instruments. March 2 passes like the other days; in the evening we make a fire of a pneumatic tire and a motor blanket. Evening and morning we fire three cartridges; but it is useless, for there is none to hear.

On the third a violent sandstorm. The General is breathing with great difficulty. Bernard studies the map and calculates that we are about 80 miles from Tin Zaubaten. We make a plan to walk towards that post in the hope of finding help on the way; our chief grants us permission, but says: "My sons, if you go over there you will certainly never return."

On the fourth we expect him to die any moment; he can scarcely swallow his chocolate. We see birds of prey hovering over us and hear them croak; they know that there will be death among us very soon.

On the fifth the General says to us: "My sons, it was believed that I knew the desert; but nobody knows it. I am to blame for your misfortune. I have crossed the Sahara 10 times and I shall stay on it the eleventh." We think he will hold out two or three days more. Towards noon he calls for water. I lift him while Bernard gives it to him. I lay him down again. About 3 I am talking with Bernard when he says: "It is strange the General does not ask for a drink." Bernard touches his leg. He has died without uttering a groan.

On the sixth we think of burying him, but we still hope to be found. The heat is greater than ever. We have rations of water for six days and food for four. Bernard and I agree to drink two and one-half quarts of water a day. Bernard has a terrible thirst, but he will not touch his ration of water; instead he breaks the compass and drinks the liquid therein. This evening our dinner is one biscuit apiece. In the night we shiver and in the morning we are stiff with cold. At sunset we go to a rut cut by a wheel of the airplane in landing, and by digging with our hands enlarge it to make a hole in which our great chief may rest. When we have buried him we place a wheel over him and fix a kepi on top. After paying him our last homage we retire in sadness. The grave is 10 meters from our machine.

On the eighth we collect our personal effects, in two little packages, write the address of our families and add money for postage. We place the bundles in the General's valise and put this in the fusilage. On the ninth we awake without hope. Bernard writes on the back of an envelope: "The General is buried 10 yards in front of the airplane; a kepi and a wheel are on his grave. Please open this valise; in it are letters and packages to be sent to our families. Everything is ready. There is money for postage. Thanks for whoever will do it. March 9, 10 a. m. Think we can hold out till the twelfth. Bernard."

On the tenth we do not move; we spend the day lying,

"Spirit Land" Amazingly Reported - -

A. "Anti-Christ used the Kaiser to bring about the war. The Kaiser was his instrument. It wasn't his fault. He was simply possessed."

Q. "Do you mean by 'Anti-Christ' what we would call evil spirits?"

A. "Satan." * * *

(There was some conversation about pet "spirit" dogs. Louise told us that Chico and Biddy—two canine pets of her childhood—were both with her, and that for collars they wore symbolic colors, blue and pink, about their necks.)

Q. "Are the great poems of literature remembered where you are—Gray's 'Elegy,' for instance?"

A. "Yes."

Q. "Have you greater poems over there?"

A. "Yes."

Q. "Did Shakspeare write his plays solely from his own mind or was he inspired?"

A. "Inspired."

Q. "You don't think Bacon had anything to do with it?"

A. "No." * * *

(Then came a curious demonstration. The whining of a dog was heard outside and the nose of a great Russian wolfhound belonging to a neighbor appeared, pressed against the screen wire.)

Q. "What was that?"

A. "Rex."

Q. "Do you want Rex to come in?"

A. "Yes." (The door was opened and the dog rushed in; then he turned around madly, burst open the door and hurried away.)

Q. "What did you think of Rex's behavior?"

A. "He saw me."

Q. "Did that scare him?"

A. "Yes."

Q. "Are dogs able to see spirits and we not?"

A. "Yes."

Q. "Do horses have clairvoyance, too?"

A. "Yes." (Rex came back to the door and whined. Louise wrote, "Let him in." He went over to the couch and began to bark, then whined again. Suddenly he quieted down. The indicator wrote: "I am petting him." The dog lay down on the floor silent; after a moment he raised his head and looked as if at some small object near him. Then he turned, lifting his head higher, as if toward another object, a little taller. The pencil wrote: "He sees Biddy and Chico." Rex gave a sudden yelp and drew back.)

Q. "Did Biddy bite him?"

A. "No—touched him." * * *

(Louise mentioned a new book that D.—a woman friend of the family—had started reading the night before, and said she liked it.)

Q. "When did you read it?"

A. "Last night, while you were all asleep."

Q. "How does it end?"

A. "With a poem." (D. had not got to the end of the book, and I had not even seen the volume. We looked it up, and sure enough it does end with a poem.) * *

Q. "Can you give us your opinion as to whether the treaty of peace and the League of Nations should be ratified by the Senate?" (The indicator immediately went to a neutral point.)

Q. "Ought there to be reservations?"

A. "Yes" (slowly). * * *

Q. "Tell us, do you ever see anything of Cleopatra, Ptolemy, Caesar, Mark Antony or any of those ancient worthies?"

A. "No; they have gone on." * * *

Q. "Do you have houses to live in?"

A. "Not exactly. You have heard the expression, 'building castles in the air.' That, in effect, is what we do—and live in them."

Q. "But what do spirits really do? What is their course after quitting the body?"

A. "Do you mean good spirits, or bad?"

A. "Good spirits."

A. "A good spirit, the minute the body of that spirit has died, is met by sweet spirits from this plane—mostly those who were friends on earth. On arriving in the other world, if that spirit has not looked forward in life and has made no attempt to prepare for a future life, it does not at first realize where it is; it believes it is still on earth. Afterwards, some good spirit may come along and help this new spirit—bring it up higher. From then on we fulfill our daily duties, the same as you do, until we are enlightened and prepared for heaven. Then the gates open, and the spirit passes on to eternal happiness."

Q. "And the bad spirits?"

A. "They are earthbound, and may have to stay on earth thousands of years, wandering about, unseen and unrecognized by those who were dear to them in their former life. If a spirit has been terribly, unforgivably bad during its life in the flesh, it is unhappy forever."

The narrative tells how Violet began to fall into trances, of which she had no memory when she awakened, and during which possession of her body was taken by Louise and other spirits. One of these, a man, insisted on smoking a cigarette with Violet's lips; while another, after begging and obtaining a drink of brandy, was found also to have sneaked a huge swig of claret. Other phantoms said sorrowfully that he had been a mighty toper on earth, and that, when once more in possession of a human body, his old vice reasserted itself. These smokes and drinks had no apparent effect on Violet when she came to, according to Crockett.

Then the assembly of spirits informed the Crocketts that Violet's mediumistic powers would be extinguished forever at the end of the summer. "After this she will be able to use the communication board and to tip tables, but she will not be able to go into a trance." Violet, her vacation finished, returned to her grandparents in the West; since then Crockett and his wife say they have had occasional and simple messages from Louise by way of the ouija.

General Obregon, President-Elect of Mexico

Obregon took up the banner of revolt for Carranza against Huerta. Up and down the west coast he went, taking towns and capturing cities, until, Huerta having fled through Puerto Rico to Spain, this Mexican mick rolled into Mexico City at the head of 40,000 armed men, most of them mounted and all well trained and under complete control. In the Federal capital, Obregon's manner, which had been conciliatory in the provinces, changed. He found the capital filled with enemies of Carranza, and his first step was to cut off all food supplies until Mexico City had furnished 50,000 men, with complete equipment, for his army. He got the men and the arms. Imbued with the idea of "Mexico for the Mexicans"—which idea, by the way, he still holds firmly—Obregon levied a 30,000,000 pesos tax on all foreign firms and merchants, and collected it until strong protests from Great Britain forced Washington to bring pressure to bear which resulted in the withdrawal of the order.

Francisco Villa rose against Carranza. Obregon, with 15,000 soldiers, rushed northward, and, at the battles of Celaya and Leon, literally cut Villa's army of about 40,000 to bits. More than 4000 Villistas were slaughtered at the battle of Celaya, where Obregon introduced barbed-wire entanglements, trenches and massed machine-gun fire for the first time into Mexican military affairs. These are the first, last and only times that Villa has been defeated by any armed force. At Leon, Obregon lost his right arm by an exploding shrapnel.

Through all his campaigns, through his rise from humble farmer to President of Mexico, a thread of romance runs in Obregon's life. He fought at first for love of country, but later he sought power and office for love of a woman—a beautiful daughter of Sonora. When Obregon first met Maria Tapia, she was a nurse in the Madero Federal army, but when he attempted to follow her to the Tapia family home in Sonora he was unceremoniously sent on his way by Don Felix Tapia, her father, who, with a million-peso dower for this, his favorite daughter, could not brook her marriage to a soldier. A Cientifico and a supporter of Porfirio Diaz, a conservative of all conservatives, was the Senor Tapia, and he could not realize that the Madero uprising, with its following of tilma-clad, guaracha-shod peons ever could come to anything more than the adobe wall and the firing squad.

Yet, through all the next five years of his fighting, Obregon protected the ancestral home of that Cientifico whom he had selected to be his father-in-law, when all the other haciendas of the rich in Northern Mexico were being given to the flames by the looting hordes of the revolutionary armies. Then, wearing the insignia of a General of Division, the highest rank obtainable in the Mexican Federal armies, Obregon rapped with his gold-handled saber on the portales of the Hacienda Tapia, and demanded of the aged Don Felix that he deliver over his daughter.

Don Felix delivered, and stood at rigid attention while he did it. The priest and the whole countryside were called in, and, behind a wall of 20,000 Federal soldiers, the nuptial revelries lasted nine days. Then Father Tapia paid the bill, and it was not small.

On the ninth day Gen. Alvaro Obregon and his Senora Maria Tapia de Obregon disappeared, to reappear again at El Paso, some days later, for a one-day honeymoon in the United States. Somewhere on that automobile ride across the Sonora desert, the raven-haired Maria set her Irishman on the road to ambition, made him Minister of War, in fact, and old Don Venus, teetering on the edge of the chair which had once held Porfirio Diaz, put the presidential sanction on Maria's choice.

Obregon it was who met Frederick Funston and Hugh Scott, Generals of the American army, at El Paso. Sent northward by Carranza to show the Gringos the strength of the Mexican army, Obregon like his ancestor who was confronted by Iturbide at Cordoba, swiftly sensed the power back of the men he met at El Paso, and, then and there, became the ally and friend of the United States.

The conference accomplished nothing for Carranza, but it raised Alvaro Obregon high in the opinion of the men of the American army, and Obregon saw to it that this favorable impression was conveyed to all Mexico through the Mexican press. From "Mexico for the Mexicans," Obregon changed his slogan to "America for the Americans," and, all during the great war, he fought tooth and nail against the pro-German influences which kept Carranza so obdurate toward all things American.

Facing Death on the Desert For 24 Days

searching the horizon with our eyes; but nothing—always nothing. We have nothing more to eat. Bernard absorbs some glycerine out of the General's valise; I eat some toothpaste, which gives a terrible thirst. We also devour some tablets of jubol (a medicine).

On the eleventh we are hoping for death. For two days we have had no food and we have reduced our water ration to three quarts between the two of us.

On the twelfth Bernard proposes to me that we end it. I do my best to raise his morale; but he points out that if we do not forestall death, our end will be terrible—to which I agree. At 9 p. m., by the light of a pocket electric lamp, he writes these words: "This evening, March 12, at 9 o'clock, having no more food or water, we give ourselves voluntarily to death, failing to understand why in 23 days we have not been found, if we have been sought for. Good-by to this world." I, however, persuade him to give up his idea; and on the morning of the thirteenth we are still of this world. In the evening the idea of suicide returns more imperiously than ever to Bernard. We drink our last quart of water. It is decided. Bernard takes two safety razor blades from the valise. Each of us takes one and we place before us two recipients into which we shall let our blood flow, so that we can drink it and thus assuage our thirst a last time before dying.

Bernard, more courageous than I, begins first. With the razor blade he cuts a deep gash in the artery of his left wrist. I have already begun to cut myself also, when I notice that Bernard's blood does not flow, so I stop. My poor comrade is very angry. He throws the blade far away, and I do the same. He says: "We will end it tomorrow morning with the last three cartridges."

On the fourteenth, very early, a heavy sandstorm rises. Bernard says: "Are we ready? We will end it at noon. I have still some hope." At this I pull the blanket over us. We do not sleep, but we think.

Scarcely an hour elapses when I hear the bray of a camel. I don't know what extraordinary strength comes to me, but I throw off the blanket, grab the carbine and fire the last three cartridges into the air.

We have been heard and we are saved.

I see two Meharis coming at a gallop, and I dash towards them. I run scarcely 20 yards when I collapse before my savior, who is already offering me a cup of water.

A few minutes later we see Lieut. Pruvost, galloping up with Quartermaster Sergeant Moncassin and Brigadier Delplanque. They at once put up a tent and lavish attention upon us.

Our emotion is so great that we can scarcely talk. Thirty-four times that day we drank well-sweetened tea and two great bowls of soup. Joy prevented us from sleeping and all night I talked with Bernard.

The following day, March 15, Lieut. Pruvost explained that we had been found accidentally, for he had not come out looking for us. He was on his way to Agades for supplies, and he supposed that we had been found 10 days earlier, a report to this effect having been current at Tamanrasset.

After a 12-days' march they reached the oasis of Tamaya, where they stayed for 12 days more to recuperate. Fifteen days more and they were at Tamanrasset, where they buried the body of Gen. Lapperine beside that of Father de Foucault, who also had found death in the desert.

FIXING THE FURNACE

I set my business affairs in order, informed the office that I wouldn't be down for a couple of weeks, bought a suit of soot-proof overalls and went to work.

My first surprise came when, on trying to take the smoke pipe down, it crumbled in my hands like pie crust. The chemicals that had been discarded by the smoke as it passed up the flue had eaten the insides out. Every section collapsed at the gentlest touch.

I went to the telephone and ordered more, and discovered that it would probably be Christmas before I could get any.

However, after I had examined the rest of the job I concluded it would be Christmas before I got the furnace cleaned, so I stopped worrying about that.

It was necessary, of course, to operate on the furnace in order to remove what was the matter with it, which was chiefly soot.

Theoretically all you have to do to get into the vitals of a furnace is to unscrew a lot of bolts, which will loosen the jacket.

But the bolts wouldn't unscrew. They were rusted solid.

Being mechanical, I thought of the cold chisel, and after two mornings, and a palm full of blisters, I got the bolts out.

As the last one jingled on the floor the main body of the furnace gave a dismal groan and separated like the one-hoss shay, scattering its debris in fragments on the floor, while a dark-brown, sooty snow sifted over them.

The soot was out, at all events. All that remained now was to get some furnace bolts, reassemble the fragments and put on the jacket.

But there appeared to be a shortage of furnace bolts around those parts. I finally got seven that were too large and eight that were too small, and a couple that fitted, and went to work with them.

But getting the furnace parts together was like putting a picture puzzle together, except that with a picture puzzle you have the picture to guide you.

I tried it for three days, and then, at my earnest supplication, the furnace man came up and showed me where they belonged. That was all he had time to do, and he charged me $5 for doing it.

In two days more I had her pretty well together, with the usual half-dozen parts left over. There were holes that would let the smoke and gas out here and there, but I stopped them up with boiler makers' putty and called it a job.

The next day, as I was sitting down wondering how to build a fire without a smoke pipe, and trying to figure out a scheme to shoot the smoke out of the cellar window, the furnace man drove up.

He came to tell me that he would have the pipe sooner than I expected—in about three weeks, in fact.

Then he gave the furnace a critical examination, which he hadn't done before.

The result was that he condemned the furnace, absolutely and forever, and after he proved to me that practically every part was cracked, I agreed with him that it would have to be discarded.

I wish he'd told me before. It would have saved my time, my hands, my temper, and probably my soul.

THE DANCING GIRLS - -

rage. Rudie had made out all right, hadn't he? Good old scout.

"The boys down at the garage are giving some kind of a party for you. Old Rudie was telling me about it. I've got a grand supper for you tonight, Chug."

"Where's this party? I don't want any party."

"Woodmen's Hall, I think they said. There was some girl called up yesterday. Wanda, her name sounded like. I couldn't"——

"Don't they give dances any more at the Soldiers' Club down on Elm?"

"Oh, that's closed, long. There was some talk of using it for what they called a community club. The Eagle was boosting for a big new place. What they called a Community Memorial Center. But I don't know. It kind of fell through, I guess."

"I won't go," said Chug, suddenly.

"Go where, Chug?"

But instead of answering, Chug put his second question

"Have you seen—is that—I wonder if that Weld girl's back?"

"My, yes. Papers were full of it. Old Oakley gave her a big dance, and all, at the Country Club. They say"——

A week later, his arm about Wanda's big, yielding waist, he was dancing at Woodmen's Hall. There was about her a cheap, heavy scent. She had on a georgette blouse and high-heeled shoes. She clung to Chug and smiled up at him. Wanda had bad teeth—yellow, with a sort of scum over them.

"I sure was lonesome for you, Chug. You're some dancer, I'll say. Honest, I could dance with you all night." A little pressure of her arm.

Somewhere in the recesses of his brain a memory cell broke. Dimly he heard himself say, "Oh, they all tell me that."

"Crazy about yourself, ain't you!"

"Not as crazy as I am about you," with tardy gallantry.

Then, suddenly, Chug stopped dancing. He stopped and stepped back from Wanda's arms. Bergstrom's two-piece orchestra was in the throes of its jazziest fox-trot number. Chug stood there a moment, in the center of the floor, staring at Wanda's face that was staring back at him in vacuous surprise. He turned, without a word, and crossed the crowded floor, bumping couples blindly as he went. And so down the rickety wooden stairs, into the street, and out into the decent darkness of Chippewa's night.

Rheumatism

A Remarkable Home Treatment Given by One Who Had It

In the Spring of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Sub-acute Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a treatment that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with rheumatism, some of them 70 to 80 years old, and results were the same as in my own case.

I want every sufferer from such forms of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of getting rid of your rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write today.

Deafness Treatment

FREE

Did you realize that the earlier Catarrhal Deafness is treated, the better? This does not mean that long standing cases are hopeless, but generally speaking, the sooner the Catarrhal inflammation is healed, the easier the process. In Catarrhal Deafness, the Eustachian Tubes are gradually closed through inflammation causing the membranes to become thickened and Catarrhal deposits to form which may extend their entire length. The quicker you find a Method which will take into consideration these causes and processes, the sooner you may reasonably expect to be in possession of keen quick hearing.

Ear Specialist Sproule has established and founded a Method of Home Treatment for Catarrhal Deafness which if your ears trouble you ever so slightly, you really should see. In order that you may have this opportunity Specialist Sproule offers a 4-day sample treatment Free of Charge.

Sit down now and drop a post card or note to Ear Specialist Sproule, 303 Trade Building, Boston, asking for a Deafness Sample Treatment Free. By return mail you will be sent one. Cured His RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure, without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen Carpenter, 695g Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured — you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

WEST WIND DRIFT

together and shake zem all at the same time. So that is what has happened, Miss Clinton. One of them—Alma, I suspect, because she had a sister who—yes, it would be Alma, I am sure; in any case, one of zem comes out to get me, so like a policeman. But still I do not understand something. I have told them I was coming here to see you. If it was one of my girls, why has she not come?"

Ruth had turned away, ostensibly to pull down the little window shade, but really to send a swift, searching glance out across the green.

"She went the other way," she replied rather breathlessly.

Olga sprang to her feet. "Now, what is zat little fool up to?" she cried angrily. "If I catch her running to meet men at zis hour of"——

Ruth interrupted her. "She started in this direction, but when she saw us she turned and went the other way. I was talking to Mr. Percival out near the meeting house. About the Easter services, auntie," she made haste to say as Mrs. Spofford looked up in surprise.

Olga was looking at her fixedly, an odd expression in her eyes, her lips slightly parted.

"He has promised to help me. He is delighted to sing in the choir. Madame Careni-Amori will sing two solos. She promises to make Joseppi sing one or two. I—I was discussing the arrangements with Mr. Percival."

"Now I understand," said Olga, gayly, but with the odd, inquiring look still in her eyes. "Alma thought it was I. I have zem very well trained, those girls. She sees me with a man—zip! She runs the other way as fast as she can! That is the height of propriety, is it not, Mrs. Spofford?"

"I do not quite understand what you mean, Mme. Obosky."

"Why did he say it was you?" cried Ruth, hot with chagrin.

Olga shrugged her shoulders. "He is so very amiable," said she. "I dare say he thought it would please you."

Ruth bit her lip. There was no mistaking the challenge in the Russian's remark, however careless it may have sounded.

"I came to see you about Mr. Percivail's birthday," said Olga, abruptly changing the subject. "Someone has suggested zat we all join in giving him a grand, great big celebration. Bonfires, fireworks, a banquet, with speeches, and all zat kind of thing. What do you think, eh?"

"He wouldn't like it at all," said Ruth promptly. "Moreover, why should we celebrate his birthday? He doesn't deserve it any more than scores of others"——

"Oh, then we must drop it altogether," broke in Olga, rather plaintively. "I thought everyone would be in favor of it. But, of course, if there is the slightest opposition"——

"I do not oppose it," said Ruth, coldly. "Pray do not let me upset your plans."

"It is not my plan. Zat nice, sarcastic Mr. Fitts, and Mr. Malone, and Capt. Trigger, they have proposed it, Miss Clinton, not I. But men never quite get over being boys. They do not stop to question whether a thing is right or wrong. I dare say, after they have thought a little longer over it, they will agree with you that it is foolish to be so enthusiastic about this fellow Percivail—and the whole project will dissolve into thin air."

Her hand was on the latch. She met Ruth's harrassed, unhappy gaze with her indolent, almost insolent, smile. Suddenly the American girl snatched up her jacket and the little fur collar she had thrown across a chair in the corner.

"If you don't mind, I will walk a part of the way home with you," she said.

Olga opened the door and looked out. "Thank you, I am not afraid. Pray do not think of it—I cannot permit you to come. It is late, and the moon is under the clouds. Good-night; good-night, Mrs. Spofford."

She quickly closed the door behind her and sped off down the line of now lightless cabins. A man stepped out of the black shadow beyond the second cabin and stood in her path. She did not pause, but walked swiftly, fearlessly up to him, her heart quickening under the thrill of exultation. He was waiting for her! He had been waiting for her all the long evening. The time had come!

The night was dark now; a strong wind had sprung up to drive the black and storm-laden clouds across the moonlit sky. She held out her hands with a little moan of ecstasy, and then she was in his strong, crushing arms, pressed fiercely to his breast. "God, can I believe, is it true? You have come—you have come of your own free will—you are here in my arms!" His hot lips found hers in a wild, passionate kiss. "Speak to me! Tell me it is all real—that I am not dreaming. Oh, Ruth, Ruth, darling!"

Her body stiffened. A convulsive shudder raced over her, and then, for an instant, she was limp and heavy in his embrace. Then suddenly she threw her arms about his neck and kissed him, furiously, savagely, again and again, breaking awa, at last with a low, suffocating laugh.

"Now, now," she cried, "now, what are you going to do with me?"

He lifted his head with a jerk, peering into her face, slow to realize the incredible mistake he had made. He was still under the spell of the riotous passion that her response had aroused. It had rushed over him like a great, resistless wave—hot, delicious, tingling. He had been amazed, bewildered, by the unbelievable craving—furious and uncontrolled—which she revealed in her momentary surrender to the elemental. The truth began to dawn upon him even before she spoke. Could this be Ruth—could this woman who clung to him and smothered him with kisses be the pure, high-minded girl he had grown to love and revere? She spoke, and then he knew that the consuming fire in his blood was unholy, as unholy as the spark that set it ablaze.

"Damn you!" he whispered, hoarsely. But he did not put her away from him. The lure of the flesh was upon him. It was stronger than his will, stronger than his love.

For months this woman had beguiled him. There had been times when he was compelled to fight himself, times when he asked: Why not?

She was alluring, she was frankly a sensualist; but she was patient, she was crafty. She knew that he was honorably in love with another, but she was not deterred by that, nor by the conviction that her conquest, if she prevailed, would be transitory. She had a code of her own. It included an uncertain element of honor, fixed rather rigidly upon what she would have called constancy. Singleness of purpose was her notion of morality. She would not have believed herself to be a bad woman, any more than she would have looked upon her lover as a bad man. To her, morality in its accepted sense signified no more than the suppression of human emotions and human sensations. As a matter of fact, she considered herself a good woman, if for no other reason than that she steadfastly had repelled the munificent appeals of countless infatuated men. Treasure had been laid at her feet, only to be kicked aside. She plainly spoke of herself as a pearl without price. She was content to possess, but not be possessed. That was what she called self-respect. She was pagan, but she was her own idol. She worshiped herself. She would never permit her idol to be desecrated.

All this Percival knew, or rather sensed. He was not above feeling a queer sort of respect and admiration for her. She was not without integrity.

He had reached the pinnacle of happiness in believing that the girl he loved was in his arms. He was blind and deaf with ecstasy. The awakening was a shock. His senses reeled for an instant, and then Ruth Clinton went out of his thoughts entirely!

"Damn you!" he cried again, and drew her close. "She hates me—she will always hate me," he was mumbling. "Why should I care? Why should I refuse to take"—— Her lips were on his again, warm, firm, voluptuous, drawing his heart's blood with the resistless power of a magnet.

They did not hear the rapid approach of footsteps—heavy, swift, as of one running. A dark, panting figure raced past them, and then another but a few paces behind.

Percival's senses were released. They cast off the bewitching bonds. His head went up again. In a flash his brain was clear. His arms were still about her, she was still lying close against him, but the current of passion that consumed both of them was checked.

"What was that?" she gasped, as if coming out of a dream.

He released her and sprang out into the path to peer fruitlessly after the unseen runners. The sound of footsteps was rapidly diminishing.

They were suddenly aware of women's voices far away to the right. They were indistinct, but there was a sinister significance in the ever-increasing volume.

"There's trouble out there," said Percival. "Something wrong. Come—come along! You must get indoors at once." He grasped her arm and started rapidly off in the direction of her cabin. She stumbled at first, but quickly fell into stride with him. Men's shouts were now added to the clamor.

"I know—I know," she cried in his ear. "It has happened, just as I said it would. Some of these men are beasts."

"Then there's hell to pay," he grated.

They reached her cabin just as the door was thrown open. The three startled coryphees filled the entrance. Recognition was followed by a clatter of agitated voices. Olga was fairly dragged into the cabin.

"Bolt your door," was Percival's command as he turned away.

She stood in the door for a moment, looking after him. He passed out of the radius of light. The chorus of voices grew louder down the way, like the make-believe mob in the theater.

Then she closed the door slowly, reluctantly. The three girls watched her in silence as she stood for many seconds with her hand on the knob, her eyes tightly shut.

She turned and faced them. There was a wry smile on her lips as she shrugged her shoulders, and spread out her hands in a gesture of resignation.

"Yes, bolt the door," she said. As Alma hesitated, her eyes grew hard, her voice imperative. "Do you know of any reason why you should not do as both Mr. Percivail and I have commanded?"

"No—no, madame," cried Alma hastily.

As the heavy wooden bolt fell into place, Olga again shrugged her shoulders and threw herself into a chair in front of the fireplace. (Copyright.)

New Building in St. Louis Being "Shot" From Cement Gun weight of such buildings is carried by the beam construction."

One curious feature of using the cement gun is the unexpected shock of electricity occasionally received by the man who handles the nozzle. It is explained as "static" electricity, and on one occasion knocked Lester Pruitt, nozzle man shown in the picture, to the ground.

This electricity is made by the rapid friction of material in the lower lock of the gun, and conducted by the hose to the nozzle. If the nozzle man steps onto a piece of metal, or into water, he gets a shock which may be fairly stiff. Frank Stewart, labor foreman, also told of receiving a shock from the nozz while "shooting" cement.

The side of the wall against which the wooden form rested is afterwards given a light coating from the nozzle, to smooth the surface and thus improve the general appearance.

Cloth Made From Artificial Wool

A PROCESS has been discovered by which artificial wool can be produced from cotton waste, says the South African Journal of Industries. The basis of the artificial wool is cellulose acetate, and the material is claimed to be an even better insulator against heat and cold than ordinary wool, that it will wear well, and that it can be successfully dyed any desired color.

The new material has been subjected to severe tests by the textile department of the Leeds (England) University, where it has been successfully converted into fabrics. Cloth was woven with a mixture consisting half of artificial wool and half of natural wool, the product resembling tweed. The cloth, according to Prof. A. F. Barker, head of the department concerned, would prove serviceable for men's wear.

La-may Face Powder is Guaranteed Pure and Harmless.

Pure face powder cannot injure the most delicate baby skin. The trouble is, too many powders are made in the old-fashioned way, with rice powder. Rice powder is starchy, and, like bread flour, it is quickly turned into a gluey paste by the moisture of the skin. This paste clogs the cuticle, swells in the pores, causing enlarged pores, blackheads and pimples. A specialist makes a harmless powder by using an ingredient doctors prescribe to heal the skin. Every time you apply this improved powder you give your complexion a real beauty treatment. There is a thousand-dollar guarantee of purity printed on the box, certifying it does not contain white lead, rice powder or any harmful substance. This guaranteed pure powder is called La-may (French, Poudre L'Ame). Because it is pure and harmless La-may is now used by over a million American women! It is now the most popular complexion powder sold in New York. Women who have used even the most expensive face powder say they can not buy a better powder than La-may anywhere at any price. There is also a La-may Talcum that prevents the souring of perspiration.
